Wide Import Power Vested In Wallace By President

Much of Authority Formerly Exercised By Jesse Jones Given To Vice President

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday vested in the Board of Economic Warfare primary and final responsibility for the procurement of vital raw materials from abroad and gave it the policy-making, procedural and even financing authority in this field.

The development, which emerged in the form of an executive order, was a climax to weeks of behind-the-scenes battling between the board, headed by Vice President Henry A. Wallace, and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and its subsidiaries, headed by Commerce Secretary Jesse H. Jones.

Followed BEW Complaint

Wallace's agency had complained bitterly of the "banker caution" which allegedly characterized the RFC's hesitant moves in the foreign economic field. It was charged that Jones, haggling over price or delaying action for other reasons, had stymied BEW recommendations to buy and stockpile raw materials or to take them out of possible Axis grasp.

Before yesterday's order, the RFC corporations held sole power over the funds necessary to buy up foreign supplies. Most of this was exercised by the Defense Supplies, Metals Reserve and Rubber Reserve Corporations, RFC subsidiaries. BEW could function only in an advisory capacity, without power of the purse.

The order, however, pointedly instructed BEW to determine the policies, plans and procedures "of the several Federal agencies" involved in accumulation of foreign supplies, "including the financing thereof."

Jones's Power Curtailed

It also ordered Wallace's agency to "direct, with the approval of the President, the creation, organization and financing of a corporation or corporations," under the RFC law which will obtain the materials and provide for their disposition.

This last provision was seen as directed against complaints that the RFC had disbursed materials gathered from abroad to American industry without regard to stockpile needs or future military requirements.

The transference of powers from the Defense Supplies Corporation and other Jones agencies to the BEW constitutes the third development in less than two months divesting Jones of authority he formerly exercised.

At the end of February his lending power for housing was removed from the Federal Loan Agency, headed by Jones, and placed in a consolidated Federal housing agency. More recently, at the in-

McNutt Reported Favored as Head Of Manpower Unit

Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt was reported last night to be the nominee of the President's unofficial advisory committee for chairman of the proposed manpower mobilization board. The committee vote was understood to be unanimous.

Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas is chairman of the committee. Serving with him are Budget Director Harold D. Smith, Anna Rosenberg, New York regional director of the Social Security Board, and New York Justice Samuel Rosenman.

It was also reported that the committee recommended that the board be set up as an independent agency. The President apparently will follow the recommendations.

Mexico Renews Drive on Aliens

Mexico City, April 14 (AP).—A recent series of breakdowns, fires and explosions in Mexico's south gulf oil fields has led to a redoubled drive against Germans, Japanese and Italians still in that area.

Informants at the interior ministry, which is directing the cleanup, said there were about 250 Axis aliens in the oil district around Minatitlan, Puerto Mexico and Agua Dulce.

Washington Vanishes, Blackout a Success

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Washington seemed to disappear from the face of the earth at 10:27 o'clock last night when a blast of sirens signaled the beginning of the Capital area's first full dress air raid test.

Even the outlines of darkened buildings downtown were hardly discernable a moment after "Washington Red" at the communications center set off the alarm.

As far as blacking out is concerned, Washington is "able to take care of itself," defense officials declared immediately following the metropolitan area's first total test.

Chief complaint against the rehearsal, in which 75,000 civilian members of the protective services participated, was that it was "ragged around the edges at the beginning. Traffic and park lights went off at 10:22 p. m. and the street lights five minutes later, with traffic chugging to a stop somewhere in between.

The sirens came in with a scattered effect, so that windows were blacked out unevenly as the sounds reached various areas. Previous tests have been cleaner cut at their beginnings because they were set for a definite time and were not dependent upon siren signals.

Neither crime nor accident had been reported to Chief of Police Maj. Ed Kelly early today after the 15-minute blackout was over. "We had a total of 4135 regular and auxiliary police on duty and they haven't turned up a thing," Maj. Kelly declared.

Groups of citizens gathered in doorways to watch the stilled and blacked-out city, which seemed to disappear before their eyes and reappear in soft outline against the night-blue sky as they grew accustomed to the absence of light.

So dark was it that lighted cigarettes could be seen across Pennsylvania Avenue at Fourteenth Street and so silent that trains coming into Union Station could be heard plainly in downtown blocks near the Treasury Building. Lights on emergency vehicles threw great

Byrd Charges Slowdowns on Navy Contracts

8 Vital War Plants Affected, He Says; Knox Admits Some

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Slowdowns ranging from 25 to 90 per cent of production in eight vital war plants having Navy contracts last night were charged by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia.

Byrd quoted a Navy Department report for the week ended April 11, made available to him by the office of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

"We can tolerate no longer any interruption in our war production whether caused by labor or management or administrative inefficiency," the Virginian said.

"If anything is more reprehensible than a complete halt of work on war production, it must be a deliberate slowdown."

His statement followed testimony by Secretary of the Navy Knox before the House Naval Affairs committee in favor of freezing open and closed shop relationships in war industries for the duration.

Knox opposed suspension of the 40-hour week, on the grounds that it would result "only in confusion and delay" but he advocated freezing of the present union status, voluntarily if possible.

Limit on Profits

If existing closed and open shop relationships cannot be frozen in from 30 to 60 days by voluntary agreements, the Secretary of the Navy said he would like to see legislation to that end.

He testified he "would not be surprised" if the President shortly laid down a national labor policy by proclamation.

Hearings on the modified Smith-Vinson bill were closed after the Secretary's testimony, and Chairman Carl Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, indicated the committee will vote on a bill later this week.

The revised bill limits profits to $8000 plus 8 per cent on war contracts over $100,000, freezes open and closed shop conditions and extends the present 40-hour week to 48 hours

GE-Krupp Pact Helped Hitler, Inquiry Told

Lewin Says General Electric Patent Pool Hurt U. S. War Effort

By Felix Cotten
International News Service Staff Writer

Patent agreements between the General Electric Co. and Germany's famed Krupp Co. that helped arm Hitler's war machine, was blamed by a Justice Department official yesterday for American unpreparedness in the vital field of machine tools.

John Henry Lewin, of the Justice Department's antitrust division, told the Senate Patents Committee that General Electric, in cooperation with Krupp, had retarded production and sale in the United States of cemented tungsten carbide, a material of extraordinary efficiency in some machine tools, because of its extreme hardness.

At the same time, Lewin said, cemented tungsten carbide was "produced abundantly" in Germany. Lewin, in effect, quoted a statement from Fortune magazine of last January saying that this comparatively new substance had given Germany a great military advantage over the democracies, and had been "a decisive factor in the building of the arsenal of Hitlerism."

General Electric's purpose, Lewin declared, was to gain complete control over the American market for cemented tungsten carbide. Krupp

Ruffing Shuts Out Nats Before 31,000

Yankee Pitcher Charles (Red) Ruffing, burly right-hander, dominated the opening game at Griffith Stadium yesterday with a three-hit performance that brought the New York Club a 7-0 victory over the Nats.

Vice President Wallace, occupying the Presidential Box in the absence of President Roosevelt, pitched out the first ball with a capacity crowd of 31,000 in attendance, and Ruffing took charge thereafter.

NYA Defended

President Challenges Critics To Point Out Nondefense Cuts

President Roosevelt yesterday again challenged critics of nondefense expenditures to tell him where he could make cuts in the Federal budget. At the same time, he defended the National Youth Administration, saying that it was training 400,00 young people to work in war industries.

The question of nondefense expenditures was brought up at the Chief Executive's press conference.

In reply he told of correspondence he had had with a well-known economist, a friend of his. This economist had urged cuts in nondefense spending. The President said he advised the economist to go through the budget, and then report specifically where cuts could be made.

The economist, the President said, wrote him three letters, but each time begged the question.

A reporter reminded Mr. Roosevelt that a joint committee headed by Senator Harry F. Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, recommended last December a budget slash of more than a billion dollars, and advocated the abolition of the National Youth Administration and other agencies.

The President pointed out that the NYA is annually training 400,000 boys and girls to go into industry. If the NYA were abolished, he said, it would be necessary to set up some other machinery to train the 400,000. Where, he asked, would be the economy in that?

He said that the NYA work was a necessary part of the war effort. Where the training was undertaken and by what organization, he said, made no difference to him. He said it could be put under the Secretary of State so far as he was concerned, just as long as he got the

U. S. Accuses Social Justice Of Sedition

First Step Taken To Bar Magazine From Mails; Nazi Propaganda Cited

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

The United States Government last night struck its first blow at the vermin press, cracking down on Social Justice, the magazine founded by Charles E. Coughlin, which is issued weekly from Royal Oak, Mich.

Postmaster General Frank C. Walker issued two orders:

1. The Royal Oak postmaster will not dispatch future issues of Social Justice, but will refer copies to the solicitor of the Postoffice Department for review.

2. The publishers of Social Justice were ordered to show cause why the magazine should not be permanently excluded from the mail.

The orders followed advice from Attorney General Francis Biddle that the Coughlin magazine was clearly an organ of enemy propaganda. The Attorney General said there were seditious passages in 16 recent issues.

In Detroit Coughlin, while denying any affiliation with Social Justice, challenged Attorney General Biddle to give him "an opportunity to defend the property of Social Justice."

Social Justice was the first of the vermin press—which whispers defeat and promotes disunity under the cloak of the guarantees of the United States Constitution—to feel the force of law. But the Department of Justice is proceeding against others.

Resume Hearings Monday

The special grand jury on Axis agents—which broke up two Nazi propaganda organizations and sent the German agent, Viereck, and others to jail—now is investigating a string of publications which are suspected of enemy inspiration or control.

The Attorney General ordered thorough investigation of every case which provoked suspicion, and firm action wherever evidence was found.

Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and John T. M. Reddan will resume hearings Thursday. Directing their inquiry is the chief of the criminal division, Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge.

Nazi Propaganda Cited

Attorney General Biddle found that Social Justice has violated the Espionage Act of 1917, which punishes "false reports or false statements with intent to interfere with the operations or success of the military or naval forces of the United States or to promote the success of its enemies." Denounced by the same law are efforts to foment insubordination or disloyalty in the armed forces or to obstruct enlistments.

The Attorney General found the "intent" of the Social Justice publishers demonstrated by "a sus-

Pessimism Deepens

(Text of President Roosevelt's Talk to Latin-American diplomats, Page 9.)

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday foresaw two more years of war, perhaps three, with the United Nations "the winner in the long run."

When the Axis is defeated, the Chief Executive told the ambassadors and ministers of the 20 Latin-American republics who gathered at the White House, on the fifty-second anniversary of the Pan American Union, a hemispheric council will meet in Washington to have "a very great voice" in the peace.

"We Will Get Somewhere"

In greeting the Latin-American ambassadors and ministers who, with Secretary of State Hull, make up the Pan American Union's board of directors, President Roosevelt spoke informally. He explained that it usually took him a week to prepare a speech, and he said he had no weeks to spare now. Later, on their way out, some of the diplomats said that the President's remarks had been "inspiring."

"We are going places," the President said. "We will get somewhere. And we are going to have a couple of years, perhaps three, before we can make sure that our type of civilization is going to survive.

"I am perfectly confident of it myself. We have all got to sacrifice. But we are going to come out

Petain Abandons All Pretense of Rule; Darlan to Continue As Chief of Defense

By Ralph Heinzen
United Press Staff Writer

Vichy (Wednesday), April 15. Pierre Laval, the collaborationist, has been named premier, with full control of the French government, including the right to pick his own cabinet, in attempt to prevent Adolf Hitler from setting up a French "gauleiter" in Paris, it was reported today.

(The reference to a Paris gauleiter—district leader—was not explained, but Free French sources in London said Hitler planned to set up a puppet government in Paris to rule all of France in the event he decided to take over unoccupied France.)

Chief of State Marshall Petain has abandoned all pretense to government control, as has Vice Premier Admiral Jean Darlan. Darlan, however, retains his role as successor to Petain in event the marshal should leave office and remains commander in chief of all land, sea and air forces. All political control will be centered in the person of Laval, but he still will be technically responsible to Petain, it was reported.

Laval Goes to Paris

Laval has gone to Paris to attempt to negotiate an emergency agreement with the Germans.

Fernand de Brinon, Vichy delegate to Paris, announced there that Laval returns to the cabinet with the rank of full premier—a new post giving him domination of unoccupied France's domestic and foreign affairs. De Brinon was quoted as saying that Petain was "fully satisfied" with the reorganization.

It had been reported yesterday that Laval was taking over the vice premiership from Darlan, in addition to the interior ministry.

Coincident with the shake-up the Vichy government lashed out bitterly at the United States, rejecting as "insulting" a Washington explanation of dealing with the Free French forces of Gen. Charles DeGaulle.

16 Months in Eclipse

Laval's return to power after 16 months of eclipse came swiftly after the failure of an attempt to form a compromise cabinet headed by Justice Minister Joseph Barthelemy. As long ago as last Thursday, Rene Fonck, World War I ace, took the President's Choice Is 'Survival War'

President Roosevelt yesterday came forward with a name for the current war. His choice was "The Survival War."

At a recent press conference, the President indicated that he did not like the terms Second World War and World War II, and he called for suggestions for a name. Yesterday he used the name "Survival War" in speaking to Latin-American diplomats.

When a reporter later asked whether "The Survival War" was going to be "it." The President chuckled, and said he was merely throwing it out as a suggestion.

5 More Ships Sunk by Subs, Navy Reveals

59 From 2 Vessels Lost Last Week Landed in Carolina

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., April 14.—Four seamen were lost and eight others were missing after two medium sized merchant ships were torpedoed off the Atlantic Coast last week, the Fifth Naval District announced tonight.

Fifty-nine survivors from the two vessels were landed at Morehead City, N. C.

[These were the fourth and fifth ship losses acknowledged during the day by the Navy Department. Survivors from two other South Atlantic sinkings were landed in Florida and those from a Caribbean torpedoing reached New Orleans.]

The first of the two attacks occurring Thursday, set the cargo ship aflame, and survivors said the vessel was still burning and settling by the stern when they were picked up by a rescue vessel. Two of the crew, Third Mate Nowall Sweeney and Ordinary Seaman Richard Lyons, were lost when they leaped overboard after their lifeboat caught fire. The other 32 crewmen were landed at Morehead City, where five were hospitalized. Lyon's body was recovered later.

The second ship was torpedoed early Saturday morning. Two crewmen—Third Mate Marion Feathers of Houston, Texas, and Radio Operator Posnan Tiers—were known to have died in this attack. Eight other men were missing when the 27 survivors were brought to Morehead City.

The ship in Thursday's attack, was struck first on the starboard side in the pumproom. The crew abandoned ship within ten minutes. From the lifeboats they saw a second torpedo hit amidship, also on the starboard side. This torpedo started fires aft and amidship which quickly enveloped the entire vessel.

Washington Awaits Report From Leahy; Return of Pro-Nazi Shocks Official Circles

By Wade Werner
Associated Press Staff Writer

Rupture of United States relations with the Vichy government of France again appeared imminent last night as Pierre Laval—arch exponent of colaboration with Germany—returned to power in the Petain regime.

The State Department was silent on the new development, but an authoritative source said a complete reexamination of this Government's relations with Vichy "obviously" was necessary.

At the same time this informant emphasized that no official report yet has been received from United States Ambassador William D. Leahy, and that until his report is at hand the situation must be regarded as obscure.

Previous Crisis Overcome

Unofficial observers hesitated definitely to predict a break with Vichy, inasmuch as a rupture of relations has appeared imminent on more than one occasion since Marshal Petain took the helm.

It was recalled that last year, when Gen. Maxim Weygand suddenly—and apparently under Nazi pressure—was removed as French administrator in North Africa, a break appeared near and Secretary of State Hull announced that the United States would have to reconsider its whole policy toward Vichy France.

That crisis was overcome, as were subsequent critical situations growing out of French collaboration with Germany.

This time, however, the pessimism in official quarters appeared more deepseated.

The reemergence of Laval came as a shock since only last week United Nations relations with Vichy seemed to have entered on a new and friendlier phase. It was just a week ago that the State Department announced that nonmilitary supplies would be shipped from the United States to French North Africa.

Resumption of the North African shipments—which had been discontinued at the time of Weygand's removal—was regarded as evidence that relations with Vichy, already described authoritatively as on the mend, were really settling down to something like normal.

Poage Demands Action

United States seizure of French possessions was demanded in the House yesterday as a reply to Laval's return to the government.

"Today a traitor received his 30 pieces of silver," commented Representative Poage (Democrat), of Texas, who urged closer cooperation be-

Navy Pilot Lands in Rough Sea To Rescue 17 Adrift on Raft

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Ensign Francis E. Pinter has been but two years in the Navy and a pilot for only 16 months, yet last month he carried out a difficult rescue job at sea and didn't let it interfere with his mission of hunting U-boats.

The Navy told the story yesterday of his dramatic rescue of 16 men and a woman in the Caribbean March 9. The survivors of a torpedoed American merchantmen, they had been adrift on a raft without food or water for 60 hours, when Pinter put his patrol-bomber down on the water beside them.

The 28-year-old ensign, with two copilots and a crew of five, was en route from San Juan, Puerto Rico, to Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, at the time, keeping a weather eye out for Axis subs.

Although the sea was very rough and his plane was already heavily loaded, Pinter decided to risk a rescue attempt. He carried off the difficult undertaking with great skill and had the exhausted survivors in a naval hospital within a few hours.

The Navy made public the ensign's report on the rescue, telling how he managed to "bounce" his heavy plane off the rough water without having to lighten the craft by dumping his depth bombs.

"I did not drop my depth charges on the rough sea landing or takeoff," Pinter reported, "as I had hoped that we might sight an enemy submarine crossing Windward Passage."

The rescue was a touch and go operation from start to finish.

Flying low over the raft, Pinter could see that it was a makeshift affair only ten feet square and crowded with the survivors. The sea was very rough and they might not have lasted until a rescue ship arrived.

Pinter's report said he considered the problem and "debated the possibility of landing and getting away with it." Estimating that he had burned 300 gallons of gas and thus was 1800 pounds lighter than on the takeoff, he decided to risk landing.

The sea was too rough to taxi to the raft, so he had to taxi away and then sail up to it. The survivors were so weakened that the plane crew had to "practically carry" them into the plane and administer first aid.

The Consolidated Catalina plane had a normal capacity of seven, so the oversize crew and 17 survivors

Vinson Measure Asks Billion To Build 'Over 100' New Subs

By Bert Andrews
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

A billion-dollar bill designed to give America the mightiest fleet of submarines possessed by any nation in the world was introduced yesterday in the House, with Roosevelt Administration backing, by Representative Carl Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee.

The measure will mean the construction of "more than 100" of the latest fleet type undersea boats, according to Representative Vinson. He would not be more specific on the number, but he told the New York Herald Tribune:

"We'll build them faster than submarines ever were built before. No new ways are contemplated, but we'll expand the present ways and keep them loaded."

Vinson said that the program—which presumably will put the United States beyond the 300 built and building submarines credited to Germany—would not only aid in meeting the Japanese menace in the Pacific but would counter the "bad situation" that would be created if France turns its fleet over to Nazi Germany.

Representative Vinson's bill authorizes appropriation of the money for "170,000 tons of combatant vessels," but he explained that submarines were meant. That the appropriation will be made swiftly is a foregone conclusion.

Whether all submarines under the program will be of one type was not announced. If all were like the Seawolf, which was disclosed Monday by the Navy to have run up an epic record of accomplishment in the Pacific, they would be of 1450 tons. Thus "170,000 tons of combatant vessels" would allow for about 117 Seawolf type ships.

War Sidelights

Red Launch Victory Loan And Lottery

Kuibyshev, April 14 (AP).—A victory loan of ten billion rubles (about two billion dollars) was launched in a profusion of red banners and speeches today, and the Russians were given their choice of interest coupons or lottery tickets as revenue from the issue.

The 20-year loan bears 2 per cent interest, unles the buyer likes to take a chance. In that case he may buy lottery tickets for huge prizes of rubles to be awarded in national lotteries during the next two decades. The interest bonds were favored by the collective farmers, while the city dwellers preferred the lottery coupons. In either case the principal is payable in 1962.

It was the largest loan launched since 1922 and was aimed at cutting down consumer buying as well as bringing home war sacrifices to the Soviets.

Berlin Puts Pressure On Petain to Change Vichy Government

By the Associated Press

Bern, Switzerland, April 14.—German pressure, growing from fear of a United Nations' invasion of western Europe while the Nazis are busy in Russia, compelled Marshal Petain to reorganize the Vichy government today toward all-out collaboration with Germany under pro-Axis, British-hating Pierre Laval.

Observers well-informed on Vichy affairs saw these implications in the official announcements:

1. Breaking off recently improved relations between France and the United States which may, later, lead to a diplomatic rupture.

2. Full collaboration with the Germans, in industrial, agricultural and financial affairs, to the greatest possible degree.

3. Empire concessions, which might concern Madagascar and North and West Africa, for supply and transportation necessities which the Germans and their Axis partners may desire.

4. Possible military aid, either by giving the Germans a guarantee that their rear will be protected once the expected Nazi drive against Russia is started, or by the use of the French battle fleet for at least convoy duty.

5. Possible abolition of the demarkation line which now divides the occupied and unoccupied zones, with the new government, without Petain, establishing itself in Paris.

(Petain has said and repeated that he will never go back to Paris so long "as one single German soldier remains there.")

The German news agency, D.N.B., under a Paris dateline said the seat of the French government would remain at Vichy.

Daylight Raid Blasts France For 9½ Hours

By the Associated Press

London, April 14.—British fighters and bombers ranged over northern France with comparative freedom for nine and one-half hours today in their longest daylight offensive of the year.

From the Boulogne-Calais coastal strip to Caen, in Normandy, R. A. F. airmen bombed and strafed German targets and on their way home engaged in brisk dogfights with Nazi interceptors 20,000 feet above the Channel.

Two American pilots tangled with eight Nazi fighters in one scrap and scored hits on a pair of the enemy. The Americans were Flight Lieut. Newton Anderson, of Columbus, Ohio, and Pilot Officer Michael George McPharlin, of Blue Island, Ill.

Losses for the day were even—four British and four German fighters.

In Normandy, British bombers blasted a power station at Caen and nearby industrial plants.

The R. A. F. bucked a near gale over the Channel tonight to keep up their attacks. From flashes and explosions seen and heard from this side it appeared that Calais and Cap Gris-Nez were getting a terrific pounding.

14 Killed as Nazis Boamb English Coast

A Town in Northeast England, April 14 (AP).—Fourteen persons were killed, many others injured and considerable damage caused to residential property in German bombing attacks over scattered areas last night, it was announced today..

The German communique reported the raids were made on the Humber River estuary, where the principal towns are Hull and Grimsby.

Eight high explosive bombs fell on one town, killing 9 persons, injuring 30 and destroying 37 homes. Four persons were killed and six injured by three bombs which smashed homes and air-raid shelters in another town. Another person was killed in the adjoining countryside.

Iran Ousts Jap Envoy, Staff In Drive on Subversion

By the United Press

Teheran, Iran, April 14.—Japanese Minister Hikotaro Ichikawa and his staff of six were ordered today to leave Iran within a week following a diplomatic break which authoritative sources said resulted from subversive activities by the Japanese legation here.

The Jap legation was said to have acted as a center of Axis propaganda and subversion directed against the Iran regime as well as the United Nations.

The decision to break ties with Japan was announced yesterday after a closed session of the cabinet.

Reliable informants said authorities had investigated Japanese activities thoroughly, and that the arrest of six prominent Iranians last week led to the dissolution of a ring of Axis agents operating in Teheran and the provinces under the direct employment and guidance of the Japanese legation.

Among those arrested was Husseunduin Ghafarri, well-known Fascist, who served as leader of Axis underground activities following his return from the United States in 1940 via Tokyo, where he undertook to work for the Japanese.

Ghafarri, who had been ordered arrested by the former ruler, Riza Shah Pahlevi, for alleged anti-monarchist statements in the United States, was released by the present government. He was said to have resumed his distribution of Axis propaganda, entertaining disgruntled Iranian officials and merchants, and distributing anti-Ally literature and disseminating anti-British rumors.

Others arrested included Vasiri, director of Iran's leading tourist organization, once an honorary storm trooper in Berlin and holder of a German officer's commission; Daryus, former manager of a Teheran radio station; Daruga, a prominent soap manufacturer whose palatial home was used as a meeting place by Axis agents, and Col. Sufagarri, who after spending two years in Germany assumed directorship of the medical department of the Iranian army.

Police were reported searching for other Axis agents in hiding.

Diplomatic circles said that the rupture of relations resulted from purely Iranian initiative, although the American and British Ministers were informed fully of the progress of police investigations.

Cebu Forces Fought Against Heavy Odds Virtually Unarmed, Says Writer Who Escaped Island After Seeing Preparations

By Clark Lee
Associated Press Staff Writer

Melbourne, April 14.—The American-Filipino defenders of Cebu apparently have fought stiffly against the Japanese landing on the island but they were never regarded as having had a chance to make more than a few days' stand.

All the odds favored the invaders of the Philippine Eden.

Col. Irvine C. Scudder's men were virtually all native Cebuanos who undoubtedly have fought well to defend their homeland but they had no equipment.

I spent two weeks on Cebu in late February and early March, inspecting its defenses as Scudder's guest.

About 50,000 of the island's one million populace had been called to service but probably no more than 1500 had equipment, mostly Springfield or Enfield rifles.

Few Machine Guns

Scudder had one .50 caliber machine-gun, a few of .30 caliber and no artillery or coastal guns.

Almost all of Cebu's coastline is low and sandy—perfect for landing operations—and no point is beyond range of naval guns on warships in the inland sea.

The Americans were manufacturing their own grenades of a potato-masher type, using explosives taken from mines which the Japanese scattered in the inland sea and Filipino fishermen brought ashore for a few pesos each. There were plenty of landing fields but no planes.

After a heavy bombing of the waterfront in January and occasional warship shelling later, most of the inhabitants of Cebu City, the second largest in the Philippines, had taken to the hills.

Life was mostly normal, however, with movies, banks, some stores and restaurants open except during the likely midday bombing hours.

To us who had been on Bataan, even its palm-lined main street looked like Fifth Avenue.

In Evacuation Camp

Some 60 Americans and British families were living in an evacuation camp in the mountains and others still were in their hillside homes.

But the rich, fertile island which resembles one vast garden offered few places of refuge for civilians or for the guerrilla warfare Scudder planned to wage.

Under Gen. Douglas MacArthur's orders Cebu had been organized as an inter-island shipping center to get supplies to Corregidor and Bataan. MacArthur apparently believed that if he could bring in a few ships safely, he could convince Washington of the possibility and advisability of a major effort to reinforce Bataan and hold the Philippines.

At least three ships made the trip successfully while the writer was in Cebu. Small interisland vessels previously had made a few trips to Corregidor from Cebu with rice.

The Japanese discovered the blockade-running early in March and sent warships and planes into the inner Philippine waters, where they destroyed or captured a number of small vessels. These were helpless without armament or aerial or naval protection.

Could Not Restore Traffic

Lacking vessels to replace those lost, MacArthur could not restore traffic with Cebu on a sufficient scale to relieve the shortages of his army.

The vessel on which I left Cebu still was at its pier when a Japanese destroyer was sighted two hours from the port. The Filipino captain decided to make the run rather than be sunk in harbor.

While Naval officer friends who had come from Corregidor stood on the dock and told us what fools we were, we climbed aboard.

With the destroyer speeding from the south, our large unloaded ship backed from the pier and the captain tried to swing her around to head northward out of the channel.

But the ship was so light she was unmanageable and the wind swung her back each time. Finally, after 55 agonizing minutes, the maneuver succeeded.

Fortunately, however, the destroyer did not sight us and turned back to the south after shelling Cebu.

Hid Among Islands

We hid among the other islands for three days during which we sighted another ship which had gone aground a few miles from Cebu with supplies from Australia.

We stood by to try to pull her off. During those hours a destroyer could have sunk us both. It was learned later that an enemy vessel was lurking behind another island a few miles away and never discovered us.

The other cargo ship finally was refloated after some of her cargo had been removed. She completed the trip to Cebu.

We went to Australia.

Britain Gets 400 Million Aid A Month, Budget Debate Shows

By the Associated Press

London, April 14.—Britons in their third spring of war were given today an "austerity budget" which calls for historic expenditures of £5,286,000,000 ($21,144,000,000) in the coming fiscal year—even though American lease-lend aid now is coming at the rate of $400,000,000 a month.

Recognizing that these lease-lend deliveries constitute "a vital factor in our effort," Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer, told Commons that henceforth a larger proportion of the total would be transferred to India and the Dominions. Through the end of March, he estimated, lease-lend aid totaled $2,400,000,000.

Yet in the coming year Britons will feel a far heavier burden in taxation on what are known now as luxuries, including tobacco, beer, whisky, some electrical appliances, silk or brocaded fabrics, china articles, cosmetics, entertainment and many other things. In many cases these taxes will be doubled and trebled.

Low Income Tax Reduced

With the basic income tax already 50 per cent, Sir Kingsley said it would not be increased; indeed, some relief was offered to workers in the lowest income tax brackets.

This appeared to be tacit recognition by the government of what some economists have been arguing—that the income tax which already takes, in the highest brackets, all but about 2½ cents out of every dollar of income, cannot be boosted without diminishing returns.

But, said Sir Kingsley, "there must be a further curtailment of civilian consumption and the policy of stabilization will be continued and developed."

He stressed the necessity of keeping price levels from climbing further, declaring the price of certain food staples had gone up 23 per cent since the start of the war, before the government hammered the level back to 18 per cent.

The cost of living as a whole now is 29 per cent above the prewar level, he added. But, he said, "during the last year we have definitely held our own against the onset of inflation."

The new budget contemplates sending Britain's total wartime spending around the 60 billion dollar mark. Up to the beginning of the new fiscal year, April 1, these wartime expenditures are estimated unofficially at $39,700,000,000.

The coming year's budget increases last year's' spending by £510,000,000 ($2,040,000,000).

The 10 shilling per pound increase in tobacco taxes means that a package of 10 cigarettes which have been selling for ninepence (about 18 cents) will now sell for a shilling or 20 cents.

Whisky, which has been selling for 17 shillings 6 pence per bottle (fifth)—$3.50—now will cost 1 pound 2 shillings and sixpence—$4.50. The tax increase is 4 shillings 8 pence (93 cents) per bottle.

Beer Tax Trebbled

Beer will be taxed threepence (5 cents) a pint instead of a penny.

This will mean an increase in the retail price of beer to 25 cents a pint.

Doubling of the entertainment tax means that a movie-goer buying a ninepenny (15 cent) seat will pay a two pence halfpenny (about 4 cents) tax. At a fight ringside the tax will be 1 pound 1 shilling and 2 pence or about $4.23.

The income tax changes for lower brackets were thought likely to boost war production, since there have been reports that many low paid workers were declining to work overtime because the extra money would go out in taxes.

The new limits will exclude single men earning less than $8 weekly and married men earning less than $12 weekly. A married man with two children must now earn $20 weekly before he is liable to income tax.

Married women earning up to $320 annually instead of $180 also are exempt from tax.

Halifaxes Pay Honor To Heroes of Alamo

San Antonio, April 14 (AP).—Lord and Lady Halifax, honor guests in San Antonio today, paid homage to heroes of another war in another day by laying a wreath at the Alamo in memory of those who died for Texas independence.

Using the same pen with which President Roosevelt signed the book in 1936, the British Ambassador wrote his signature simply as "Halifax." His wife's signature was "Dorothy Halifax."

Aid Sought For Victims Of Blackouts

Financial responsibility for persons injured doing civilian defense duty will be studied by the public order committee of the Board of Trade, it was announced yesterday.

No provision has been made for the care of any volunteer fireman, policeman or warden who might suffer injury during a real or practice air raid. The committee will try to determine whether such responsibility is properly that of the Federal or District government. Also provisions in ordinary life insurance policies will be reviewed.

Because yesterday's luncheon was the last one scheduled until next fall, Odell S. Smith appointed a special committee to study this question and report on it to the Board of Trade's executive committee. Harry J. Miller was named chairman. Others on it are E. T. Burdette, Washington I. Cleveland, George B. Fraser, and Charles F. Robetrs.

One Light Shines In County Blackout

E. F. Zalesak, Prince Georges County's chief air-raid warden, felt mighty proud when he walked outside of the county control center to see how successful the blackout test was. There wasn't a light anywhere—until the chief warden, with solid satisfaction, absent-mindedly lit a cigar.

Defense Mass Meeting Set for Tonight

A joint civilian defense mass meeting will be held tonight at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of Woodrow Wilson High School, Fortieth Street and Nebraska Avenue Northwest, under auspices of committees from the American University Park, MacArthur Boulevard and North Cleveland Park.

Principal speaker will be Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Senate District Committee. British civilian defense films will be shown. Anderson A. Murphey is chairman of the joint committee.

Air Raid Sirens Are 'Wedding Bells'

Sirens signaling last night's blackout test were wedding bells for George Furstenburg, of 920 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, and his bride, the former Miss Agnes Metallic, of 1206 Tenth Street Northwest. They were married in a ceremony at the bride's home at the height of the mock air raid.

Columbia Heights Zone Arranges Meeting

Residents of Zone 4 of the Columbia Heights civilian defense area will hold an "old time community meeting" at 8 p. m. today at the home of Mrs. Gertrude E. Segal, 2515 Fourteenth Street Northwest. Prizes will be offered for games, and admission will be 50 cents, it was announced.

Glover Park Area Gets Defense Films

Civilian defense movies are being shown at Stoddert School, Fortieth and Calvert Streets Northwest, each Wednesday at 8 p .m. for citizens of the Glover Park area, it was announced yesterday by Acting Deputy Warden Frank K. Cogswell.

In addition to the movies, the program tonight will include a demonstration of a war gas "sniff" set by Assistant Deputy Warden L. L. De Fabritis, instructor in bombs nad gases for the area.

Nipponese Drive Through Foothills In Flanking Move

By the United Press

Chungking, April 14.—Japanese troops driving through Burma's Pegu Yoma foothills have captured the town of Taungdwingyi, midway between the British and Chinese defense sectors, and are threatening to cut communications between the Allied armies, a Chinese spokesman said today.

Coincident with the vast flanking drive through the hills, the Japanese opened a terrific offensive against United States Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's Chinese forces along the Mandalay Road, pressing them back from the Swa River, 23 miles above fallen Toungoo, and at the same time threw new pressure against the British defending the Burma oil fields to the west.

One Japanese column occupied Migyaungye, 25 miles south of Magwe, at the entrance to the oil fields. A stronger Jap column, veering off northwest from the Magwe sector, was the one which captured Taungdwingyi.

13 Enemy Craft Damaged

(The R. A. F. seeking to whittle down Japanese air superiority in the important Indian Ocean war zone, destroyed or damaged 13 enemy flying boats in a raid on the occupied harbor of Port Blair, on the Andaman islands in the Bay of Bengal, a communique issued in New Delhi reported.)

[The communique made plain that the 13 flying boats accounted for the entire concentration, the Associated Press said. One flying boat was left sinking, two afire, and 10 damaged.]

From Taungdwingyi there is a road running 25 miles north to Natmauk, where it connects with the only good east-west road linking the British and Chinese fronts. That east-west road runs from the oil town of Minbu to Yamethin, on the Rangoon-Mandalay road. If the Japs reach the east-west road they will have cut communications between the Allied fronts and will be in position to turn either way and outflank one of the defending armies.

Foe Pounds Ahead

A Chinese communique said the Japs opened a strong offensive against Stilwell's Swa and Kyanging River line on Sunday and continued to drive north. The Chinese counterattacked and stopped the drive after hard fighting. The Japs were exhausted and their casualties were heavy, but Sunday night they moved strong reinforcements into the field by truck and motor car and resumed the offensive on Monday.

At noon Monday, the communique said, Chinese troops were still holding in the Changaya sector, 35 miles northwest of fallen Toungoo. That position was now outflanked, however, by the Japanese at Taungdwingyi, which is 35 miles northwest of Changaya.

The Japanese had not only forced a wedge between the Allied lines at Taungdwingyi, but they have advanced some 30 miles to the north of both the defending armies, which have maintained a more or less straight line in their withdrawals.

The newspaper Ta Kung Pao here complained that the continual withdrawal of the British in the west kept Chinese troops on the Mandalay road exposed to outflanking maneuvers. It said the Allied forces should be better coordinated, adding:

"We hope the Allies, even if withdrawing for strategical reasons, shall make the enemy pay heavy prices instead of allowing him the easiest advance."

U. S. Orders Output Of Phonograph Records Cut 70%

The War Production Board issued orders yesterday forcing an immediate 70 per cent reduction in the manufacture of phonograph records and radio transcriptions.

The curtailment was accomplished by reducing the amount of shellac available to producers to 30 per cent of the amount used last year. The record industry normally uses about one-third of the Nation's annual shellac consumption.

Experiments are being pushed, it was said, to find a suitable substitute and reclaiming of old records may be attempted.

The board also directed industries using shellac, except record manufacturers, to reduce their consumption 25 per cent below last year's levels between now and June 30, and curtail 65 per cent thereafter. The WPB also froze half of all stocks of shellac of 10,000 pounds or more and 50 per cent of all future imports.

India is virtually the sole source of this country's supplies of shellac, WPB pointed out, and imports are subject to shipping hazards.

Curtin Assumes Control Of All Australian Forces

By the United Press

Gen. MacArthur's Headquarters, Melbourne, April 14.—Prime Minister John Curtin assumed control of Australia's land, sea and air forces today, taking over the newly-created post of defense minister, as allied planes struck new blows at Japanese invasion bases at Lae and Rabaul.

Curtin's move, a further streamlining of the United Nations' war organization, made him Australia's major link with Gen. Douglas MacArthur supreme Allied commander in the Southwest Pacific, and the various war councils in London and Washington.

The government, meanwhile, completed the marshaling of its manpower on the home front by forming a civilian construction corps, a semi-voluntary organization to build defense works.

Today's raid on Lae, in northeastern New Guinea, two Japanese planes were reported shot down and one badly damaged. The airdrome was bombed and great fires left blazing. Details of the raid on Rabaul, main Japanese base on New Britain Island, were not available.

On Monday the Allied fliers, according to a communique issued tonight, attacked Lae and Koepang, on Timor Island.

Australian fliers carried out the raid on Koepang, scoring a damaging "near miss" on one Japanese ship and possibly hitting another, the communique said. One of the ships was seen blazing as the fliers left for home.

The Lae raid Monday was made by American and Australian fliers who shot down one enemy fighter, probably shot down two others and damaged a fourth in raids against the Japanese-occupied airdrome and antiaircraft positions.

Curtin's new post is vastly more important than that of minister of defense coordination which he formerly held and which was abolished.

As part of his new job, Curtin said that questions of Australian defense, policy and other such important subjects as strengthening the organization of military forces and appointments to higher posts would, in the future, be submitted to the war cabinet through his office. That, he said, would leave the other service ministers more time for their executive work and give effect to the war policy laid down by the war cabinet.

Death of Anderson Is Declared Suicide

Athens, Ga., April 14 (AP).—A verdict of suicide was returned by a coroner's jury here in the death of Col. H. R. Anderson, professor of military science and tactics at the University of Georgia for the last four years, police Capt. R. E. Eidam said.

The colonel's body was found yesterday in a thicket along the Oconee River, a 20-gauge shotgun nearby. Col. Anderson, a West Point graduate, had served in the Philippines under Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Blackout Finds Washington Ready

beams of brightness down the empty streets.

Col. Augustine S. Janeway, chief of staff for the Third Defense Area, who came from Baltimore to watch the performance, termed it "by far the best held in this region to date."

Dean James M. Landis, director of the Office of Civilian Defense, who was at the control center when the yellow flashed, and who rode to the District Building during the blackout, said he was much impressed by the manner in which traffic was "frozen."

"I saw no lights at all until I got downtown and looked at the Raleigh Hotel," he declared. "This is the third civilian defense test I have witnessed here, and much improvement has been made each time."

It was Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, who said that the test convinced him the city is ready to take care of itself in a bombing. Backing him up were Representatives Mahon (Democrat), of Texas, and Stefan (Republican), of Nebraska, who also were at the control center and helped pull switches that started the sirens.

Street Lights Big Problem

Gen. L. D. Gasser, chief of the OCD protective service division, said he considered the blackout perfect," but pointed out that the street lights necessarily would go off much more slowly if the wardens assigned to pull the 167 switches for them did not have advance warning.

"That, of course, is our big problem right now," Commissioner John Russell Young, Coordinator of Defense, replied. "We do not know how long it would take the wardens to throw these switches if we didn't have a blackout scheduled. We are working toward central switches for them and have $30,000 set aside for that purpose—if we can get priorities.

"We can cut the number to 13 and have them in fire and police stations where persons always are on guard and they can be thrown instantaneously."

Col. Lemuel Bolles, District director of defense, termed the rehearsal a success—although, he said, it pointed up several minor defects that will be corrected before the next practice.

Commissioner Guy Mason said it is evident luminous paint should be put on safety islands and along the sidewalks at crossings. Gen. C. W. Kutz, Engineer Commissioner, said the luminous paint was tried out last night in an area between F and H and Third and Seventh Streets Southwest, would be ready for general use "probably next time." This paint reflects the dimmed lights of those cars which may have to travel in the blackout and is an aid to accident prevention.

Totally blacked out for the period were the Washington Navy Yard and the torpedo factory in Alexandria. Workers at these war plants went through the regular procedure worked out for them for actual air raids. There was no delay in getting right back to work.

Construction on the new 37-acre War Department Building was halted for five minutes during the blackout as a gesture of compliance and to show it could be done during an actual raid.

Pro-Axis Laval Given Control At Vichy

compromise propdsal to Paris for relay to Adolf Hitler and Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering, but the German Ambassador at Paris, Otto Abetz, got wind of the proceedings, tipped Vichy that they would prove disastrous, and caused the arrest of Fonck who since has been confined under German guard.

Laval's cabinet is expected to contain mostly collaborationists, but the names of neither Marcel Deat nor Jacques Doriot, two of the leading ones, had been mentioned.

At the same time the government announced the suspension of the Riom war guilt trials of the former leaders of the Third Republic, against which Hitler and the German-controlled Paris press had complained strongly.

(Confidential advices from Europe Tuesday night said that Laval's return to power as the strong man of the Vichy cabinet resulted from an ultimatum Germany served on Marshal Petain demanding that he be made head of the government with unhampered control of French foreign and domestic policy.

(They said Germany also made "other demands" in the ultimatum expiring at midnight Thursday, which apparently did not include the turning over of the French fleet to the Axis. But they speculated on the possibility that Germany soon might take over the ports of southern France and the Strasbourg-Dijon-Oyon-Marseille Railway as a new route to Libya.)

Denunciation Released

Shortly after last midnight the government released a previously canceled denunciation of a Washington note explaining the establishment of an American consulate general in Brazzaville, Free French equatorial Africa.

A communique, first released, canceled half an hour later and released again after three hours, rejected the Washington note in response to Vichy's protest against the diplomatic action in Africa.

In the Washington reply Monday, Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles had advised Ambassador Gaston Henry-Haye that the United States would deal with the De Gaullist forces wherever they were in effective control.

(Welles referred to "that handful of Frenchmen who . . . have sordidly and abjectly, under the guise of 'collaboration,' attempted to prostitute their country to that very regime in Germany which is bent upon nothing less than the permanent enslavement of France.")

The Vichy announcement said Henry-Haye had been ordered to notify the State Department that it did not accept Welles' note, "drafted in insulting terms and intended to discredit in the eyes of the world French citizens who have no lessons in patriotism to receive from foreigners."

The announcement said the government would not even reply to the note, termed a "strange document written for propaganda purposes." The text of the announcement:

"After examination of the American Government's note of April 13, handed to the French Ambassador in Washington, on the subject of the Brazzaville French, the government gave immediate instructions to Henry-Haye to notify the State Department that the French government does not accept the American note, drafted in insulting terms intended to discredit in the eyes of the world French citizens who have no lessons in patriotism to receive from foreigners.

"The French government, furthermore, is obliged to take note that immediate publication of that strange document under unusual conditions shows clearly that it was written for propaganda purposes and in an effort to trouble opinion.

"The French government will not reply to the question contained in the note."

The government shuffle "on a new basis," the full extent of which will be revealed Thursday, was announced in a communique following a meeting of Laval, Marshal Petain and Admiral Darlan, whom Laval replaces as vice premier.

Laval said after the conference with Petain and Darlan that his policy was based on the hope of obtaining a peace which will guarantee French independence and the integrity of the homeland and empire.

He reiterated his previously expressed tenets, including the contentions that France's main preoccupation should be to maintain the empire, that her fate depends largely on her attitude regarding the war between Germany and Britain; that the disposition of the borderland Alsace-Lorraine "continues delicate and grave and can be settled only by a friendly understanding between France and Germany;" that France expects a peace "Conceived in justice and honor," and that the European conflict is a revolution, not merely a war.

A law published in the official journal ordered the Riom supreme court to halt the war guilt trials in order to "complete its information with a view to seeking and judging all the responsibilities incurred by the persons mentioned in the law of July 30, 1940, whose actions led to passage from a state of peace to a state of war before September 4, 1939, and those who either before or after that date aggravated the consequences of the situation thus created."

The communique announcing the cabinet reorganization, read to the assembled correspondents at noon, said:

"Since his last talks with Petain, Laval has conferred often with Darlan. Today Petain, Darlan and Laval met and decided to proceed with the formation of a new government established on a new basis. Petain, Darlan and Laval will meet again Thursday."

(The Montreal radio quoted an article by Deat, chief collaborationist editor in Paris, as saying: "The government has to decide to collaborate with Germany, and if not Germany will use force to decide for the Vichy government. The time has come for our naval and air forces to protect our convoys. The time has come for our airplanes to dominate the air. The time has come for our troops to go into action.") were packed in tight as sardines, four of them in the bomb compartment.

With Aviation Machinist's Mate Lewis M. Thompson serving as copilot, Pinter tried to get his plane off the water. The waves only bounced it around. He shifted some weight forward and tried again.

"The plane bounced high into the air without speed," Pinter reported, "and on each bounce Thompson gave it more power as I nosed it down at the peak of each bounce and pulled back as we hit the swells and waves, easing the blow and still increasing air speed.

"Finally on one of the bounces I gave it maximum power available and it stayed in the air. It took us approximately 20 minutes to climb to 500 feet."

The plane landed a few hours later, apparently without further incident. Pinter's commander reported the action as "one requiring the highest degree of skill and aircraftsmanship" and "in keeping with the finest tradition of the naval service."

tained and systematic attack on certain of our activities directly related to the war effort as well as upon public morale generally."

"Furthermore," the Attorney General commented, "a study of the ten major themes which have been broadcast by our enemies since December, 1941, . . . shows a close relation of material contained in Social Justice to those themes."

Among these themes, the Attorney General listed:

1. Pride in the achievement of the Axis powers and sympathy with their aims.
2. Disparagement of the intentions and motives of Great Britain and the United States.
3. Blame for the war on "international bankers."
4. Creation of racial hatreds and distrust.
5. Constant and frequent attacks upon the war policies of the present Government, and doubt as to the ability of the United States to win the war.

Quotes 16 Recent Issues

The Attorney General quoted from 16 recent issues of the Coughlin magazine.

(Editor's note — Some of these statements appeared in Sunday's Post, in an article which pointed out their seditious nature. Having been officially declared seditious, they are not being quoted again).

The Attorney General recalled that almost identical statements were rebuked by the Supreme Court during the World War, and the publications which printed them declared unmailable.

The Attorney General's memorandum concluded:

"It becomes clear by an examination of Social Justice since December 7 that it has made a systematic contribution and unscrupulous attack upon the war effort of our Nation, both civilian and military, Social Justice reproduces in this country the lines of the enemy propaganda war being waged against this country from abroad."

Postmaster General Walker's action was prompt. He sent a registered mail notice to the publishers of the Coughlin weekly, requiring them to appear at 2 p. m. Wednesday, April 29, to show cause why the magazine's second-class mailing privilege shall not be revoked. The notice concluded, "The matter will be heard and disposed of at the time stated, whether or not appearance is made."

Pending this hearing, the solicitor of the department must review every line of the magazine before the Royal Oak postoffice will dispatch a single copy through the mails.

Charles E. Coughlin was one of a crew of opportunists who sprang up in the depression and reaped notoriety by bitter fanatical attacks on those they disliked. An eloquent orator, Coughlin first took to the radio and won a considerable following for his weekly tirades.

Policy Is Jew-Baiting

In 1936 he founded Social Justice and settled down to a policy of Jew-baiting and attacks on England. Later he took up isolationism and pleaded the Nazi case against United States' aid to the nations resisting Adolf Hitler.

Sometime ago Coughlin technically dissociated himself from ownership of the magazine, but it kept on displaying his photograph next to the defeatist headlines of discouraging, cynical articles about the war.

Coughlin is a priest of the Catholic Church. But Agitator Coughlin does not speak for the church.

The prelates of the church have many times declared in formal statements that they neither share nor approve his bitterness and his hatreds. Only last Thursday, Msgr. Edward J. Hickey, chancellor of the archdiocese of Detroit, announced "Social Justice is not a Catholic paper."

Meanwhile, Foreman John S. Gorrell called a two-day recess in the hearings of the special grand jury on Axis agents. Prosecutor Maloney spent yesterday and will be busy today on inquiries in Wilmington, Del. Prosecutor Reddan conferred with investigators and analyzed evidence here.

Freed yesterday from jail, but not from grand jury questioning, was Charles B. Hudson, publisher of an anti-British, Jew-baiting bulletin in Omaha, Nebr. It was Hudson who mailed his bulletin in the same envelope with a speech by Representative Clare Hoffman and a seditious card.

Hudson got the speech from Hoffman—who sent out thousands of copies, off the presses of the Government Printing Office, to the Omaha defeatist and others like him. Hudson refused last week to tell the grand jury who printed the card for him and Justice Jennings Bailey sent him to jail for three months, unless he answered the question.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts yesterday signed an order for Hudson's release, after Prosecutor Reddan had given an assurance that Hudson had answered the question.

Coughlin Issues 'Challenge' to Biddle

Detroit, April 14 (U.P.).—Charles E. Coughlin, denying any affiliation with the publication Social Justice, whose mailing rights have been suspended, tonight challenged Attorney General Francis Biddle to give him an opportunity to "defend the property of Social Justice."

"I am neither editor, owner nor publisher of Social Justice," the radio priest told the United Press in connection with Postmaster General Frank C. Walker's announcement ordering the priest or one of his representatives to appear at Washington April 29 to show cause why the ban should not be made permanent.

"However," he added, "if Attorney General Biddle wishes to summon me to Washington to defend the property of Social Justice, I will not only be happy to do so but will challenge him to the invitation.

"The reason I make this statement is due to the persistent fact that the Jews and Communists and New Dealers of America have been characterizing me as a seditionist, a pro-Nazi and a disgrace to the priesthood of the United States.

"Gladly, therefore, do I meet their challenge if the Attorney General has the intestinal fortitude to issue it."

Prewitt Semmes, attorney for Coughlin and for the Social Justice Publishing Co., owner of the magazine, declined comment on the Postoffice Department order.

"I will say, however," he said, "that it will be fought."

Social Justice was founded by Father Coughlin in February, 1936, as the official publication of his political party—the National Union for Social Justice. Semmes said the radio priest's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Coughlin, of Royal Oak, were "sole stockholders" of the Social Justice Publishing Co., which owns the magazine.

stigation of War Production Chief Donald Nelson and the Undersecretaries of War and Navy, the power to make working capital loans to war contractors was placed directly in the Army, Navy and Maritime Commission. Such lending had formerly been one of the functions of the RFC.

"A Foreign Donald Nelson"

Yesterday's order had the effect of making Wallace—or the executive director of BEW, Milo Perkins—a sort of "a foreign Donald Nelson" in the economic field.

Under the order, the BEW or the corporations which it creates will have final authority in issuing directives to other agencies to buy foreign materials, even including those received in return for lease-lend monies.

The Wallace agency was also instructed to deal directly with other United Nations' economic warfare agencies—thus by-passing the State Department — and to arrange through the State Department the sending abroad of its own technical, engineering, and economic representatives.

Difficulty Overcome

In the past, the BEW has experienced difficulty in arranging such missions. Delegates have been responsible to the State Department rather than to the BEW. The order, however, declares that such missions in the future will be "responsible to the board."

In the foreign field, BEW will have the double responsibility of obtaining materials for America's own military and stockpile purposes, and of "preclusive buying," to prevent materials from falling into the hands of the Axis.

As one board official explained to the Chicago Sun, "this does for raw materials what the Executive order setting up the WPB did for production. From here out, our representatives in the world markets can take out their check-books and snap up supplies needed for our survival immediately upon discovery of those supplies and without red tape and haggling over market prices. The objective is simply to keep these supplies out of the hands of the Axis and to get them into our own factories for processing into guns, tanks, planes and all varieties of weapons."

At his press conference yesterday, President Roosevelt explained that the order was to centralize the policies governing foreign purchases. He explained that this did not necessarily mean that the BEW would carry out the whole program. Execution could be left to other agencies, he indicated. The BEW, however, would direct foreign purchases, he said.

PAN-AMERICAN PROGRAM—A Pan-American Day program was a special feature of Sylvia Milrod's "Victory Starts at Home," which radio station WINX broadcast yesterday from the Chilean Embassy. Participating were Carloe Sera, Senorita Christina Michels, Patricia Dorado, Lufe Senoret, Isabel Recinos, Frank Henjus, Jorge Lopez and Manuel Brunet. The program was sponsored by the Inter-American student forum of the Pan-American Union; and arranged by Frank Henius. They sang "God Bless America," in Spanish the winner in the long run . . . I hope that next year we will be in an even better state than we are in 1942."

Talking about the post-war period and the part the Western Hemisphere is to play in it, the President said:

"When it comes to cleaning up the mess and the end of this war, after the Axis is defeated, we will again have a hemispheric council around here to see what we are going to do all over the world, because we will have a very great voice in preventing, in the future, an attack on our American civilization."

In discussing a name for the war, the President said that most of the suggestions that had come to him were too long. The one word that occurred to him, he said, was "survival."

"The Survival War"

"The Survival War," he continued. "That is what it comes pretty close to being—the survival of our civilization, the survival of democracy, the survival of a hemisphere—the newest hemisphere of all of them—which has developed in its own ways."

It was recalled here in this connection that, a year or so ago, when Prime Minister Winston Churchill was asked to state Britain's war aims, he was reported to have answered in one word: "Survival."

Pan-American Day was celebrated throughout the hemisphere yesterday. The occasion found all but two of the 21 nations, Argentine and Chile, either allied with the United States in the war on the Axis powers or in a position where they had severed diplomatic relations with them.

In a Spanish broadcast to South America, Vice President Wallace said last night that, while maintaining the importance of independence "today we are celebrating the ideal of interdependence."

"'Pan Americanism is a new contribution to world statescraft," he said. "'It is the reconciliation in a practical way of the simultaneous need for independence and interdependence. It substitutes for the balance of power theory of Europe which has continually inflicted war on the world the concept of understanding, cooperation and peace.

"While the theory of the balance of power was based on an erroneous notion that the well-being of a nation is founded on the weakness of other nations, Pan Americanism asserts that the well-being of one American nation is closely interwoven with the well-being of all the others."

U. S. Troops Harass Foe in Philippines

Small Bands Raid Jap Lines And Outposts

Over the 1000-mile length of the Philippines yesterday, little bands of American-Filipino soldiers kept up a running fight with the enemy, raiding, ambushing and pounding superior Japanese forces.

In southern Mindanao, a raider detachment surprised a Japanese truck column, the War Department announced, dealing out heavy casualties and getting away without losing a man.

Similar units made several attacks on enemy positions in the mountains of northern Luzon, a late communique reported. The assaults on the weakly held Japanese garrisons were described by the Army as "successful."

Cebu Line Reestablished

Communications were reestablishe during the day between Lieut. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright's headquarters on Corregidor and the newly invaded island of Cebu. The commander of the American-Filipino troops on this important island reported that heavy fighting was in progress, and that his small force was giving the strong Jap army stubborn resistance.

There was sharp fighting also in the Digos area of Mindanao, and Corregidor's guns dueled at intervals with high-flying enemy bombers and Jap batteries across Manila Bay.

The late War Department communique also disclosed that the little American "mosquito" boat, which sunk a Japanese light cruiser during the landing operations off Cebu last weekend, had gotten away scotfree after its David and Goliath battle.

After sinking the Kuma-class Jap cruiser near the southern tip of Cebu, the department said, the 77-foot motor torpedo boat was itself attacked by an enemy destroyer. The latter fired salvo after salvo at the American boat, but it managed to get away.

Big Guns Duel

Japanese batteries on Bataan Peninsula and in Cavite Province continued to rain shells on the four American harbor forts and the latter hammered back at the foe.

Four times yesterday Jap bombers flew over Corregidor and loosed their eggs, bringing to 22 the number of air raids the island citadel has endured since Saturday. There were some casualties among the fort's defenders, the War Department said, but only slight damage done to military installations.

While there has been little word from the island of Cebu since 12,000 Japanese troops landed Saturday, it is evident that the enemy has taken Cebu City, its capital and the second city of the Philippines.

No Word From Bataan

There was no word here of the fate of the heroes of Bataan, whose epic stand against overwhelming odds was finally overcome last week.

Tokyo, however, claimed that 40,000 prisoners, including 15 generals, were captured during the three months of fighting. The Associated Press reported that a Japanese broadcast of an imperial headquarters communique declared that 6700 of the total were American troops and the remainder Filipinos.

Among the generals listed as captured were Maj. Gen. Edward P. King, jr., identified as the commander of the forces on Bataan; Maj. Gen. Albert M. Jones, described as commander of the First Army Corps; Maj. Gen. George M. Parker, jr., of the Second Army Corps, and a Maj. Gen. Francisco, identified as the head of the Filipino troops.

The Japanese communique said the following booty was taken: 196 guns, including heavy artillery; 320 machine guns, 500 automatic rifles, 10,000 rifles, 124 tanks and armored cars, 220 cars and other arms and munitions.

American Aid Bolsters China, Diplomat Says

Appreciation of efforts which are being made here and throughout the country to raise seven million dollars for aid to Chinese was expressed yesterday by Liu Chieh, counselor of the Republic's Embassy in Washington.

Addressing an organization luncheon of the District committee for United China Relief, Liu said that America's sympathy and moral support—no less than her dollars for medicines, equipment and social rehabilitation—have helped his countrymen to come through nearly five years of warfare with morale high and hope undimmed.

Mrs. Maurice D. Moore described the many ways in which voluntary subscriptions will be put to use by our Oriental ally—to buy anesthesia, to supply disinfectants for prevention of pestilence, to make refugees self-supporting through establishment of small industries, to save injured and undernourished children.

Sister of Henry Luce, the publisher, Mrs. Moore is a writer and lecturer, and recently returned from the Orient.

Other speakers were Daniel C. Roper, former Secretary of Commerce, who warned that "for China to fail is for us to lose in the Pacific;" and Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University.

Dr. Wilson Compton, chairman of the campaign in Washington, presided over the organization luncheon, held at the Carlton Hotel. He read a telegram from Paul G. Hoffman, national chairman of United China Relief, which said subscriptions of $75,000 each have been received from General Motors Corporation and United States Steel Corporation and $25,000 from Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.

President Repeats: MacArthur Heads Southwest Pacific

President Roosevelt reemphasized at a press conference yesterday that Gen. Douglas MacArthur had full authority over the forces of the United Nations in the southwestern Pacific, including naval power.

The repetition was occasioned by a press conference remark that there was confusion in Australia over the extent of MacArthur's authority and over what naval forces were at his disposal.

Does that include New Zealand?" someone inquired.

That question, he said, posed a difficult problem which might be complicated by a public statement saying where the Pacific area begins and ends.

For operational reasons, he said, he could not say whether New Zealand and other islands in that general region, including New Caledonia and the Fijis, were in one zone or the other. It is better to have the enemy guess than to tell them, he declared.

President Challenges Critics

400,000 trained youth annually.

...ked about farm subsidies, Mr. Roosevelt said that as some farm prices got near parity, subsidies would not be necessary.

CCC Defended

The President also defended the Civilian Conservation Corps. Reminded that Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, had said it was not necessary to train people to fight forest fires, he said there were some isolated places in the United States—Idaho, for example—where there were thousands of acres of forests where there were no volunteers to fight fires.

In response to a question about Laval's return to power in the Vichy Government, the President referred the reporters to the State Department. The State Department was silent.

The question of whether Gen. Douglas MacArthur had command of naval forces in his area of command was again brought up, and the President observed that a few newspapers had completely falsified what he had said recently on this matter.

Controls Navy Forces

These papers, he continued, said that command of the Pacific was under Gen. MacArthur. He emphasized that the Southwest Pacific was under MacArthur's command, and that in this area the Hero of Bataan had full authority over all forces, including naval forces.

He was asked if this included New Zealand.

The President replied that this matter—the question of where the area of command began and ended—was a problem. For operational reasons, he said, he could not say whether certain regions fell into this or that zone. It would be a good idea, he said, to keep the enemy guessing. And in the meantime the United Nations would follow a rule of common sense.

Coffee Rationing . A 'Possibility' . . . .

Rationing of coffee was described by a Price Administration spokesman yesterday as a "possibility, in view of the shipping situation."

"Nothing has been decided yet," the offical declared, adding that "comparatively little thought has been given the subject in view of other more important matters."

It was reported that the National Coffee Association advised its members Monday that Government orders were pending which would restrict roasted coffee sales to 80 per cent of those made last year. A War Production Board official, commenting on the report, said the association had acted independently "and not on the basis of any authoritative statement given out here."

Slowdowns on Navy Contracts Are Charged by Sen. Byrd

Knox was the second Administration witness in two days to declare for the principle of maintaining the closed shop at status quo, Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, having similarly testified Monday. Both opposed flat percentage limits on profits. On the heels of their testimony it was learned that a general labor "freezing" amendment will be offered to the Connally plant seizure bill if it is called up in the Senate on Monday.

The Navy report on "slowdowns" for the week ended April 11 was supplied Senator Byrd by direction of Rear Admiral C. W. Fisher, director of naval shore establishments, according to the Virginian's statement. Fisher earlier in the day had appeared with Knox before the House Naval Affairs Committee.

The slowdowns were variously attributed by the report to labor-management difficulties and demands for a closed shop and wage increases. In one plant management was blamed for inefficient operation and it was said all of the employes in several sections, including the foremen, were enemy aliens. In another plant, the report said, a slowdown has resulted in closing the plant.

Plants Listed

The plants were listed by the Navy as follows:

"Atlas Press Co., Kalamazoo, Mich.; status: 25 per cent slowdown has been in effect since February 25, due to SWOC demand for closed shop and wage increases.

"Aluminum Co. of America, Detroit, Mich.; status: This company has been operating at approximately 40 per cent of capacity and it is alleged that the local leaders of the C. I. O. are responsible.

"Bendix Aviation Co., South Bend, Ind.; status: 75 per cent production exists at this plant as a result of workers on each shift reporting for work a half an hour late and stopping a half hour before the shift ends. It is also reported that the management is not using all available machines.

"Brewster Aeronautical Corp., Long Island City, N. Y.; status: This plant is operating at 40 per cent of capacity due to labor leaders' demand for slowdown, and also because of inefficient management. It is reported that in several sections of the plant all of the employes, including the foremen, are enemy aliens.

"Curtiss-Wright Corp., Columbus, Ohio; status: The Inspector of Naval Aircraft reports that U. A. W.-C. I. O. local labor leaders were responsible for constant discontent of the workers caused by statements that they were overworked, the hours too long, and wages inadequate. Plant operating about 60 per cent of capacity.

"Hayes Manufacturing Corporation, Grand Rapids, Mich.; status: This company is an important prime contractor and also an important supplier of aircraft parts for Brewster Aeronautical Corporation. The plant is operating at 65 per cent of capacity and it appears that the primary cause of the trouble is the unions' demand for wage increases. However, management reports that continual changes in specifications by prime contractors is also a contributing cause.

Shelmar Products Co., Mount Vernon, Ohio; status: As a result of 90 per cent slowdown beginning April 6, company has had to close plant. Issue, wage increases.

"Thorrez-Maes Manufacturing Co., Jackson, Mich.; status: Since the men returned to work on February 11 after a prolonged strike, a slowdown has resulted. NLRB held an election March 31 with C. I. O. winning. However, the election has not solved the difficulties."

Knox Admits Some Slowdowns

Knox before the House Naval Committee conceded there were some "slowdowns" but he said that better than 99 per cent of labor employed in war plants have been working without interruption and that stoppages since the Pearl Harbor attack were "practically negligible."

Knox, in his testimony, slapped at proposed percentage limits on profits as a House-Senate conference committee prepared to organize today to work out a profits control formula. Knox recommended that the legislative approach be limited to excess profits taxation. He said this would provide more comprehensive profits treatment, reaching subcontracts as well as direct contracts.

He warned against complete elimination of the "profit motive" and said that only through taxation could profits be dealt with, with some relation to capital investment and prior earnings. But taxation did not provide the complete solution he said. He, therefore, recommended that legislation wait until Government war agencies have time to collaborate and prepare a plan.

The Secretary said he has been hopeful the War Labor Board will voluntarily achieve an adjournment of the closed shop issue for the duration of the war.

GE-Krupp Pact Helped Hitler, Inquiry Told

cooperated in this endeavor, he said.

Lewin charged that, to carry out this aim, General Electric and Krupp worked together to squeeze all competitors out of business, leaving General Electric and Carboloy Co., Inc., its subsidiary, alone in the field.

General Electric, he said, fixed a price for tungsten carbide of $453 a pound, or about one and one-half times the value of gold, although the material before the agreement between General Electric and Krupp, made in 1928, had been selling in the United States for $50 a pound.

Lewin said the purpose of this "prohibitive price," was to so restrict the American market, and to make it so unattractive to other suppliers, that they "would consent, in time, to be eliminated altogether."

"These activities had that effect," Lewin said. "No one could sell any great amounts of this material at such a price no matter how good it was, and no matter how much American industry might need it."

General Electric reduced prices for cemented tungsten carbide only after it had gained a practical monopoly in 1936, he declared. The net result of restrictions on American output, he said, was that German manufacturers sold in the 12 years from 1928 to 1940, 12 times as much of the material as was sold in the United States.

Lewin testified at hearing by the Patents Committee on the Bone-O'Mahoney-La Follette bill authorizing the President to commandeer patents for the duration of the war.

Lewin declared the patent tie-up between General Electric and Krupp is still in effect although now inoperative, and that G. E. is obligated to return patents, which Krupp contributed to the patent pool that the two concerns formed to control tungsten carbide and similar processes.

Indictments have been returned against G. E. and subsidiary companies under the antitrust laws, Lewin recalled, although the case is said to have been held up at the request of officials in charge of the war effort, who feared that prosecution of G. E. at this time might slow up war production.

Lewin urged the enactment of legislation changing patent laws in such a way as to prevent restrictive agreements, such as that between G. E. and Krupp.

As a result of this particular patent tie-up, he said, the United States is now at a disadvantage "in comparison with its enemies" in the use of this highly valuable material, although G. E. has expanded our production by 3600 per cent to meet war demands.

Briton to Discuss Nation's Food Supply

The British food supply will be discussed this afternoon at 3 o'clock by R. B. Brand, head of the British Food Mission in North America, in the Department of Agriculture auditorium, it was announced yesterday.

This will be the last lecture in the Food Front series.

Frank G. Boudreau, chairman of the food and nutrition board of the National Research Council, also will speak.

Tickets are available at 2170 Florida Avenue, and at Room 1031, south building of Agriculture.

Invasion Fear Gives Germans The War Jitters

By the Associated Press

London, April 14.—Certainty of an Allied invasion and uncertainty of when and where it will come have given the Germans a pronounced case of war jitters, it was indicated today by reports from Berlin via neutral capitals.

While the Nazi big shots apparently are trying to cover up their fears with a display of bravado, expert opinion here held that there was no question but what Adolf Hitler's pet weapon—the war of nerves—had attacked his own high command in virulent form.

The current visit to Britain by Gen. George C. Marshall, United States chief of staff, and Harry Hopkins, close adviser to President Roosevelt, is the immediate cause of the German fears, according to the neutral dispatches.

The Germans themselves practically admitted this last night, when the Berlin radio asserted that Marshall and Hopkins were under Presidential orders to explore the prospects of establishing a western European front.

"We are expecting an invasion at any time. Let them try it; we are ready," a high German spokesman was quoted today by the Berlin correspondent of the Stockholm Demokraten.

This, said informed sources in London, was a form of "whistling in the dark," for the Germans actually are afraid an invasion of the continent may come at some spot where they are not prepared for it. Adding to the German uneasiness was Gen. Marshall's series of conferences with Lord Louis Mountbatten, chief of the British Commandos and an expert on invasion procedures.

British Told to Move

That the Germans are making whatever preparations they can is apparent. Last weekend Nazi authorities had ordered the occupied Atlantic port city of Brest to expect a state of siege without further notice.

The Germans have put thousands of laborers to the task of building new gun placements and strengthening already formidable defenses along the French coast.

The laborers were seen plainly today, through field glasses, from Dover, some 20 miles across the Channel.

Military informants said that the Nazi guns massed along the Channel coast have a total fire power equal to that of a fleet of battleships and form a concentrated mass of artillery more powerful than in any sector of the German front facing the Russians.

A source with reliable contacts on the Continent said today the Germans recently made detailed plans for defense against invasion at a meeting of all district leaders in occupied France.

The Paris radio said today that British residents had been ordered to move from the French Riviera on the Mediterranean.

The correspondent of the Geneva paper La Suisse said there was "open talk" in Germany about possible British military action in western Europe.

This nervous condition has been readily transmitted to Italy. The Rome radio blustered last night that Canadian troops had been selected for an invasion of Italy but that "the Axis powers have made all preparations for such a step, which was taken well into account as early as 1940. British propaganda therefore does not need to bother with threats to molest us in order to affect our nerves."

"The Italians obviously are flying a kite," said military sources in Britain. "They put out these reports in the hope we will give something away."

Meanwhile the unrest in Axis-occupied territories continues. Stockholm dispatches said 14 Belgians had been condemned to death at Ghent for sabotage, assassinations and anti-Nazi propaganda. The British radio said Belgian patriots had dynamited a train at a junction of three rail lines.

OLD GRAND-DAD

Head of the Bourbon Family

THE truest words ever written about this whiskey were, "I'd know that taste in the dark." For it kisses the lips with an ardor that glows in the memory, and it warms the tongue as a sunbeam warms a Kentucky meadow on a day in June. Try its nectar for yourself, and you'll know why Old Grand-Dad deserves its fame as Head of the Bourbon Family.

U. S. Urged to Save Auto Dealers Now

Let Government Take Cars It Needs And Release Rest at Once, Woodrum Says

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Demands that the Government stop automobile rationing, and attacks on the Office of Price Administration for its conduct of the program for conservation of existing auto stocks, yesterday were heard in a House stirred by fears of financial disaster for thousands of motor car dealers.

In the general clamor for Federal action to rescue dealers from economic death, Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, ranking member of the Appropriations Committee, made this specific proposal:

"I would hate to see the Government get control of all these cars with the temptation that there would be to send them out to departments where they are not needed. What should be done, and it should be done immediately . . . is for the Government to take the cars that the Government needs, and they know what they need, out of these frozen stocks and immediately release the rest of them."

That Government agencies take what cars they need—"and they know what they need"—from stocks frozen as a phase of cooperation of the auto industry to war production, and then "immediately release" the rest of the cars.

Taking advantage of a salvo of bitter criticism set off by Representative Keefe (Republican), of Wisconsin, Representative Hendricks (Democrat), of Florida, sought to rally support for his bill to "authorize and direct" the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to utilize its financial resources to aid dealers.

Asks Immediate Hearing

Hendricks called for immediate hearings on his bill by the House Banking Committee. He explained that the RFC has authority to purchase cars bought by dealers after January 1, but lacks power to assist dealers on automobiles bought before that date. Most of the cars in dealers' hands were acquired prior to January 16, he stated.

Keefe questioned the legality of the freeze order, declaring that immobilization of car stocks on dealers' floors placed on them the burden of depreciation, overhead and other costs, without giving them an opportunity for obtaining funds through car sales. Imposition of this burden by the Government, he said, constituted, in a manner, a violation of the constitutional prohibition against property seizure without just compensation.

The Government, he argued, should take the cars off dealers' hands. Mere loans, he declared, will not suffice, because continued expenses will make it just as difficult for dealers to meet financial obligations to the Government as to private finance companies.

Keefe charged the whole rationing system to be in "state of chaos," with sales to certified purchasers so slow that not only are dealers being "eaten up" with overhead charges, but finance companies, in many cases, are taking possession of cars they are unable to sell.

Blame Put on OPA

Because of its freeze order, shouted Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, OPA is responsible for "seeing that these men are now faced with financial ruin through an edict of the Government of the United States."

"The American people ought to know that it was an agency of the executive branch of the Government that issued those orders," declared Representative Pittenger (Republican), of Minnesota. He pronounced Keefe's speech an expose of OPA's "inefficiency and total lack of appreciation of the problems of the American people."

Woodrum said the Wisconsin legislator was "performing a great service by emphasizing this situation which I think is critical and inexcusable." Remarking that Congress soon will have appropriated "everything that the Army, the Navy and the Government needs presently for transportation," Woodrum declared:

Educator Who Once Asked More NYA Aid Blasts It at Hearing

The president of a tiny Arkansas college yesterday told the Senate Education and Labor Committee that the National Youth Administration and the Civilian Conservation Corps represent "tremendous" Governmental waste "in no degree essential to winning the war," but Democratic committeemen partial to the agencies sought to damage his testimony by challenging his motives, his ethics and the academic standing of his institution.

George S. Benson is an old campaigner against NYA and the CCC whose abolition is proposed in the McKellar bill on which the committee is conducting hearing. He is president of Harding College, Searcy, Ark., 20 of whose students last January asked Treasury Secretary Morgenthau to eliminate Harding College from the NYA payroll and divert its appropriation to the Nation's defense.

Senator Rosier (Democrat), of West Virginia, confronted the witness with the copy of a letter in which, he said, Benson protested to a State NYA director against proposed reduction in NYA funds for the college.

Rosier said the letter was dated December 29, 1941. Benson demanded that he be permitted to examine the copy. He observed that it bore the day, but not the year in which the original was alleged to have been written. Benson said he was certain that the letter was written much earlier than December, 1941, and that, anyway, it had reference to NYA students the administration asked the college to take.

Rosier then flourished a full-page advertisement from the Omaha World Herald urging abolition of the agencies and signed by Benson. Observing that such ads of which, he said, this was one of a series of three, cost about $1600 apiece, Rosier remarked that "people don't spend large sums of money for nothing."

The Senator noted that the advertisement purported to have been financed by "public spirited citizens." He wanted to know who some of these citizens were.

Benson responded that the newspaper owner, named Harding, but having no connection with the college, asked him to write copy for the ad after hearing him attack NYA and CCC in a Rotary Club address. He said the message was his, he wanted to get it before the people, and he didn't bother about financial arrangements.

Rosier challenged Benson's "ethical reasoning" in protesting reduction in an NYA allotment while attacking the agency, and in permitting use of his name in the advertisements. Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, committee chairman, tried several subtle jibes at Benson's "public-spirited citizens," then blurted:

"Frankly, it sounds like a fairy tale to me."

"I hope as a result of this discussion that it will not be forgotten that the object of my visit here is to urge economy," Benson remarked. "Why throw doubts on my motives rather than discuss the issue?"

Benson likened CCC and NYA to "weights" on the ankles of a Nation that is trying to "run this most important and crucial of all races upon which the outcome of all civilization depends."

Miss L. B. Clark Dies; Veteran Va. Teacher

Pulaski, Va., April 14 (AP).—Miss Laura Bell Clark, widely known in Virginia educational circles, died here last night following an extended illness. Miss Clark taught in 41 Virginia schools and was Latin instructor at Appalachia 14 years.

She is survived by a brother, J. C. Clark, of Roanoke, and a sister, Mrs. J. R. Andrews, of Richmond. Funeral services will be conducted tomorrow at 11 a. m. at the Christian Church at Pulaski.

LAND OF THE FREE —TO SERVE!

ON A THOUSAND fronts our women are enrolled in the task of winning the war.

Today Mrs. America is doing double duty! In every city, town and hamlet her busy fingers are knitting for the boys in Service. Her boundless energies are devoted to the Red Cross, the Nurse's Aid and countless other activities. Right now, as part of our Victory program, more women are working in factories than ever before.

For every housewife, whether she's stitching parachutes or doing war work at home, there still remains the all-important job of protecting her family's well-being at a time when the nation's high health standards and morale must be maintained.

So whatever her war efforts, she is still on the job in 30,000,000 kitchens providing for the health and happiness of her family!

In the dual role of wife and citizen, Mrs. America has a valuable ally in the House of Heinz and other makers of quality prepared foods. Since the famous 57 Varieties are ready to serve, they save time every day... lessen her work in the kitchen... provide more hours to give her country!

It is because American women are so free in their homes that they are able to serve their country so well today.

For there's spare time in every Heinz ready-to-serve food on the grocer's shelves today!

It would take hours to duplicate Heinz foods, that are ready to serve in a few minutes. In addition, preparation time is eliminated—fuel and shopping effort saved!

For instance, soup-making in the home takes an average of 4 hours. For many years, Heinz Soups have saved all but a few minutes of this time. Similarly, baked beans require a day and a half for preparation . . . but ever since Heinz Oven-Baked Beans were introduced, only heating before serving has been necessary. And Heinz Jellies and Relishes eliminate tedious days of household canning every year.

So Heinz foods are saving and will continue to save millions of kitchen hours for the women of America—precious hours that can be devoted to the needs of the nation!

Prepared in the small-batch, old-fashioned way, Heinz foods are ready to help you keep right on setting the finest table in the world. Heinz Tomato Ketchup, Chili Sauce and Tomato Juice are rich in the homespun flavors America has always loved. The same is true of Heinz Pickles, Relishes, Steamed Puddings and Jellies —Apple Butter and Peanut Butter. Heinz Baby Foods —like all the 57 Varieties—are made of the highest-quality ingredients the land affords.

And because we have been working constantly on the development of new methods, new products and new packages, women everywhere can continue to depend on us for many delicious, time-saving foods their families need and want!

For more than 73 years nourishing Heinz foods have graced the tables of America. Today they mean more than flavorful, nutritious eating. They also represent a ready source of the vital extra hours your country asks of you now.

That "Victory Caravan" Not the One That Rested

Army-Navy Benefit Troupe Tackles Big Job; Saroyan Serving Novitiate on One-Reeler; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

WHEN THAT HOLLYWOOD VICTORY CARAVAN you have been hearing so much about—or have you?—arrives in Washington to inaugurate its tour of 14 key cities, in the Capitol Theater on Thursday night, April 30, it will steam into town in typical Hollywood de luxe style aboard a special eight-car train.

JAMES CAGNEY

Throughout the junket, this trainload of talent will be placed at the complete disposal of the Army and Navy authorities in charge of the relief funds for whose benefit the tour is being made, and at no time will stars, musicians, technicians, supernumeraries or anybody else concerned be permitted to indulge in any extracurricular activities.

Despite the fact that stars whose aggregate incomes exceed two million dollars a year will be included in the company of more than 100, there will be no "top billing" to haggle over by those participating in the two-and-a-half to three-hour rehearsed musical revue, being produced and directed by Mark Sandrich, noted film director. All will be on an equal footing in a common cause. A 30-piece orchestra will be under the direction of Alfred Newman, one of filmdom's top men in the musical field.

For this unique occasion, Loew's Capitol will be scaled from $1.50 to $20 per seat. At these tariffs, the Capitol's 3200-odd seats, if all filled, will yield the Army-Navy Relief Funds a round $26,000, on paid admissions alone. It is estimated that on its entire tour the Caravan will play to a gross attendance of approximately 200,000 people, with total box-office receipts in excess of $500,000.

As already made known, Jimmy Cagney and Bert Lahr were the first topflight stars to sign up for the trek. They will be joined by a list of other celebrities that will knock your eye out. Announcement of the complete roster and the opening of the ticket sale will be popping into print any day now.

Surprising how many residenters apparently have been awaiting an opportunity to subject their dancing to a free clinical analysis. When the Arthur Murray Studios launched the innovation of the gratuitous dissection in the promenade lounge of the Earle Theater Monday morning, Studio Manager Ethel Fistiere and her associates found themselves confronted by a crowd of soldiers, sailors, the jitterbugging set, creaky-jointed waltzers of forgotten generations and, in fact, a fair sprinkling of everybody else with two feet and a yen to exercise them according to the book. From 9:30 a. m. until the regular program went on at 11, the Earle was filled with the continuous commotion of the juke box and the gliding gondolas. The terpsichorean tryouts will continue at the same hours through tomorrow. "Murray-in-a-hurry" is right, just as the song says.

Genius Gets a Workout

William Saroyan, that shrinking violet who will modestly admit that he is the hottest thing in the contemporary theater at the drop of anybody's hint, is breaking in as a writer-producer-director on the M-G-M lot by bending his genius in the direction of a one-reel Miniature bearing the title of "The Corner Store" and adapted from his own story of "A Number of the Poor." While this is Metro's first invasion of the literary field to capture a Saroyan, it is its fourth in quest of short-story material suitable for short-reel uses on the screen. "The Corner Store" will take its place alongside Albert Maltz' "The Happiest Man on Earth," Edgar Allan Poe's classic "The Tell-Tale Heart" and Frank Stockton's "The Lady or the Tiger." It will beat the pants off any of them, if you ask its author-director!

Just as you might have known, Ernst Lubitsch's production of "To Be or Not to Be," costarring the late Carole Lombard and Jack Benny, by vote of the National Screen Council was declared the winner of the Boxoffice Blue Ribbon Award for March, as the best feature for Nation-wide consumption released during that month.

Well, you can't have everything. The Loew hierarchy screened "To the Shores of Tripoli" for the guys and gals of the drama desks yesterday while we were out at the ballyard lending a lung to the chores of Triple-I League graduates, or something.

District civic, professional and social organizations are cooperating in the United China Relief drive by showing to their members of "Western Front," a documentary screen subject dealing with military and civilian activities inside Free China, running 22 minutes and available in 16-mm. film. It was especially produced for the China Relief organization and makes clear why China is the "western front" not only of the United States, but of all the United Nations engaged in the war. Arrangements can be made for its exhibition without charge in small auditoriums, clubrooms, churches and schoolrooms by contacting Room 1022, Investment Building, EX-1990.

You-Probably-Didn't-Fool-the-Boss-at-That Note

Serves you right. You should have saved your grandmother's sudden demise for later in the season!

Kid Journalists In Press Comedy

"Going to Press," newest "Our Gang" comedy, was released March 7. The one-reeler pictures the attempts made by the Gang to publish a community newspaper. Gang members, "Froggy" Laughlin, "Spanky" McFarland, "Mickey" Bobby Blake, and "Buckwheat" Thomas head the cast. Darryl Hickman plays a featured role.

A Beauty Returns to Screen

DOLORES COSTELLO,

long one of the reigning beauties of the cinema, who comes out of several years' retirement to appear in the principal feminine role in Orson Welles' RKO-Radio production of "The Magnificent Ambersons." Mr. Welles supervised completion of the picture by remote control, while enjoying a tropical outing in South America. It will be coming along to a local screen in due course

Cagney Not Easily Pleased by Cagney

Shorn of its trappings and fripperies, Stage 2 on the Warner Bros. lot was as deglamorized as an old livery stable, and not a great deal cleaner. If you sat down you were likely to arise with dust on the full of your pants. Only Jimmy Cagney didn't sit down.

He danced, and danced, and danced again as he went over the routine of the "Give My Regards to Broadway" number in the George M. Cohan musical, "Yankee Doodle Dandy." Everyone watching thought that Cagney was doing the difficult, stiff-kneed, broken time Cohan technique with consummate skill.

Everybody liked it the first time, and the fifth, and the fifteenth, and the fiftieth—that is, everybody but Cagney.

All agreed that may have something to do with the fact that Cagney has remained a roaring success as long as he has.

Eye-Opener

One of Dorothy Lamour's costumes in "The Fleet's In" tops any sarong she ever wore for devastating effect. It is a straples black sequin gown split to above the knee on both sides.

HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood Regenerates 'The Man'

Hollywood, Cal., April 14. Monty Woolley, the terrible tempered Mr. Whiteside of "The Man Who Came to Dinner," is being regenerated by Hollywood. When he first came out several months ago, press and publicity men dug in for a seige of fret and temperament, for that reputation had preceded him. They waited, and except for one memorable eruption when the Warner boys exploited his beard at the expense of his personality, nothing happened. The fiery gentleman was most affable with the press, said he didn't know where the heck he got the reputation of being otherwise. Neither did the newshawks. And now that he's playing with a group of children in "The Pied Piper," the willful Mr. Woolley has gone plumb tame.

MONTY WOOLLEY

Why, after watching the kids pull gags April Fool's Day on the set, he called his agent, told him Twentieth Century had started kicking him around and he was blowing the town immediately. When the agent got to the hair-pulling stage, Monty shouted "April Fool!"—then added quietly, "First time I've thought of doing a thing like that in 30 years."

Ginger Rogers has raved so over the country around her Rogue River ranch she's about to be crowded out. Eugene Pallette and George Murphy have both bought in the vicinity, and Director Henry Hathaway, upon completion of "Ten Gentleman from West Point," took a week's vacation up there and snaffled a mile and a half frontage on the river, directly across from her.

Wally Beery, who prides himself on his ability in the culinary arts, yanked out a gasoline stove from his station wagon and proceeded to broil a steak for little Darryl Hickman while they were on location with "Jackass Mail." Process took half an hour and Darryl stood around handing Wally enthusiastic comments till the steak was done. But when Wally handed it over to him, he said, "Oh, I'm sorry, Mr. Beery—not for me. I don't eat meat."

Oliver Hardy, gentleman farmer, has given his hens the bum's rush and converted his concrete chicken house into a private theater seating 150. When Stan Laurel protested, Hardy said, "Listen—I'm going to have eggs in this chicken house if I have to lay 'em myself!"

By the way, Hardy is working in "A Hunting We Will Go" on the same stage of the old Fox Western Avenue lot where 20 years ago he was introduced to Stan Laurel.

Ozzie Nelson and his band are certainly on a wartime schedule. Each morning they record two hours before reporting for "Strictly in the Groove," then grab a bit of supper and appear at a Hollywood night club. Twice a week they rehearse, and put on their radio show. And Ozzie's writing a book in his spare time called "I Come Home with the Milkman." Hmmm! Better call it "I Come Home with the Bacon," Ozzie!

When Jim Davis, police commissioner of Shreveport, La., who wrote hit song, "You Are My Sunshine," came out here to make records, Universal grabbed him for Ozzie's picture and wanted him for four more, but Jim said, "Not till I catch up with my fishing!"

On way to airport, friend asked him what his wife thought of his becoming a movie actor. "My gosh!" said Jim, "I forgot to tell her!"

John Carroll moves over to the Republic lot for "The Flying Tigers," and will probably have John Wayne as teammate. Wayne, incidentally, has taken an option on "Tall in the Saddle," which has been appearing in the SEP, and will star in it if he can find a producer.

Instead of burning her sarong, as Dorothy Lamour did, Maria Montez has assumed a more scholarly attitude. She's sending hers to the boys at Harvard—but Maria won't be in it.

Words to the Wise

New York, April 14.

PAUL V. McNUTT: Monday's report in Washington was that there would be a last-minute switch in the manpower mobilization setup, and that you might get the job . . . Joe DAVIES: Harry Hopkins isn't expected to remain in London—but to continue on to Russia. It's doubtful, though, whether Gen. Marshall will accompany him there . . . F. D. R.: Donald M. Nelson was told by his doctor that his health is as excellent as ever, despite the tremendous responsibility assigned him. "How can you keep so fit, with such a big job on your shoulders?" Nelson was asked. "I don't look at it as a big job," replied Nelson, "but as a lot of little jobs" . . . LIEUT. COL. DARRYL ZANUCK: Jack Warner also will be commissioned in the Army.

JACK BENNY

LELAND STOWE: Every American foreign correspondent in the world soon will receive 100 cigars each. They were mailed by the Overseas Press Club—to hundreds of working correspondents on all fronts . . . ORLANDO WEBER: Are you one of the secret backers of the recently-revived Technocracy movement? . . . JOE RYAN: Jim Braddock, the former heavyweight champ who is enlisting in the Coast Guard, will be used as a liaison man between the Coast Guard and the longshoremen. Braddock is a former longshoreman . . . WILL HAYS: Lew Ayres will be released soon, and enter a medical unit of the Army. Ayres was sincere in his conscientious objection. For the past few years he never ate meat or chicken—no food from an animal which had to be killed.

JACK BENNY: Harry Conn, who used to write your programs, is cynical about Broadway success. "Take Danny Kaye, as an example," said Conn, when he learned that the brilliant star of "Let's Face It" recently had to go to a hospital, between shows. "In only one year, Danny went from the Borscht Circuit to the handsomest suite at Mount Sinai Hospital." . . . JOHN STEINBECK: Twentieth Century-Fox probably will buy the movie rights to your play "The Moon Is Down" . . . THURMAN ARNOLD: The Truman Committee has obtained evidence which will rekindle the revelations about synthetic rubber production.

NEWSPAPER GUILD: There's some mystery about the resignations at the Foreign Correspondents Association—the writers who represent foreign newspapers, in Washington . . . LEOPOLD STOKOWSKI: Eugene List, who was hailed by the music critics as America's best young pianist—when he performed with your orchestra and gave recitals at Carnegie Hall—quietly enlisted as a private in the United States Army . . . DON BUDGE: Corpl. Peter Witt, of Fort Bragg—who was junior national tennis champ of Germany, and who played at Wimbledon—did a camp broadcast, "They Live Forever." Then the Donovan Committee had him shortwave it to Germany.

JIM FLY: Despite the difference between the National Association of Broadcasters and your Federal Communications Commission, the N. A. B. will invite you to address its Cleveland convention next month. You may pick your own time and subject.

Four New Films Join Coming Week's Many Holdover Bills

"TO THE SHORES OF TRIPOLI," in the Palace's new film the Marines get a Technicolor salute filmed at San Diego. John Payne, Maureen O'Hara and Randolph Scott have the dominant roles in this story of the know-it-all recruit who finally becomes a worthy Marine under the tutelage of a hardened sergeant. The film's finale comes with the news of Pearl Harbor and indications of the service's heroic stand at Wake Island. Nancy Kelly, William Tracy, Maxie Rosenbloom, Henry Morgan, Minor Watson and Alan Hale, jr., are in the supporting cast. Opens tomorrow morning.

Earle

"SULLIVAN'S TRAVELS." Preston Sturges' latest comedy costars Joel McCrea and Veronica Lake. This time the creator of "The Great McGinty" and "The Lady Eve" tells of two make-believe hoboes who take a cross-country trip to discover how other people live. Supporting players include Margaret Hayes, William Demarest, Eric Blore, Porter Hall, Franklin Pangborn and Robert Warwick. Blackstone, the Magician, brings his own company to form a novel stage bill. Among the trickster's associates will be his Twelve Mystic Maids, exhibiting "The Vanishing Horse," "Hindu Rope Trick" and "The Girl from Mars." The Roxyettes also will be on hand. Opens Friday morning.

Capitol

"WE WERE DANCING." Adapted from one of Noel Coward's sketches in "Tonight at 8:30," this comedy costars Norma Shearer and Melvyn Douglas as a pair of "professional guests" who support themselves on the parasites of international society. Gail Patrick, Lee Bowman, Marjorie Main, Florence Bates, Reginald Owen, Alan Mowbray and Heather Thatcher are featured. On the Capitol stage will be Senor Wences, the Stuart Morgan Dancers, Fredericks and Lane, the Bailey Sisters and the Rhythm Rockets opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's

"ALL THAT MONEY CAN BUY." "They Devil and Daniel Webster," Stephen Vincent Benet's memorable story of the New Hampshire statesman who argued for the soul of a farmer before a jury of long-dead criminals continues into a second week on Fifteenth Street. Walter Huston, Edward Arnold, James Craig, Anne Shirley, Simone Simon and Jane Darwell are the players. The "March of Time's" "The Argentine Question" also continues.

National

"HELLZAPOPPIN'." The Olsen and Johnson madhouse musical remains for another week on the National stage, chalking up a fourth week in its two E Street engagements this winter. Eddie Garr and Billy House are the stars, rambling about in the audience with gags and props. Grace and Nikko, the Sterner Sisters, the Read Sisters, the Oxford Boys, Ben Dova and Bobby Jarvis are featured. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

Metropolitan

"THE MALE ANIMAL." Henry Fonda, Olivia de Havilland, Joan Leslie, Jack Carson and Eugene Pallette return in this successful screen version of the comedy by Elliott Nugent and James Thurber. Others in the mixup of college politics and amateur football include Herbert Anderson, Ivan Simpson and Hattie McDaniel. Opens Friday morning.

Columbia

"BAHAMA PASSAGE." Madeleine Carroll and Stirling Hayden return to F Street in this Technicolor story of the West Indies, telling of a lonely young man who meets a beautiful woman and is puzzled by her charms. Flora Robson and Leo G. Carroll are featured. Opens tomorrow morning.

Little

"OUR RUSSIAN FRONT." The Soviet films, detailing how the Russians are organized to oppose the Nazis, continue for a second week on the Little screen. Walter Huston reads the commentary of Novelist Elliott Paul. Also continuing is a companion film from another anti-Hitler ally, "Target for Tonight," picturing how the British Bomber Patrol plans and carries out its raids on the continent.

Pix

"PARIS CALLING." Elizabeth Bergner and Randolph Scott costar in this melodrama of the underground movement in Paris. Basil Rathbone acts a pro-Nazi Frenchman who opposes the designs of Miss Bergner and Scott. Gale Sondergaard, Eduardo Ciannelli, Lee J. Cobb, Pat O'Malley and William Edmunds are featured. Opens Saturday afternoon.

Trans-Lux

"INFORMATION PLEASE." Louis Bromfield is the guest expert in this highspot of the newsreel theater's featured short subjects. A "Monarchs of the Ring" release includes Buddy Baer-Doyle, Sharkey-Maloney and Schmeling-Walker fights. Disney's "Orphans' Benefit" is the comic cartoon. Opens Friday morning.

Gayety

"RHYTHM GIRLS." Julie Bryon is the star in the burlesque revue opening Sunday afternoon. George Murray and Bert Carr are the featured comics; Allene Dale, Eileen Hubert, Rita Zane, Joyce Niles, Denny Lyons are among the others. Midnight performances every Saturday.

Glen Echo

"WORLD CRUISE," impossible today in real life, is one of the more popular features at the escape-minded amusement park these early spring days. The boat jaunt from New York around the earth is but one of the 50-odd amusements on the Glen Echo lot. Dancing every week night in the Spanish Garden ballroom to Paul Kain's music.

Catholic University

"ART AND PRUDENCE." Julie Haydon, the brilliant young stage and screen star, continues in the Walter Kerr comedy, sold this week for New York production next season. The play is a satire of drama schools; the supporting company is drawn from the university's speech and drama department. Performances nightly through Friday evening in the University Theater on the campus.

Strates Shows

THE JAMES E. STRATES touring shows, featuring 20 acts as well as 20 novelty rides and five free acts, continue on the circus grounds at Twenty-first and C Streets Northeast, through Saturday evening, benefitting the National Defense Post No. 9.

Text of Talk By Roosevelt Before Envoys

The text of President Roosevelt's informal remarks yesterday to diplomats of Latin-America in observance of Pan-American Day follows:

Do not let us be formal. We are not having any formalities today, because whenever I make a speech it takes me one week to prepare it, and I have no spare weeks at the present time.

I think it is a fine thing that again we are celebrating Pan-American Day. I hope that we are celebrating it in every republic, because I think it has more significance this year than at any previous time in the history of the hemisphere. I know that some of you have—one or two of you—certain problems back home. And, I do think that the idea is being understood more than ever before what would happen if any part of the hemisphere were dominated by a successful Germany. We wouldn't live the same kind of lives—that is the easiest way of putting it. Because that new—not the old German civilization—that new German civilization is so totally different from what all of us have been accustomed to since we were born. I shudder to think what would happen to any part of the hemisphere that came under German domination.

War of Survival

So I am looking for a word—as I said to the newspapermen a little while ago—I want a name for the war. I haven't had any very good suggestions. Most of them are too long. My own thought is that perhaps there is one word that we could use for this war, the word "survival."

The survival war. That is what it comes pretty close to being—the survival of our civilization, the survival of democracy, the survival of hemisphere—the newest hemisphere of all of them—which has developed in its own ways. On the surface these ways may be a bit different, but down at the bottom there is the same kind of civilization that has come from a love of liberty and the willingness to pioneer. So I think that survival is what our problem is, survival of what we have all lived for for a great many generations. I think in all of the republics we have, relatively speaking, quite an ancient civilization—reckoned since we have had independence, and even for a good many years before that. That is why I hope that continental hemispheric solidarity and unanimity are going to continue. At the last Pan-American conference of the hemisphere down at Rio—while some people felt it had not gone so far is it would like to go—we did manage to retain the objective of unanimity.

There may be other problems after the war that we will have to work out among ourselves, sitting around the table, but at the present time we have substantial unanimity. That is a great thorn in the flesh of Herr Hitler. He felt that the success of the Rio conference was a very serious blow to the Axis' efforts to dominate the world.

Recalls Cuba Incident

And so I hope that we will go on as we have in the past. A few of you were here at the time—in the summer of 1933, after I had been in here for a few months—we had a bit of trouble in the Republic of Cuba. I asked all of the ambassadors and ministers of the hemisphere to come in and sit around the table in an informal way and I told them that I didn't want the United States to do anything without everybody knowing all about it, and that my thought was that it was a problem for Cuba to decide for herself. Cuba did, and many old-fashioned commentators in this country said it was a terrible thing to let Cuba handle the affairs of Cuba.

So I hope we will continue to have the unanimity of the past And when it comes to cleaning up the mess at the end of this war, after the Axis is defeated, we will have again an hemispheric council around here to see what we are going to do all over the world, because will have a very great voice in preventing, in the future, an attack on our American civilization.

I haven't prepared any speech. These are just some thoughts that come to me every day—day and night.

We are going places. We will get somewhere. And we are going to have a couple of years, perhaps three years, before we can make sure that our type of civilization is going to survive. I am perfectly confident of it myself. We have all got to sacrifice. But we are going to come out the winner in the long run.

It is good to see you all, and I hope that next year we will be in an even better state than we are in 1942. Good luck to you.

Symphony Launches Funds Drive, Goal Is $114,000

The National Symphony Orchestra's twelfth annual campaign for funds was launched yesterday at a luncheon attended by 400 volunteer workers at the Mayflower Hotel. The drive's goal is $114,000, which must be reached by April 25 if the orchestra is to continue through its 1942-43 season.

John Erskine, noted author, who came from New York to help launch the campaign, shared the principal speaking assignment with Lieut. Leslie Glenn, rector of St. John's Parish, Lafayette Square, and now serving in the United States Navy.

"You are probably engaged in the most important business in the City of Washington today," Erskine told the volunteer workers. "Only in the arts and sciences and the reaches of religion have we very much to be proud of.

"The problem for all our orchestras is to find new ways of reaching all the people who are hungry for music. And as we find those ways, the budget will straighten itself out. Our business now is to keep the music going, not on account of the war, but for the sake of life."

Lieut. Glenn said music is particularly essential now if men are to continue to fight for the ideals of democracy and for the hope of a better life.

"The peace effort and the war effort are the same thing," he said. "Reconstruction must start now; idealism must be sustained now. One of the strong rocks for a new and better world is music for more people."

The luncheon meeting opened with a short broadcast from Dr. Walter Damrosch, American conductor, who stressed the achievetional Symphony Orchestra. E. R. ments of Hans Kindler and the Na-Finkenstaedt, campaign chairman, presided, and Robert J. Whoteford, attorney, introduced the speakers.

Guests included A. F. E. Horn, vice chairman of the campaign; Postmaster General Frank C. Walker, Mrs. Peter Belin, Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Miss Elsie Houston, Brazilian soprano; Miss Alice J. Clapp, Mrs. Leslie Glenn, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony; Milton W. King, Harry G. Meem, Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, Mrs. Gilbert J. Rowcliff, Corcoran Thom, Mrs. Edwin N. Watson and Mrs. Matthew John Whittall.

WLB Charged With Violating Labor Act

Copyright by Chicago Sun

The War Labor Board yesterday was charged in the House with violating the National Labor Relations Act and with going counter to a Supreme Court ruling in a recent decision said to compel former members of a union to reinstate themselves or lose their jobs in a defense plant.

The charge was made by Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat), Virginia, who also made public a letter he wrote President William Green of the A. F. of L., charging Green with "condoning" local racketeering in labor unions. Smith said Green's conduct was wrecking American respect for unions.

Smith told the House that besides Congress "we have another legislating agency in Washington, the War Labor Board." Citing that it had no authority from Congress but had been set up by President Roosevelt under an executive order through the use of "blank check" funds, Smith said "it has undertaken to amend the National Labor Relations Act."

Smith referred to the WLB's decision in the case of the Walker-Turner Co., of Plainfield, N. J., which he said ordered former members of the United Electrical, Radio and Machinist Union, a C. I. O. unit, to rejoin or give up their jobs.

"This is a direct violation of the Labor Relations Act," Smith charged. He cited that the act prohibits any employer or anyone else from forcing men into a union or to discourage them from joining a union.

Citing the Supreme Court decision in the Electric Vacuum Cleaner Corporation case, in which a C. I. O. union sought to oust an A. F. of L. unit, Smith said the War Labor Board's action was in direct contradiction.

Smith made public a letter from Green in connection with a strike in Pittsburgh. Green had testified before the House Naval Committee that there were no strikes in war industries. Smith informed Green of the strike.

Will Organize Dairy Workers Without Strikes, Leader Says

By Robert E. Reuben
United Press Staff Writer

Ora E. Gasaway, president of District 50 of the United Mine Workers of America (C. I. O.), said last night the drive to unionize 3,500,000 dairy farmers would be carried into the 48 States without use of "strikes, coercion or violence."

This was his answer to vigorous preparations being made by four farm organizations—the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Grange, the Council of Farmers Cooperatives and Free Farmers, Inc.—to fight the unionization campaign.

Their attack will open Friday when several farmers testify before the House Judiciary Committee in support of a bill aimed at labor racketeering. The witnesses are being brought here by three of the farm organizations whose leaders met yesterday to plan the counter-drive.

Unionization of dairymen by a branch of the union headed by John L. Lewis, former C. I. O. president, began in the Michigan milkshed and now has spread to the New York milkshed Gasaway said the newly recruited membership already totals 30,000 and is increasing daily.

He scoffed at fears expressed in the New York area that the campaign would result in attempts to impose conditions on farmers comparable to an industrial closed shop, and that this would be followed by rioting, coercion and ultimate destruction of some dairymen.

"We didn't ask the Michigan dairymen to join us," he told the United Press. "They applied for membership and we granted it. The same is true in New York. Naturally we want members—and we intend to get them—but we want only those who want to be with us to improve their economic status.

"Strikes? That's silly propaganda. Ruination of dairymen if they don't go along? We don't intend to ruin anyone."

He said 30 district regional offices have been established already and more will be formed "to carry the campaign into the 48 States." The regional directors have been summoned to meet here on April 21, but Gasaway insisted the session would not be devoted completely to the dairy problem.

The organization campaign will be confined at the outset to dairymen and not to their employes, he said, explaining that the farmers ultimately will decide questions involving unionization of their workers.

Because food is a vital war weapon, Government officials are watching Lewis' activities.

Lewis' daughter, Kathryn, is secretary-treasurer of the district. She ridiculed a statement by Edward A. O'Neal, farm federation head, that the campaign among the dairymen constituted a "threat" to all farmers.

But the mine boss' Congressional critics profess to see more behind the activities of District 50 than a desire to improve the economic status of the dairymen. They see in the campaign the beginning of a sweeping new bid by Lewis for power not only over labor but over a large segment of the farm population.

Youth Arrested In Tire Theft

Elmore J. Horton, 23 years old, colored, of 921 Eleventh Street Northwest, was held in $3000 bail for grand jury by Judge John P. McMahon in Police Court yesterday on charges of stealing four tires and tubes and three wheels owned by the Universal Credit Co., 261 Constitution Avenue.

Horton, arrested last Saturday, pleaded not guilty to the theft which was said to have occurred at the company's used car lot at 1320 Effington Place Northeast.

Tympanist Beats Drum For Son 'Butch,' 3 Months

By Earl J. Wilson
Post Staff Writer

When Walter Howe was a Boston kid in short pants he earned his spending money by beating out ragtime with a dance orchestra. Today he is first tympanist with the National Symphony Orchestra, besides "beating the drum" for a new addition to his family—Warren "Butch" Howe, aged 3 months.

Blue-eyed Warren was dubbed "Butch" by hospital nurses when he entered this world weighing 10 pounds and 6 ounces, Mrs. Howe said. She sat beside her husband as he held the baby and watched him admiringly.

DOWN BEAT—Walter and Warren "Butch" Howe

"He's the most conscientious musician I know," she said, of her husband.

Howe first became interested in drums when he was 13 years old.

"There was a kid in the neighborhood who was one of those fellows who could play anything," he said, "you know, trumpet, piano—and he was always rapping out a tune with sticks on chairs and tables or anything that was around."

Interested, Howe asked his father if he could study the drums. His father a music lover "who was a good piano player," encouraged him to study, Howe said. Within a year he could be seen behind the drums at almost any dance in town.

This was followed by alternating periods of schooling at the Stone Drum School in Boston, the New England Conservatory of Music, and playing with dance bands at resort hotels, and over the radio. During this period he added the xylophone and vibraphone.

After playing with symphonies in Boston, Howe, who is 33, came to Washington in 1934 and has been playing with the National Symphony ever since.

He expects to graduate from Catholic University in June.

Next summer Howe, who lives at 3908 Morrison Street Northwest, planes to return to the school and begin work for a master of arts degree with a major in music.

NEW! EASY! Crisco's Sure-Fire Pastry Method

DOUBLE-CRUST MEASUREMENTS

2 cups sifted flour • 1 teaspoon salt
*⅔ cup Crisco • ¼ cup water

Notice—this method tells you exact amount of water to use. Standard recipes don't... yet too much water is the first big cause of tough pastry. That's ended now!*

Sift flour and salt into bowl. Take out ½ cup of this flour and mix with the ¼ cup of water to form a paste. Add Crisco to remaining flour; cut Crisco in with knives, fork or blender until the pieces are the size of small peas.

Next, add flour-paste to Crisco-flour mixture. Mix thoroughly until the dough comes together and can be shaped into a ball. (Notice—the dough is never sticky—it's easy to handle, easy to roll out! So this method saves you from over-handling the dough—the second big cause of tough pastry.) Divide in half—roll out both crusts about ⅛ inch thick. (All measurements level.)

ONE-CRUST MEASUREMENTS: Use 1½ cups flour, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup Crisco. Take out ¼ cup flour and blend with 3 tablespoons water.

APPLE PIE WITH TOASTED CHEESE TOP—Use your favorite apple pie filling and double-crust proportions of Crisco pastry. Bake in hot oven (425° F.) 10 minutes, then lower to moderately hot (375° F.) 30 to 40 minutes. Before serving, lay narrow strips of cheese in a lattice design on top. Place under broiler or in oven until cheese just begins to melt.

Randolph Asks Aviation in All High Schools

Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia chairman of the House District Committee told more than 800 Washington high school seniors yesterday that this country's obligation to the war effort will not be realized "if aviation courses are not taught in every high school of the United States beginning next fall."

He spoke before senior boys of the Woodrow Wilson and Western High Schools in the auditorium at Western.

"The work being done in Washington and a few other schools in the field of aviation instruction is trail blazing" Randolph declared.

Affirming that "aviation is the deciding factor in either winning or losing the war for America and her Allies," he said:

"The American people have come to accept battleships costing 100 million dollars, but there has been a tendency to view with alarm the cost of a bombing plane costing $500,000. The day is almost here when we must put into the skies super-bombers able to cruise more than 10,000 miles.

"If we had such planes now we could strike at Japan from the Aleutian Islands and Alaska and wreck the industrial centers of the Nipponese. Our generals and our admirals should realize that supremacy in the air will bring victory."

He discussed the use of the airplane in the "productive days of peace after the war" as being important as is its "destructive" use in these times. He emphasized he was not advocating less land and sea forces, but declared. "These forces can operate effectively only when covered by convoys of planes."

Randolph, author of the bill which brought aviation instruction to some 300 high school seniors in 11 Washington high schools, complimented the United State Office of Education on its recently announced intention of fostering aviation instruction in schools throughout the country.

Plans now are under way to extend the program in District high schools, adding courses and regular ground school instruction as well as classroom instruction.

Randolph was introduced by Dr. Elmer S. Newton, principal of Western High Schools. Lieut. Robert J. Haynesworth, of the Anacostia Naval Air Reserve Base, spoke briefly on the opportunities at the air school.

Other speakers were Mrs. Pearle Thurber Robinson, instructor in aeronautics in Washington schools and a licensed pilot; Dr. George Rawlins, head of the science department in the local schools system, and Norman J. Nelson, principal of Woodrow Wilson High School.

Walter E. Adams, 78 years old, former engineer with Virginia State Roads Commission, who died of infirmities of age Sunday at his home, 4432 Reservoir Road Northwest, will be buried today in the family lot at Chester, Pa. Funeral services were held yesterday at Chambers undertaking establishment, 2072 M Street Northwest.

A native of Paris, Va., Mr. Adams lived for a time in Birmingham, Ala., before moving to Marshall, Va., where he lived 10 years, serving during this time as an engineer with the Virginia Roads Commission. He came to Washington eight years ago, retiring shortly after.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Lucy Pickett Adams; five children, Margaret and Walter E. Adams, both of Washington; Mrs. Eugene Keithley, Wilmington, Del.; Mrs. A. T. Hogan and Mrs. L. E. Costner, Birmingham; two sisters, Mrs. May Fitzsimmons, Harrisonburg, Va., and Mrs. J. H. Robertson, Washington; and a brother, Dr. Roy D. Adams, Washington.

Pickpockets Get Tickets to Game

Pickpockets robbed two baseball enthusiasts yesterday, adding to their gloom over the Nationals' 7-0 loss in the opening game at Griffith Stadium.

The Rev. Dale S. Crowley, of 2613 Thirty-first Place Northeast, told police he lost $20 in bills and $40 in Postoffice money orders to a pickpocket in the stadium.

Paul G. Sullivan didn't even get to the ball park. On the way a pickpocket in the 900 block of New York Avenue Northwest relieved him of four reserve seat tickets, 12 old-style one dollar bills and one old-style $2 bill, police reported.

U. S. Chamber Proposes Graduated Sales Tax And Flat 5 Per Cent Levy on Gross Incomes

By the Associated Press

A new tax program designed to raise more than 11 billion dollars chiefly through a graduated retail sales tax and a flat 5 per cent levy on gross incomes was recommended to Congress yesterday by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Ellsworth C. Alvord, chairman of the chamber's federal finance committee, estimated for the House Ways and Means Committee that the sales tax, starting at 5 per cent on necessities, would raise $5,800,000,000 and that the "withholding levy" would produce four billion dollars more.

In addition, Alvord proposed to increase the usual individual income taxes by one billion dollars and raise corporation normal and surtaxes by 680 million dollars and corporate excess profits taxes by an amount he said he could not estimate.

The chamber's program on the latter point contemplated a 100 per cent excess profits tax but with the base and computations revised so that the effective rate probably would be lower.

Representative Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, observed that the chamber's program contemplated raising $10,800,000,000 more from individuals and only 680 million dollars additional from corporations—and Alvord agreed.

Secretary Morgenthau recommended to the committee a $7,610,000,000 tax bill based largely on three billion dollars more from individuals and the same amount from corporations.

"Despite protestations to the contrary," Alvord said, "it is obvious that the Treasury has not proposed that the cost of the war be born by everybody, nor, indeed, by a large share of the population . . . more than 80 per cent of (the Treasury's) increase would be imposed upon incomes of existing taxpayers . . .

"The Treasury proposal to levy another $3,200,000,000 on existing individual taxpayers is unsound, unjust and unnecessary. It will be collected from savings, not from consumption expenditures and principally from the savings of the middle income group with earnings of $3000 to $20,000."

Four Navy Men Killed in Crash

Jacksonville, Fla., April 14 (AP).—Four Navy men were killed and two injured today when a patrol bomber attached to the local naval air station crashed in the St. Johns River near Green Cove Springs.

The Navy listed the dead as:

Ensign Johnnie G. Honey, U. S. N. R., the pilot, of Athens, Tex.; Arthur Murray Hammons, aviation metalsmith, first class, of Jacksonville; Tommy Joe Wood, seaman, first class, Birmingham, Ala., and Lenwood Talmadge Turner, seaman, second class, Rixeyville, Va.

Mustn't Touch

Moffett Feld, Calif., (AP).—Except for assisting injured crew members, civilians were warned to keep hands off any aircraft forced down in their vicinity. Army officers said such planes probably would be carrying live bombs.

The Saturday Evening Post reaffirms a policy

The following editorial, written by Ben Hibbs, the new editor of the Saturday Evening Post, will appear in the May 16 issue of the Post, which is now on the press.

In our issue of March 28 appeared an article titled The Case Against the Jew by Milton Mayer. It was the third of a series of three articles dealing with the place of the Jewish people in American life. The other two were written by Jerome Frank and Waldo Frank. All three of the authors are Jewish.

It was the hope of the former editor of the Post, who purchased the articles and placed them in the magazine several weeks before the change of editorship, that the three would be considered as a whole—that they would afford an intelligent basis for the discussion of a question which, through the malice and stupidity of Axis leaders, has caused untold grief in many parts of the world. The former editor of the Post believed that a frank airing of the whole question would serve to clear the atmosphere in this country and perhaps help prevent anti-Semitism from gaining a foothold here.

Unhappily, the third of the articles—Mr. Mayer's discussion—has been widely misunderstood. Mr. Mayer and the former editor of the Post looked upon it as a plea, directed at any Jewish people who may have strayed from the fold, to return to the faith of their fathers. That a good many Jews placed this interpretation in the article is amply demonstrated by approving letters which we have had from them. On the other hand, during the three weeks which have elapsed between the appearance of the Mayer article and the writing of this editorial, we have received several thousand letters from people—both Jews and Gentiles—who sincerely believe the article was intended as an attack on the Jewish people.

Naturally we deeply regret this misunderstanding. The Post never has been, is not now and never will be anti-Semitic in belief or expression. It is not anti any group. We have always been as quick to publish material setting forth a noteworthy accomplishment of Jews as of Gentiles. We have done so because we have always believed that a good American is a good American regardless of race or creed. That this is still our policy will be demonstrated during the months to come by material some of which is already in the process of being written.

This editorial is being published not only to clear away a misunderstanding, but because the new editor of the Post feels so deeply, so completely, that the only real cause in these anxious war days is the cause of America—the cause of freedom. We Americans are a cohesive people who get along with one another in peace and brotherhood. We are of many races; we came to these beloved shores from a hundred lands across the sea; and yet by some blessed alchemy we have all become Americans. For many years the Post has been, in a very real sense, the spokesman for the glories and the traditions of America—for the noble principles upon which this country was founded. It will continue to be just that—in these grim war years and afterwards—for, to the new editor's way of thinking, there is nothing in this stricken world even half so important as mankind's yearning for freedom and for brotherhood.

That one misunderstood article in the Post could have caused so much anxiety in the minds of its readers is a matter of very real sorrow to the new editor. He regrets, above all, that some hurt may have been done to America at a time when national unity is needed as it never was needed before. He asks all Post readers to believe that these words are written in the deepest sincerity.

Relieving Mr. Jones

Jesse Jones finds himself minus one of his innumerable jobs as a result of the latest executive order. President Roosevelt transfers the business of buying and importing all materials considered essential to the war production program from the agencies under Mr. Jones' supervision to the Board of Economic Warfare under Vice President Wallace. The order will do more than relieve Mr. Jesse Jones' overburdened shoulders. It will simplify the war administration, and this is even more important. The order seeks both to give the Wallace board decisive authority over preclusive buying and to centralize in that board the buying of materials abroad for our war program.

Preclusive buying is another name for economic warfare. It is destined to buy up strategic supplies in foreign countries lest they fall into the hands of the enemy. Hitherto, however, the Wallace board has not had the decisive voice over the finance with which to prosecute this vital aspect of the war effort. Thus it has sometimes found itself stymied in seeking to prevent war materials in foreign countries from falling into the hands of the enemy. That can be done in some cases only by "getting there fustest with the mostest money." If, for instance, the Board of Economic Warfare through its agents sees a possibility of buying, say, chrome in Turkey, it may be a distinct service to winning the war to put in an order right away before the chrome is sold to Germany.

But the Wallace board could not go ahead and make such a purchase. First it had to persuade Mr. Jones as to the wisdom of the transaction. That was neither expeditious nor sensible. Having got all manner of jobs, Mr. Jones simply has not had the time to give these constant applications from the Board of Economic Warfare either immediate or comprehensive consideration. Moreover, Mr. Jones has hitherto—at least till war broke out—been prone to weigh applications from the standpoint of a business deal. That is not the way to pursue economic warfare. Price in preclusive buying is a minor element, and what should be decisive is the advantage which the purchase would give to our cause. The new executive order, by withdrawing the responsibility for these purchases from Mr. Jones, is destined to short-circuit this process.

As to the purchase of materials abroad for our war industry, this task has hitherto been spread among a number of agencies, including some under Mr. Jones' authority. Mr. Jones also has supplied the finance. But in this case, unlike the case of preclusive buying, Mr. Jones has acted under Mr. Nelson's orders. That system will continue. Altogether the upshot of the executive order in relieving Mr. Jones of the financial responsibility for our foreign business will be a distinct gain to efficiency.

Publicity Problem

If some officials in the War Department have their way, Axis-language publications here will be suspended for the duration. This, we feel, would be against the national interest. For it is a fact—recognized by the Justice Department—that some of these publications have been and will continue to be useful to the Government. They keep aliens in touch with Federal regulations and, among other things, they are often a key to sentiment in communities largely populated by aliens.

There are some Axis-language publications, to be sure, which cater, directly or indirectly, to enemy interest. These, like their seditious English-language counterparts, which have been described in our news columns, should be suspended at once. For their preachments are nothing less than an invitation to obstruct the war effort, wherever possible.

Yet there are other publications, German and Italian, which were violently anti-Axis long before we entered the war, and which now exercise a particularly useful influence. This is not to say that they should not be subject to strict control. Presumably War Department officials are bothered about the problem of adequate control, and prefer suspension to the possibility that, in spite of supervision, information useful to the enemy may slip into Axis-language publications. But there is no guarantee that this may not occur in the case of English-language publications. Extraordinary care is taken, of course, to prevent this from happening. It is undoubtedly true that even greater care has to be taken where Axis-language publications are concerned.

In this connection Hawaii's experience is a case in point. Immediately after Pearl Harbor, the Japanese language press in the islands was suspended, according to military plan. Resumption of publication was permitted, however, because it was felt that with stringent supervision, the Japanese press would be a useful contact with local aliens. So it has proved. The situation in Hawaii may be unique, but it seems to us that military reasoning there is valid and equally applicable here.

French Crisis

The tragedy of Marshal Petain is that he has lived too long. He will not be remembered as the hero of Verdun, but as one who, through ambition and senile obstinacy, was forced to sell his own reputation and his own country to the traditional enemy. However, what concerns us now is not the marshal and his much-advertised honneur, for these no longer matter even in France. The real power in France—after Hitler—resides with those conscienceless careerists, Pierre Laval and Francois Darlan.

Thus the question is whether the policy of appeasement which has failed so signally in the case of Petain will be resumed in the case of his heirs. In short, shall we wait until the Japanese are in Madagascar and the Nazis in Martinique before we realize we have many more things to be afraid of than the French fleet? Will our Department of State recognize now that the policy of temporizing with Vichy was doomed from the beginning to failure? Will it now recognize the extent to which Vichy is responsible for our present perilous position? Will it recognize that Vichy, through the surrender of Indo-China, made possible all the Japanese conquests in the Pacific? That Vichy through the surrender of North Africa and Dakar can make possible an invasion of the Western Hemisphere and the defeat of this Nation?

That the policy of appeasement of Vichy, following the inconclusive Battle of Oran, was probably conceived in London rather than in Washington does not excuse our own shortsightedness. For it is we who command the determining voice. Whatever justification there may have been in the beginning for withholding full recognition from Gen. de Gaulle and other Frenchmen who have openly thrown themselves with us, has long since disappeared. One by one the men whose names and records seemed to guarantee good faith have disappeared from the Vichy regime. Catroux joined the Free French, Weygand was removed from his command, and Huntzinger was killed in a mysterious plane crash described as accidental. But not one of these incidents so much as shock the incurable optimists of the Department of State.

It may reasonably be asked what we have gained from our policy. Precious little, except perhaps time. We certainly have not succeeded in immobilizing the French fleet, though we have immobilized one of our own first-rate naval commanders. Today the French fleet is a greater menace than at any time since the armistice of 1940. The time has come to own our friends—who, we are pretty sure, include the great majority of the voiceless French people—and disown our enemies. Let us recognize the De Gaullists, not merely as de facto governors of some South Sea islands and of Equatorial Africa, but as the true government of the true France.

Russian Optimism

The fields of Russia, particularly in the northern and central sectors of the Eastern Front, are today seas of mud when not still knee-deep in lingering winter snows. But neither state of affairs obtains in the warmer regions of the south—in the Crimea, for instance, or in southern Ukraine. And it is precisely in the south that Hitler is expected to deliver his most ambitious blows against the Red army in his drive toward the oil fields of the Caucasus.

The question arises whether the delay in the anticipated German offensive is calculated or is the result of conditions outside of Hitler's control. As to this, there is, of course, no way of knowing. It is possible that Hitler, while bringing up to the battleline all the men and equipment he can scrape together, is biding his time till conditions are favorable for assault. There is also the possibility that the vigorous efforts which the Russians have been making to pinch off important German salients have not been without some effect. The Nazis, to be sure, have managed to hold on. Such places as Staraya Russa, Rzhev, Orel, Kharkov remain in German hands. But the Nazis may have had to expend so much energy and man power in defending them that their schedule of operations may have been thrown out of gear.

Events alone can prove whether this is so. It is, however, revealing that the Russians are taking a highly optimistic line regarding the fighting of the next months. For instance, S. A. Lozovsky, the Soviet vice commissar for foreign affairs, declared at a press conference in Kuibyshev the other day that the Red army will liquidate the German army in 1942.

Predictions of what will happen by a certain date in the future—as Hitler's record proves—have often proved to be boomerangs. But the fact that responsible Russian spokesmen still dare to make such predictions suggests at least that they are not unduly pessimistic about the outcome of the war on the Eastern Front. We can only hope that their optimism is not unjustified. Certainly if Mr. Lozovsky proves to be a true prophet, the end of the war will be far closer than most people dare imagine, regardless of what has happened and may yet happen in the Pacific.

End Of "Portee"

The experiment of blending horse and automotive engine so as to get the best advantages out of both has been abandoned by the Army. The War Department has announced that all ten regiments—three Regular and the rest National Guard—of the so-called "portee cavalry" have been separated from their steeds and completely mechanized.

The idea of the portee business was that the traditional mobility of the cavalry could be restored. This was to be done by transporting the horses in motor vans and troopers in cars or trucks to a point close to the scene of action. Thus the problem of forced marches would be obviated, the problem of remounts and supply minimized, and horses and troopers alike would be fresh and ready for anything required of them. The innovation did not work out so well, however, in last year's maneuvers. For reconnaissance, flank protection, and advance action the portee cavalry were less effective than light mechanized outfits with their still greater mobility and much greater fire power.

Thus it would seem to be finally established that horse cavalry lacks the very qualities that made it supreme for nearly a thousand years between Adrianople and Crecy the qualities, for example which enabled Jenghiz Khan, greatest of cavalry captains, to conquer half a world.

The decline of cavalry, as a matter of fact, has been going on steadily for several hundred years, save for a brief revival in the seventeenth century. It has been a long time since cavalry has been used for shock purposes, as in the days when dragoons could be used in pitched battles to break up gun emplacements or infantry squares. By the middle of the nineteenth century its functions were largely confined to raiding and reconnaissance, "the eyes of the army," as somebody said. This may have given rise to Joe Hooker's sneering question: "Who ever saw a dead cavalryman?" But Hooker might have seen plenty of them a few years later at Sedan after the suicidal charge—the last great cavalry charge in history — of the Chasseurs d'Afrique against the Prussian infantry.

Commando Lesson

The news from London that Gen. Marshall is having a series of conferences with Lord Louis Mountbatten deserves special note. For he is the one man who may figure most prominently in future commando operations on the Continent. Hitherto, to be sure, he has not been connected publicly with the commandos. Yet the British now reveal that he was actually in charge of the successful raids on the Vaagsoe Islands in Norway and on Bruneval and St. Nazaire in occupied France. Moreover, though he has been in charge of commando operations for nearly six months, the British have chosen this particular moment, when combined staff discussions are under way in London, to highlight the comprehensive nature of his command.

Within six months he has been advanced from captain in the Navy to acting vice admiral, with the honorary rank of lieutenant general in the army and air marshal in the Royal Air Force. Such rapid promotion naturally emphasizes the high regard in which Lord Mountbatten is held. But this is far less significant than his emergence as acknowledged chief of the three service branches which participate in the commando raids. For his new title as Chief of Combined Operations indicates official if belated recognition of a single directing head in forays which call for superlative coordination on the part of the three services.

If American ground and air forces join with the British in commando raids—as many predict—our men presumably will be directed by Lord Louis Mountbatten. It is permissible to conjecture, therefore, that this subject has been and will continue to be up for discussion in the meetings between our Chief of Staff and the commando head. Whatever their conclusions, it should be a source of special satisfaction to this country that General Marshall, a superior strategist in his own right, is making a point of conferring repeatedly with a man who has already proved what can be achieved on a relatively small scale when there is perfect coordination. The more we—and, for that matter, the British, too—learn about this, the more likely will be the success of joint offensive operations on a major scale—which, after all, must be the one central purpose of the American and British high command.

Canal Builders' Pensions

Why shouldn't the pioneer Panama Canal builders have a pension? They have waited much longer than the World War veterans to be recognized. They signed the civil service articles agreeing to fight and defend the Canal and they did bear arms aiding the Marines at Camp Elliott on one occasion. They withstood hardships, unsanitary conditions, sickness and death. Some are still paying doctor bills and unable to work as the result of accidents suffered on the Canal.

These men showed real determination in their efforts to put through this Canal. Records were made in the amounts of yardage dug out each week and published in the Canal Record. Some of those steam-shovel crews lost their lives by plowing into old French dynamite shots that failed to go off years before.

This Canal has been a good investment for our Government and has earned thousands of dollars since it opened in 1914. Every shipbottom, both foreign and domestic, has to pay toll or go around the Horn. Its military value is well recognized. Certain Army and Navy officials have been rewarded for their services on this project. But no rewards of any kind were ever granted to the "rank and file" who got their bones out under their own power. A handful of these men are still living and trying to help our Government win another war under the handicap of old age and poor health. Don't desert these old pioneers now. Give them a chance to buy war bonds and feel like the tough stuff they used to be instead of broken, defeated and forgotten "hasbeens." A POST READER.

A Realistic District Milk Program

The Post's discriminating editorial titled "No Cream for Cream," approving the proposed amendment to the Washington milk-marketing order of Agricultural Marketing Administrator Roy Hendrickson touches upon a phase of the economics of milk sadly in need of judicial review and remedial procedure. The proposed amendment realistically takes cognizance of the fact of record that the only difference between Class I milk sold in bottles as fluid milk and Class II milk (that used for cream) is simply one of price and production-control. In order to discourage surplus production of milk above designated quotas, this penalizing method was devised whereby in the present instance, the bottled-milk consumer pays 70 per cent more for the same identical product which the dairy interests purchase for its available butterfat. As The Post points out, the economic effect of what is technically known as "The Classification or Use Price Plan" (United States Department of Agriculture circular, Operation and Management of Milk Plants) is to have the consumers of cream subsidized by the far more needy consumers of whole milk, an obvious reversal of sound public policy.

As there is a possibility that this realistic and pragmatic approach to the milk-cost problem contributed by Mr. Hendrickson and Consumers' Counsel Donald E. Montgomery may be protested and enjoined by selfish but well organized political and commercial interests, this writer pleads an opportunity to adduce in evidence certain facts and logical inferences which came to his observation as an active participant in the recently conducted hearings upon the demands of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers for higher milk prices.

Mr. Hendrickson, who so fairly conducted the public hearings, was finally posed with a many-horned dilemma in which any decision he might wisely recommend would of necessity arouse the ire and indignation of vested interests whose existing monopoly was jeopardized. The milk producers demanded higher prices for their fluid milk because feed prices and labor costs had risen precipitately. Unless the price rise was granted, they argued, production effort would be diverted to more profitable crops and thereby deprive this milk shed of an adequate milk supply. But in resolving this difficulty the milk producers were adamant in their refusal to share their present high-priced retail outlets with competitors producing fluid milk under the less costly and less exacting standards of the United States Public Health Milk Ordinance. They insisted upon continuing to use the unnecessarily high standards of our local milk code as a most effective economic weapon to enjoin competition of eligibles whose capital investment and overhead were considerably less. So Mr. Hendrickson had the milk producers pleading that we would have a failure of our milk supply in face of an increased demand unless a price rise was granted, yet the petitioners refusing to concede the obvious remedy, that of enlarging our milk shed. But the matter of enlarging our milk shed was not within the province of Mr. Hendrickson and therefore was not available to him as an administrative remedy.

Then, in respect to the milk distributors, Mr. Hendrickson was confronted with their determination to pass the cost of a price rise to the consumer. This meant that they would not only continue to purchase butterfat at a usurious discount, both in times of milk scarcity and seasonal surfeit, milk for which the unorganized consumer in this milk shed must pay 70 per cent more, but in adding the increase to the cost of a bottle of fluid milk, the fractions of a penny in actual excess, were again multiplied to the financial disadvantage of the consumer. Mr. Hendrickson cut the Gordian knot in the only place where he had administrative jurisdiction under the milk-marketing act. He enjoined the present unfair arrangement whereby the dairy interests get the same identical milk at $2.10 a hundredweight for which the consumer of bottled milk must pay $3.57 a hundredweight. The practical effect of his proposed amendment will be to prevent an immediate price rise in bottled milk to consumers in the Nation's Capital, who, since 1931, have paid, on an average, the third highest price among 25 large cities for whole milk delivered in family retail trade in a territory (Maryland-Virginia) which increased its total milk production 88 million pounds in 1940.

Mr. Hendrickson and Mr. Montgomery have done all they can do, as faithful public servants, to keep milk prices down. The other part of the obvious remedy which the public hearings adduced, to wit the matter of opening up and enlarging our milk shed to include sources of available milk supply which have proven not to be a health menace to neighboring communities, is the administrative concern of our local Health Department and Commissioners. As yet they have not contributed their part to solving this community problem.

Mr. Walling Replies

On March 23 The Post carried an editorial entitled "Mr. Walling's Smear" in which it was implied that a recent statement of mine regarding Nazi propaganda was a smear against the press of this country.

If you will read the verbatim transcript of my speech in which this statement was made you will note that I did not say, nor did I even imply, that the press as a whole is acting as a dupe of the Nazis. I simply made reference to the very obvious fact that the Nazis were past masters of the art of dividing a people and that anything which promoted strife between employer and employe was playing into their hands.

Many newspapers sincerely believe that overtime pay is a bar to greater production—a belief based, to my mind, on a lack of knowledge of the situation. To challenge their motives would be, as you state, an "hysterical smear."

In saying this I do not retract my charge that the Nazis want us to fight each other instead of them and that they are doing everything they can to further disunity among us. That, however, is quite different from saying, as I did not, that those newspapers which disagree with me on this point of basic national labor policy are all motivated by unpatriotic sentiments.

This is a time when national unity is of the utmost importance. Nevertheless there is a field of legitimate discussion even in times of national crisis and I should be the last to want to suppress free consideration by the press and the people of the effect of the policies to be followed to promote the war effort. Some newspapers have been engaging in high-pressure campaigns asking persons to sign their printed coupons pledging to vote against Congressmen and Senators who will not vote to suspend the Wage-Hour Law. This is, of course, their right but there is no reason in all fairness why their campaign methods should not be pointed out.

I am writing this letter to you not for the purpose of adding fuel to the flames of controversy but to set the public record straight. I am, as you say, a responsible Government official, and I do not want you or any of your readers to believe that I am "hitting below the belt" by trying to throttle free and legitimate discussion in the press through impugning the integrity of those who happen to see the matter differently.

The Langley

Mr. Gordon H. Simons' Letter to the Editor in The Post made a point of the fact that the Langley was eulogized a year ago as a great ship and now is described as an unimportant loss.

When Wallie Butterworth and Parks Johnson gave their glowing broadcast from the aircraft carrier Langley less than a year ago, they were quite right in saying that it was a wonderful ship. However, it seems far more likely to me, just another layman, that the tribute rendered it was on the basis of the glorious tradition and legend of service behind it. That tribute should still stand; but it is a commemoration for service already done rather than a citation for a still existent use and prowess it should have otherwise rendered to the active contemporary good of today's emergency efforts. It is fortunate that the Langley lived up to its reputation by "going down fighting" as an old warrior would have preferred. And it was an "old warrior." Otherwise, I daresay it might have been scrapped, from necessity, and with due tribute to its legend, as was, say, the Mahtua, famous armed merchantman of the British, in Hongkong.

Cebu

The War Department's announcement on Sunday that the Japanese had invaded the island of Cebu, in the Philippines, gives us more than physical shock.

For Cebu, unknown to most Americans, is historically the center of Christianity in the Orient. More than that, Cebu is geographically the Alpha and Omega of modern Far East history.

School children have read, and then forgotten, about Ferdinand Magellan, the circumnavigator of the globe. But it was Magellan who planted the cross in the Philippines and then was treacherously murdered. That was in 1521—a long time ago, as we figure events in Asia, which are hardly 100 years in our reckoning of China and Japan as being within the scope of our Far Eastern relations.

The historic city of Cebu is the capital of the island of Cebu and is one of the largest and most important ports in the more than 7000 Philippine Islands. It is more than that. It is the oldest Christian city in the islands.

When I was there it gave me a thrill to know that Cebu is Magellan's city—and it still seems to be his very own, no matter whose flag waves over the Philippines.

Walking along the oldest street in the Philippines, one strolls down Calle Colon. Some of the logs which support the tile roofs covering the sidewalks have become petrified. You stroll past open bazaars and shops and dodge overloaded pony-cart taxicabs. The business center certainly belies the fact that Cebu has 143,000 inhabitants, so sleepy is the city.

The port itself, however, usually teems with activity. Directly connected with the railway which runs across the east coast of the island, Cebu was an important trading post. Huge sacks of coconuts were always piled along the docks, and back in the plantations there was always rejoicing when the copra market was at its peak.

In the newer section of the city many sections of the streets are wide and regularly laid out. In the old walled city is the historical church of St. Augustine. In 1571 that church was a hut of bamboo and interwoven leaves, and was burned down by pirates. It was rebuilt of wood, only to be burned to the ground again, finally to be replaced by a magnificent structure of stone which has survived the ravages of time and earthquakes and—it is to be hoped—Japanese bombs.

Within these massive walls did remain the locked secrets of the hopes, joys, sorrows and fears of nearly three and a half centuries. The altars and vestments and sacred vessels had been endowed by the richest monarchs of Spain. The bodies of heroic pioneers—Spanish leaders, soldiers, priests—are buried beneath its stones.

A special altar was built for the Santo Nino de Cebu (the Holy Child of Cebu), which is said to be the oldest image in the islands. There are numerous stories told about this image, but the one I like best relates that it was presented by Magellan in 1521 to the wife of a Cebu chief when she was converted to Christianity. Forty years later a Spanish soldier found the holy object in the ruins of a burned native house, but it has been miraculously preserved in a double box and apparently had been the object of adoration by the former occupants of the house.

Cebu simply abounds with these beloved symbols. On Good Fridays a life-sized image of Christ is housed in the church. It is called the "living" Christ because, when nailed to a cross, the wooden body, by means of an ingenious device which is inclosed in the statue—when it was carved 160 years ago—seems to show Jesus suffering the agony of death.

In the heart of the city of Cebu there is a small, lonely sort of kiosk near a street intersection. It is no imposing edifice. There is no gold, no silver or ceremony. Behind the iron bars of a small round structure I saw in the half-light of candle flames a large wooden cross. If there was an inscription on it the light was so dim I didn't see it. But this old wooden cross covers the original which Magellan planted in the ancient city of Cebu when the first mass was celebrated there 'midst natives and their chieftains 420 years ago.

The man who had stood at the foot of this cross so many centuries ago probably was one of the most brilliant men who ever lived. He was a Portuguese, the son of a nobleman, and he grew up at court as one of the Queen's pages. In 1495, three years after Columbus discovered America, this man, Magellan, entered the service of his King. Doubtless, through jealousy at court, he lost favor with his King, so he, like Columbus, went to the court of Spain, where he found friends, favors and a wife.

When he landed at Cebu he won the friendship of its people. Very shortly after his arrival he ordered the cross to be erected, mass was said and Christianity was brought to the Philippines.

Pigafetta, an Italian friend who accompanied Magellan on his voyage, wrote an account of the wholesale conversion of the Cebuanos: "The captain (Magellan) warned them against adopting Christianity, either from fear or from the hope of pleasing us. If they really wished to become Christians, he said, they must do so because of a genuine desire and for the love of God. If they did not become Christians the Spaniards would do nothing to harm them. Still, those who did become Christians would be loved the more and would be better treated.

"Then they all exclaimed as with one voice that they wished to become Christians not from fear and not in order to please us, but of their own free will. Thereupon the captain embraced them with tears in his eyes and took the hands of the princes and those of the Raja of Mazzava (the local big shot), and told them that thenceforward they would live in perpetual peace with the King of Spain and they made a like promise in return."

In course of the centuries, things certainly did not turn out just as Magellan might have wanted; but at the foot of the dilapidated cross in the city of Cebu the light of Christian faith burned brightly up until a few days ago.

Taxes And Saving

By Ernest Lindley

Plans To Help Check Inflation

ONE OF THE MAIN arguments among officials working on the inflation program has been about how much to rely on taxation and how much on price and wage controls and rationing. Political as well as economic difficulties are involved. For taxation must be enacted by Congress, while price ceilings and rationing can be handled under existing law and, with union cooperation, wage ceilings also could probably be imposed without Congressional action.

LINDLEY

The prospect of getting taxation of the character and magnitude needed to check inflation looks formidable, especially since an election is coming this fall. Yet in some way many additional billions of dollars need to be siphoned off. The situation is the reverse of that in the thirties, when the Roosevelt Administration was trying to stimulate private spending. Now private spending must be rigorously reduced.

Dollars which ordinarily went into automobiles, refrigerators, washing machines, new houses and scores of other durable goods can no longer be spent in these goods. Meanwhile, the number of families capable of buying such goods is rapidly growing, as a result of increased employment at better wages.

LIKEWISE, outside the war industries, business concerns cannot spend much of the money they ordinarily would put into maintenance and new equipment. Because of priorities and allocations they cannot get the equipment and materials.

At present price levels there are not enough goods and services—or soon will not be—to soak up the dollars which private individuals would like to spend. These dollars must be taken up and spent by the Government or they must be saved. Otherwise, lacking rigid price controls, they will continue to force up the prices of the goods and services which are available. And against the pressure of many billions in excess purchasing power, it is doubtful that any price control system will be effective. Bootlegging and black markets are almost certain to spring up—as they have done elsewhere, even in England, which has cut more deeply into buying power by taxation than we have.

To control inflation by taxation alone would require, approximately, putting the war on a pay-as-you-go basis. But Federal taxation to the tune of 40 to 60 billions a year is probably well beyond the reach of practical politics. Taxation must be supplemented by savings. Savings are far less painful. If a serious inflation is prevented, there will be, in most cases, no hardship at all. This, in turn, means that savings must be prevented from forcing real estate, or, for that matter, corporate securities, to inflated heights. By and large, in a war economy, the only big outlet for new savings is the Government.

UP TO NOW, the Administration has had only two plans for drawing war-time savings into Government bonds. The first is the Treasury's selling campaign, especially its effort to regularize selling through voluntary payroll deductions. The second is the proposal to increase social security taxes by two billion dollars.

Certainly this is an appropriate time to scoop up more money through social security taxes. This can be done by bringing more people into the present social security system; by introducing new forms of insurance, such as insurance against the cost of medical care; and by increasing the reserves of the present insurance funds. In short, a combination of higher taxes with taxes on more people is in prospect.

The question of corporate savings is also being studied. Six years ago the Roosevelt Administration proposed a tax on undistributed corporate earnings. The main purpose was to force those earnings back into the economic stream. The case for this tax was poorly presented by the Treasury; and the tax, as enacted by Congress, was poorly devised to achieve the aim sought. But the aim was valid, even necessary. Now the opposite objective is sought: to discourage spending and investment by corporations except for war purposes or to meet essential civilian needs. This means inducing or requiring business concerns to keep reserves for depreciation, etc., in cash or Government bonds.

In addition, the demand is growing within the Administration for some form of enforced or induced individual saving. The voluntary savings campaign of the Treasury almost certainly will never cut deep enough. Moreover, the war savings bonds can be cashed at any time. What is needed is a security that cannot be cashed until after the war. The simplest method would be a compulsory payroll deduction, with a supplementary voluntary plan for self-employed persons.

Curiously, in the intra-mural arguments in Washington the Treasury consistently has been the most reluctant to rely heavily on either taxation or compulsory saving. Secretary Morgenthau has said some strong words against inflation, but they have not been backed up by his tax programs.

Would-Be Farmerettes Urged To Stay Home Until Called

Women who have their overalls ready and are just waiting for crop time to start hunting themselves a farm job, yesterday were advised to register with the United States Employment Sservice and wait until they are called.

"The great bulk of farm labor will continue to be done by men and women who customarily do this kind of work for a living," Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt declared.

"Prerecruiting of women as extra hands, in communities where the usual sources of farm labor prove inadequate, must be carefully planned and centralized in the employment office," he said.

"This auxiliary labor force of women workers must be tied in with the regular established organization for recruiting and placing farm workers if the women are to have a chance to perform a really useful service."

Administrator McNutt predicted that many communities would have to turn to women for help this summer, particularly those with orchardists, and berry and vegetable growers.

"But," he added, "this does not mean that the hundreds of thousands of women who are ready and willing to work on farms as a patriotic service should get into overalls and go looking for jobs."

Recruiting for a women's land army was initiated by the American Women's Voluntary Services, but it was decided last week the volunteers would have to be channeled through the Federal and State employment services to prevent confusion and duplication—as well as to maintain a balance between supply and demand.

All-Time High Arlington Budget Unopposed

Arlington County's proposed annual budget calling for the expenditure of $2,775,076, an all-time high, met with no opposition at a hearing held by the county board last night in the courthouse. The budget becomes effective July 1.

Only a few citizens appeared to ask for slight budget increases for street improvements and new construction.

Edmund Campbell, board chairman, explained the only major increases proposed were for public health and safety services and for pay increases for county employes. The latter item was necessary to meet the competition of higher salaries in industries and Government offices in Washington, Campbell said.

The present tax rate of $2.70 per $100, it was indicated, will remain unchanged. Increased costs of government are expected to be met by corresponding increases in revenue from the property.

Colombian Nazis

Acting For Germany

Bogota, Colombia.

THE COLOMBIAN secret police recently uncovered a complete Nazi organization in this country. Documents and photographs found in the possession of suspected foreigners prove beyond doubt that the fifth column here was similar to that in European countries, with a military system, an established hierarchy, uniforms, flags, and ceremonies. What is more grave, Nazi agents had connections which made it possible for them to control, guard, and if necessary, attack strategic points in Colombia, which are also of vital importance for the Panama Canal.

As has been previously known, there exists in Berlin a section of the German government which is charged with organizing activities in foreign countries. In Colombia, a Nazi-inspired "National Group" was formed. The country was further divided into sections, which functioned as "Local Groups." In each city or village which justified it, there was a "Point of Aid." At the bottom of the hierarchy were the so-called "Cells." These "Cells" varied in nature. Some were banking houses, some commercial firms, some newspapers, and some consisted of a single individual.

This organization acted for the National Socialist Party, and did not depend at all upon the diplomatic representation of the Reich. Before Colombia broke relations with the Axis powers, however, it was customary for party members to use the diplomatic pouch to send and receive mail. On one occasion when a German consul refused to cooperate, he was ordered from Berlin to place himself completely at the orders of the party representatives.

IN COLOMBIA the "National Group," functioning in Barranquilla, met in Bogota, which is the capital city. Bogota is isolated and difficult to reach except by airplane, and therefore a poor center for activities. Barranquilla is situated at the mouth of the Magdalena River, and is the busiest Colombian port on the Atlantic. It is only a short distance from the naval base at Cartagena and the ports of Mamonal and Covenas, from which petroleum is shipped to the United States. Besides, Barranquilla is one of the few Colombian cities which has a cosmopolitan aspect: tourists, foreign business men, sailors of all lands, making it possible for the Nazis to work more or less unnoticed.

Mass meetings were held in the German school in Barranquilla. Photographs of these meetings were confiscated from a German resident of that city, and so similar is the setting that the pictures might have been taken in the Munich beerhall which Hitler made famous. Large flags, swastikas and pictures of Hitler decorate the walls. The participants of these meetings, almost all Germans, Germans naturalized in Colombia, or Colombians who are sons of Germans, appear in brown uniforms with the inevitable swastika armband. The Nazi "spring festival" was commemorated by an open air celebration held at night, even though in Colombia there are no seasons as northerners know them.

Emil Pruffert, chief of the "National Group," lived in Barranquilla. The day relations were broken between Colombia and the Axis, Pruffert came to Bogota, where he conferred with Dittler, the German Minister, and Chrisosti, the Italian Minister. When the Axis diplomats left the country in January, he went with them.

THE NAZI organization in Colombia revolved principally around four large commercial enterprises with branches, agencies, and friends in all corners of the country. These four firms were the "Banco Aleman Antioqueno," "Casa Helda," "Casa Bayer" and "Maquinas Pfaff." In Bogota the "Local Group" was for a long time in charge of a Mr. Schlubach, partner of a commercial house called Schlubach and Macias, whose business consisted in importing merchandise from the United States, especially automobile tires. There were various other chiefs later, among them officials of the "Casa Bayer" and "Casa Helda."

The duty of the "Cells" was to make friends among the people. If their work was satisfactory, they were given vacations in Germany at the Reich's expense. There they were trained, and returned as political chiefs or Gestapo agents with power to intimidate even nationalized Colombians.

Another Nazi center of importance was Cali, the capital city of the department of Valle. Cali is a stopping place for the planes of the Pan-American Airways, and is the location of one of the most important air bases of the country. Near Cali was the hacienda "Corinto," inhabited by most of the members of Colombia's small Japanese colony. They cultivate rice and beans in such a way that their fields could be converted in a moment into a good airdrome within striking distance of the Panama Canal. The government has concentrated all the Japanese from "Corinto" and their fields have been taken over by the army.

The funds of many Axis firms and nationals are now being administered by the government. The "Banco Aleman Antioqueno" has been nationalized, and has a Colombian board of directors. Since the middle of January, the authorities have been prescribing places of residence for suspected foreigners. Many former leaders of the "National Group" are being controlled in this way. It is known that new totalitarian agents have come to this country, but the extent to which the former leaders have been replaced is difficult to estimate.

At this moment, the danger from the Fifth Column in Colombia does not lie so much in the Germans themselves as in the Spaniards who are members of the Falange. Germany, Italy and Japan do not have diplomatic relations with Colombia, and the nationals of these countries, and of the countries occupied by them, are closely watched. Spain, on the other hand, still has diplomatic relations with this country, and, for reasons of race and language, the Spaniards who live here are difficult to control, because they are easily confused with Colombian citizens.

A Pilot Decision

By Mark Sullivan

Maintenance Of Union Membership

THE WAR Labor Board last week imposed what is known as "maintenance of union membership," on a company and its employes at Plainfield, N. J., the Walker - Turner Co. This company is comparatively small, it has only 293 employes. But the principle involved, "membership maintenance," is extremely far-reaching. The same principle is involved in an important case which the Labor Board is on the eve of deciding, the International Harvester Co. One gathers that last week's decision was a pilot decision, a precedent forecasting the same kind of action in the Harvester Co. case. If so, and in any event, the country is going to become conscious of what "membership maintenance" means. One result is likely to be increase in the already strong pressure on Congress to enact legislation dealing with this and other features of labor relations.

SULLIVAN

To understand membership maintenance, read some words from last week's order of the War Labor Board: "All . . . employes who are . . . members . . . of Local No. 435, United Electric, Radio & Machine Workers of America, shall, for the duration of this contract, remain in good standing as a condition of continued employment with the company." (The duration of the contract is one year.)

Within those words are two heavy compulsions—first, compulsion on the member of a union that he remain a member; second, compulsion on the company that it discharge any employe who ceases to be a member.

NOW if this were merely a matter of private contract voluntarily arrived at by the employer and the union, such compulsions would not be novel. In that case, membership maintenance would be merely a variation of the closed shop or union shop—in which the employer voluntarily contracts with the union to employ only union members. Many persons strongly disapprove the union shop on principle. But in fact voluntary contracts for union shops have existed for years, in many industries and individual plants, and have worked satisfactorily.

But, between the union shop, or membership maintenance, when voluntarily arrived at by private contract—between that and the present case, there is literally all the difference in the whole world of human rights. In the present case—and this is the new and far-reaching principle here introduced—the two compulsions are enforced by the Government. Here the Government of the United States orders every member of a union to remain a member—or lose his job. And the Government orders the employer to discharge any worker whenever the union says he must be discharged.

THE WAY it works, as set down in the present order of the War Labor Board, is this: The union serves notice on the company that a worker has failed to keep up his membership, or has in some respect violated union rules, and that the union has decided to expel him. Thereupon the company must discharge the worker. In effect, the company becomes an agent of the union (and also of the Government). The company may prefer to keep the worker, they may regard him as the best man in the plant, the company may prefer to promote him. All that does not matter. The company must discharge him just because the union says he must be discharged.

True, there is in the War Labor Board's order a provision for a strange sort of arbitration. The company, when ordered to discharge a worker, may ask for an arbitrator. But the arbitrator passes only on one strictly limited question — whether the worker has actually violated "any of the terms or conditions of the constitution and by-laws of the union."

It does not matter what the worker's reason for not keeping up his membership in the union. It may be a reason of judgment, he may prefer to belong to a different union, or no union. It may be a reason of conscience—he may disapprove the course of the union, or of C.I.O. as a national organization, about public questions. As a matter of fact, considerable numbers of C.I.O. members have withdrawn because of positions C.I.O. or some of its leaders took on political or other controversial questions, outside the field of labor.

GOVERNMENT requiring a man to remain a member of a specified union, has some of the nature of requiring a man to remain a member of a specified political party, or a specified religion. And while the present Government order is merely that a man remain a member, the next step, easy to foresee, will be to require that he become a member. This contains the explosives that have given rise to some of the bitterest and most prolonged strifes in history.

Under the War Labor Board's present order, and apparent present policy, the penalty on a worker who resists Government compulsion to remain a member of the union, is loss of his job. There is also a penalty on the employer who resists Government compulsion to discharge a worker. The penalty will be seizure of his plant by the Government. This penalty has already been enforced upon two companies who resisted compliance with a War Labor Board order.

The Gallup Poll

14 Largest States Vote Price-Wage Control By 2 to 1 Majority; Canadian Plan Favored

By George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., April 14.—Signs are multiplying that the Roosevelt Administration will ask Congress for a law freezing all prices and wages to head off inflation. If a national plebiscite were held to get the views of the common man on such a law, it would be found that the people are far ahead of their Government.

One could travel today through the fourteen States with the largest voting population and find all of them in favor of price-wage control by 57 per cent or more. Throughout the country as a whole, majority sentiment is running better than 2 to 1 in favor of such a measure.

Typical of the Nation's views are the following State votes just compiled in an American Institute of Public Opinion poll.

"A law in Canada keeps wage and salary rates from going higher than they are now and also keeps all prices, including prices of farm products, from going higher. Would you approve or disapprove of such a law in the United States?"

	Approve	Disapprove	Undecided
California	67%	23%	10%
Illinois	63	27	10
Indiana	62	26	12
Iowa	72	19	9
Massachusetts	67	21	12
Michigan	65	25	10
Minnesota	66	25	9
New Jersey	68	21	11
Missouri	66	20	14
New York	57	34	9
Ohio	69	21	10
Pennsylvania	65	29	5
Texas	68	22	10
Wisconsin	62	30	8
National vote	66	24	10

It is clear from these results that the average American stands ready today to forego increases in wage and salary rates if, in return, prices are prevented from rising. This is the principle of the Canadian price-wage plan, which in only four short months has succeeded in halting the rise in Canada's cost of living index.

Despite opposition to wage-price freezing by the American farm lobby and labor lobby, the institute's compilation of the views of the common people themselves finds that the rank and file of both farmers and industrial workers are in favor of wage-price control by substantial majorities.

As reported last week, the vote of farmers is 64 per cent in favor, and that of skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled laborers as a group, 63 per cent in favor.

As a matter of fact, the American people have been consistently in favor of price-wage legislation ever since April, 1941, polls show.

Public Remains Ahead of Congress

The tendency of the American people to be ahead of Congress on national and international issues has been forcefully demonstrated in the results of public opinion polls during recent months and years.

The record of these polls shows that if the majority of American voters had had their way, the following are some of the actions that would have taken place:

1. Shipment of scrap metal, oil and war materials to Japan would have been stopped in June, 1938.
2. The arms embargo in the Neutrality Act would have been repealed in March, 1939, instead of eight months later when Congress acted.
3. Conscription of manpower would have begun in May, 1940, instead of in the late autumn of that year, when the Selective Service Act was passed.
4. Drastic control of prices and wages would have gone into effect in April, 1941. The Administration is now considering such a measure.
5. Federal income taxes would have begun to be levied on the low income groups two and a half years ago.

Status Of Unions

Tuscon, Ariz.

IN THE POLITEST temper and from a strictly objective view, lest ugly passion be aroused and disunity provoked among us, I should like to present today some facts of interest concerning the status of unions in the presence of our National Legislature and their status under the income tax provisions of the Internal Revenue Act. In both areas they enjoy very special privilege and under the income tax law they are privileged even more than churches and charitable organizations.

Now, in that recent decision of the Supreme Court in the so-called teamsters' case, the majority opinion of the Court, written by Justice Byrnes, reviews the legislative history of the Anti-Racketeering Act under which the prosecution was brought. It is pointed out that back in 1933 the late Senator Royal S. Copeland ran an investigation of rackets and introduced a bill providing penalties to be inflicted on any person who obtains or tries to obtain money by using or threatening to use violence or coercion in connection with interstate commerce.

THIS PROPOSAL went through the Senate sailing, but after it was passed Will Green, the president of the American Federation of Labor, which then had the field to itself, expressed a fear that such a law might injure the interests of his organization which he presumptuously refers to always as "labor" or "American labor." There was an implied suggestion that Mr. Green knew that some of his unions were guilty of the practices of the common racketeer, for he wanted a special exemption for unions. Otherwise, why did he object to a bill for such plainly noble intent? However, in those days, the racket character of certain unions was not as well known to the public, or even to Congress, as it is today.

So the Department of Justice redrafted the bill at Green's suggestion providing that the payment of wages by a bona fide employer to a bona fide employe should not be precluded. That, of course, was a superfluous provision, because good faith always is and necessarily must be absent from any payment induced by violence or threats and, by the same token, any payment of wages made in good faith could not even be challenged under the original version of the act.

Nevertheless, the Attorney General of the time, who was our old friend, Homer Cummings, wrote to the House Judiciary Committee stating that the new version had been approved by Green and his counsel. I am not certain, but I believe Brother Green's counsel then, as now, was Joe Padway, the general counsel of the A. F. of L., who was and remains general counsel of the notoriously crooked Browne Bioff-Circella Movie Union and who also did law work for George Scalise, of the Building Service Union, or racket and publicly and unblushingly praised Browne as a great labor leader when it was common knowledge that the dirty racketeer was a traitor to all labor.

WELL, as I say, the public, Congress and, we may be kind enough to grant, even old Homer, himself, did not then realize the extent of the corruption in unions and the brutal violence of common union practices, so the amendment was agreed to by both houses without debate and became law. It still did not legalize racketeering, even by unions, because it exempted only payments of wages in good faith, but it remained for the Supreme Court in this recent decision to find good faith even where violence and threats had been used and where the employer had no use for another employe.

As to income tax law, we find that labor unions are just flatly exempt from the tax and immune to inspection. For them the income tax simply does not exist, although they collect much more than one billion—not million but billion—dollars out of the wages of American workers every year and account for very little of it and, so far as any law is concerned, don't have to account for a nickel to anyone.

But the Methodist Church or the Baptist or Presbyterian or Catholic Church is exempt only with a proviso that it refrain from attempting to influence legislation to a substantial degree of its total activities. So here we have the A. F. of L. and Brother Green openly, peremptorily and, I might say, arrogantly telling Congress what to do and Congress doing it, and churches forbidden to do likewise, lest they lose their tax immunity and it is my devout hope that nobody will get cross at anyone about this or at me for discussing the case because, my fellow citizens, we must have unity though the racket become the acknowledged ruling force of our fair land.

Petain's Surrender

By Barnet Nover

The Return Of Pierre Laval

THE REENTRY of Pierre Laval into the Vichy government is a diplomatic Bataan for the United States, but a Bataan utterly devoid of any background of heroism.

NOVER

For months we have been fighting a delaying action at Vichy. We could not hope to win a spectacular victory on that diplomatic battlefield. The odds against us were too great. We were in no position to compel Vichy to reverse its trend toward collaboration with the Axis. Even under the most favorable circumstances there was not the slightest possibility that the men of Vichy would defy the Nazi lightning and resume the war against the enemies of mankind. The Mikhailovitches of France are in prison or are fighting under De Gaulle's banner outside of France.

All we could hope to achieve by our Vichy policy was to stave off defeat—to prevent Vichy from becoming the complete tool of Hitler, to keep the French fleet, Dakar, North Africa out of his grasp.

HISTORY will judge whether this policy achieved even a partial measure of success. It is true that in the 22 months since the fall of France the French fleet has remained French, that Dakar did not become German, that some measure of resistance to the extreme Nazi demands was manifested.

It is also true, however, that during this period Vichy adopted Hitler's Nuremberg laws as its own, made Unoccupied France into a supply base and arsenal for the Wehrmacht, permitted the Dunkerque to return to Toulon in violation of specific pledges made by Marshal Petain to Admiral Leahy, turned over supplies from French North Africa to Rommel's forces in Libya, permitted the Japanese to occupy Indo-China and in other ways served the interests of the Axis.

Against such repeated acts of bad faith the United States could only repeat but relatively ineffectual protests. The trouble has been that our capacity for reprisal is limited. We could and for long periods did withhold shipments of supplies to Vichy which Vichy has been clamoring for. We could break off relations with Vichy. But if such action would have benefited Hitler more than us, and that could always be argued, that would have been tantamount to cutting off our nose to spite our face. In every case the pressure we were able to exert on Vichy was negligible in comparison with the pressure which Hitler was able to exert on Vichy.

RECENTLY the United States and Vichy concluded a comprehensive agreement touching all points at issue between this country and the government of Unoccupied France. "Normal" relations were thus restored. Indeed, the surface improvement was such that, when Laval and Petain met the other day, the belief was expressed here that the return of Laval into the Vichy cabinet was out of the question since the United States had objected to such a development.

Why, in view of what has since happened, did Vichy make such an agreement? Was the aged Petain being used by Hitler as a French Kurusu to fool us into thinking that all was well in Vichy when it was not? Yet so little time was allowed to elapse between the signing of the Vichy-United States agreement and the change of government at Vichy that this could hardly have been the case.

Was the agreement, on the other hand, entered into by Vichy in what goes there for good faith? That is not only possible but probable. The fact of the matter is that whatever the men of Vichy may think the people of France are anti-Axis and pro-American. Indeed, there is abundant evidence to prove that they have been growing more so. Riom was a flash of lightning revealing the true, heroic France, not the sorry France of the Petains, Darlans, Lavals and the rest of that slimy crew.

IT WAS PROBABLY just because Vichy was in its own uneasy fashion beginning to pay some attention to American demands that Hitler found it necessary to move in his heaviest reinforcements. And when it comes to reprisals the advantages are all on his side.

He could not only threaten Vichy with dour measures, as the United States was in no position to do, but he could also hold out to the men of Vichy tempting rewards for collaboration—the release of some of the war prisoners, a lowering of occupation costs, the easing of restrictions on travel between Occupied and Unoccupied France, etc.

WHEN THE FINAL test came, this week, the overriding factor, however, was not the rewards which Hitler could hand out to the men of Vichy or the punishment he could mete out to them and to the French people if they were obstreperous but the judgment of the men of Vichy regarding the trend of the war.

We know we are going to win the war. We know our strength, our determination, our readiness to make any sacrifice to destroy the enemies of mankind. We know that while things have been going hard with us the defeats we have suffered are only an interlude, that the tide will turn.

But the prospects of the future have proved far less persuasive to the men of Vichy than the realities of the present. Laval's return is a sign that the men of Vichy are now once again convinced that Hitler is going to win. They find it easy to do so because the government they operate was founded on such a thesis and has expressed it at every turn. In giving way to Hitler Marshal Petain has once again, whether his senile brain realizes it or not, betrayed the France that honored him, the uniform he wears, the people he rules.

Week Set Aside to Promote Jobs for Middle-Aged

Declaring there was a place for veterans of the last war and other workers over 40 years of age in the war production program, President Roosevelt yesterday proclaimed a national employment week beginning May 3.

He urged its observance by organizations and individuals "to the end that our unemployed men and women over 40 may be given the opportunity to take their place in, and add their efforts to, the war production program of the country."

It is fitting to remember, the Chief Executive said, that the men who were in the military ranks in 1917 and 1918 not only can serve, but are virtually needed in the ranks of industry and agriculture today. He added:

"They had something to give in youth and valor then; they have something to give in experience and skill today."

For them and for workers past 40, he said, there is a place in jobs for which they already are fitted and a place for them in job-training courses designed to increase the skills of the Nation's man power.

Not alone on a basis of patriotism did Mr. Roosevelt urge employers to take on older workers. They should do so on the basis of sound business sense as well, he said, for these persons have qualifications which younger persons lack.

"Work experience, stability, and responsibility are assets we cannot afford to waste in this crisis," the President asserted.

Thomas H. Meyers Funeral Is Set For Tomorrow

Requiem mass for Thomas H. Myers, 74, for many years a well-known businessman in Braddock Heights, Md., will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow in the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, Sixteenth Street and Park Road Northwest.

Mr. Myers was stricken with a heart attack in his automobile Sunday as he left Mount Olivet Cemetery at Frederick, Md., with his two daughters after placing a bouquet on the grave of his wife, who died in 1936. He died a short time later in the Frederick City Hospital.

A native of Frederick, where he was formerly a merchant, Mr. Myers conducted the Avalon Hotel at Braddock Heights, Maryland, summer resort, for 20 years before retiring.

At the time of his death he resided at 3021 Fifteenth Street Northwest with his daughters, Mrs. Mary Myers Talbott and Mrs. Louise Conlon Cabeza, who survive with a brother, Charles O. Myers, of Baltimore.

Judge Lectures on How To Be Happy Though Married

Only the soft, sweet strains of a muted violin were lacking in Police Court yesterday as Judge John P. McMahon paused in the course of dispensing justice to discourse on how to be happy though married.

"Most women would rather get a little less food if they could get a little more attention," observed the judge solemnly to a courtroom suddenly alive with interest. Even hardened court attendants turned attentive ears.

"Most fellows get a little careless about this after being married a little while," Judge McMahon continued, seemingly choosing his words with care. By this time, even the defendant accused of assault on his wife and drunkenness was listening—a gleam of new promise in his eyes.

"Just working and supporting your family is not enough," the judge declared. "There is a great deal more to life."

As for the defendant, Joseph L. Price, 33, a sheet metal worker, of 321 Todd Place Northeast, he was fined $25 for assault and another $25 for drunkenness.

Stock Market Slumps Following Laval News

New York, April 14 (AP).—Prices of stocks, bonds and commodities recorded wide losses today on a selling movement touched off by the news of Pierre Laval's appointment to a high place in the Vichy government.

In the Stock Exchange, leading shares dropped to the lowest average level since April, 1933, and individual losses ranged from 25 cents to around $2 or more a share. Although dealings picked up on the decline, the volume remained moderate at around 557,000 shares. The Associated Press composite of 60 leading stocks fell 70 cents to $33.40, which, however, remains well above the 1932 depression low.

Many bonds in the low priced division dipped as much as $10 per $1000. Chicago wheat closed 2 to 2¼ cents a bushel lower and corn fell 1 to 1½ cents.

Motivating the selling movement in all markets, brokers said, were fears that Laval's return to power in the Vichy regime pointed to closer collaboration with the Nazis.

Symphony Season To Close Tonight

With Washington's future symphonic plans to be determined by the success of the National Symphony Orchestra's annual drive which opens today, the Capital's winter symphony season will close tonight with the concert by the Philadelphia Orchestra in Constitution Hall at 8:45.

Conductor Eugene Ormandy has drawn from three of his locally broadcast programs in "The Three Bs" series for tonight's concert, opening with his own arrangement of the Bach Toccata, Intermezzo and Fugue, following it with the Seventh Symphony of Beethoven. After the intermission he has programmed the Second Symphony of Brahms to complete "The Three Bs" cycle.

As an added feature, the orchestra will play Harl McDonald's "San Juan Capistrano," tone pictures of the historic California mission. A celebrated American composer, McDonald is also manager of the orchestra.

Red Tape and Delaying Tactics Hamper WPB, Planner Nathan Charges in Note to Nelson

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Charges of red tape" and delaying action" in conversion of private industry to war work were brought against the industry branches of the War Production Board by Robert R. Nathan, chairmn of WPB's planning board, in a memorandum to Donld M. Nelson, WPB chairman, two days after the resignation on March 14 of Robert R. Guthrie, former chief of the WPB textile, clothing and leather goods branch, it was disclosed yesterday.

A copy of the memorandum was presented yesterday to the Senate Committee Investigating the War Effort as it opened its investigation of charges by Guthrie that dollar-a-year men in the WPB were resisting conversion of their private industries. Guthrie, the commtitee's first witness, developed his charges in more detail and declared that the best means of assuring rapid conversion would be to replace WPB men who might be serving two masters."

Placed in Record

In the memorandum, inserted in the record by Charles P. Clark, associate counsel for the Senate committee, Nathan declared that normal production of the civilian durable goods industries "must be ruthlessly ceased" because they would not engage in all-out conversion "until they are absolutely closed."

"Where a modest output is absolutely essential, then this output should be confined to the smaller plants in the industry," Nathan suggested.

He conceded to Nelson that "these seem like drastic recommendations" and warned that attempts to put them into effect would be met by demands for more information. He asserted that demands for statistical information already made by WPB's industry branches "are much in the nature of such delaying action, and it seems to me imperative to cut through red tape, in full awareness that hardships will be imposed upon various sectors of the economy and that minor errors may be made."

This support for Guthrie's position was reinforced by Senator Harry S. Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, committee chairman, who said at the end of the hearing that the committee felt that "a few more actions" like Guthrie's "will straighten out the WPB."

Senator Truman announced that Nelson will be called to testify tomorrow. Today the committee will hear Philip D. Reed, chief of WPB's bureau of industry branches and chairman of the board of the General Electric Co., who was charged by Guthrie yesterday with being "disposed" to delay conversion "of the very industries which must be converted at breakneck speed if we are to reach the levels of war production scheduled for the end of 1943."

Guthrie said that since his resignation and the announcement of the Truman committee's inquiry, Nelson "has stepped in on Reed's lagging program and has done a rapid and commendable job of forcing out stop-orders requiring the conversion of practically all civilian durable goods industries to war work."

"The type of thinking which allowed pin-ball and juke box manufacture to continue until May is not a Jap-stopping type of approach," he said.

Guthrie also criticized Kenneth W. Marriner, chief of WPB's wool section, for "persistent dragging of his feet" in resisting drastic curtailment of wool for civilian use and mandatory blending to eke out the wool stockpile.

Clark interposed that Marriner, a dollar-a-year man, was receiving $120,000 a year as salary from his private wool companies in Boston. Guthrie charged that Marriner had stated he was in Washington to represent his company and the woolen industry.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Housewives' Anxious Reaction to Man's Statement That, 'Pressure Cooker Is Graveyard of Vitamins,' Sends Us to Nutrition Scientist for Final Word

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been a devoted reader of your column for years, and have, by turns, applauded or decried the viewpoints advanced therein,—but always silently, heretofore. Never until now have I been seized by the urge to "take pen in hand." The urge is inspired by "Faithful Subscriber's" statement, which appeared April 8, as follows: "—The pressure cooker is 'the graveyard of vitamins.' For heaven's sake, don't use a pressure cooker in preparing your children's food, since vitamin values perish in the process."

Can I believe my eyes? For a long time, I have been practically an outcast from certain circles because I have not yet capitulated to the pressure cooker; and, frankly, the reason is that I don't feel I can afford to scrap my stew pans for these expensive gadgets. Often, I have felt like hanging my head in shame, when I have heard the sacrifices of hats and permanent waves made by other women, in order to "do right" by their families!

So please, Miss Haworth, won't you open this subject wide, and let us have a free-for-all discussion on the momentous question: Does pressure cooking preserve or destroy vitamins? Sincerely yours,

BREATHLESS READER.

Man's Exaggerated Claim Holds Germ of Truth

DEAR B. R.: So many inquiries in like vein have reached this desk, by mail and telephone, since "Faithful Subscriber's" unqualified condemnation of pressure cooking was published, that I have appealed to Dr. Esther Batchelder, chief of the Foods and Nutrition Division of the Federal Bureau of Home Economics, to "let in light" on the subject.

To this request, Dr. Batchelder has helpfully responded, not only with a letter discussing the effect of cooking upon foodstuffs generally, but also with a mimeographed digest of knowledge the bureau has compiled concerning the effects of pressure cooking. This digest is entitled "Cooking in Steam Pressure Cookers"—in case you wish to obtain a copy by writing to the Bureau of Home Economics. And, just for good measure, she enclosed a pamphlet entitled, "Vitamin Contents of Foods," a reprint of pages 286-295 from the Yearbook of Agriculture, 1939. You may want that, too.

Now, about your question: Does pressure cooking preserve or destroy vitamins? The Bureau digest says: "There is at present no simple answer to the question of vitamin losses that may occur in pressure cooking. The use of higher temperatures obtained by steam pressure is generally supposed to cause greater destruction of vitamins than ordinary cooking methods.

"However, the extent of the vitamin destruction caused by pressure cooking depends in large part on the length of time this higher temperature is applied and on the length of time required for the pressure cooker to heat up and cool down. In fact, a very short period of pressure cooking in a size and type of pressure cooker that can be quickly heated up and cooled down may cause no greater destruction of vitamins than the longer cooking required by ordinary cooking methods.

Since some of the vitamins are soluble in water, part of the vitamin value in foods may be lost in cooking water, or if the juices drawn out of cooking are discarded. This would be true in the case of ordinary cooking as well in the case of pressure cooking. Minerals are not destroyed by the heat of cooking, but are found in solution in cooking liquid and in juice drawn out of cooking. For minerals as well as vitamins it is, then, important to use 'pot liquor.'

"Pressure cookers which have long heating-up and cooling-down times can be used to advantage only for foods which, under ordinary cooking conditions, require long, slow cooking—such as cereals, dried legumes, certain root vegetables (such as rutabagas and beets) and the less tender meats and poultry. If foods requiring a relatively short cooking time—such as root vegetables—are prepared in this type of pressure cooker, they should not be cooked along with foods that require longer cooking—such as meat or fowl. Overcooking results in poor flavor, color and texture; and usually, also, in increased vitaman losses. Pressure cookers which heat up and cool down rapidly may be used satisfactorily for any foods which can be cooked in water or steam, including both green and strong-juiced vegetables."

And, lastly, says the digest: "There is likely to be greater destruction of vitamins in cooking in pressure equipment than in canning in the same piece of equipment. Processing foods in cans or jars with lids in place, reduces the destruction of vitamins caused by oxidation—a chemical process that takes place in the presence of air and is speeded up by heat."

As you may recall, "Faithful Subscriber" strongly recommended that constant preference be given to fresh and uncooked foods, over cooked and canned foods. Discussing this point, Dr. Batchelder writes: "As to the general question of the use of raw vegetables, as compared to the use of cooked vegetables, I believe we are representing the opinion of authorities on this subject when we say that for some foods, cooking increases palatability and digestibility.

"Different methods of preparation add to the varity of the diet and allow for interesting combinations that would not be possible if all foods were used raw. The cooking of foods containing starch renders the starch granules more accessible to the digestive juices. Cooking increases the palatability of meat for most persons; and, in the case of pork and pork products, thorough cooking is essential because of the possibility of trichinosis, resulting from the use of underdone pork.

"Also, recent studies of the preparation of food for (preservation by) freezing and drying indicates that the application of an adequate amount of heat destroys the enzymes which, if left in the food, would hasten the destruction of certain vitamins. For that reason, it appears that proper cooking of foods which must be held for any length of time is one valuable means of protecting the vitamin values."

But to sum up, in conclusion, the effect upon foods of pressure cooking, it appears that scientific research has arrived at a guarded opinion which may be informally stated as follows: While this process is not as destructive of vitamin values as old fashioned cooking—i. e., in a pot half filled with boiling water—it remains to be proved whether it is a real advance over the generally accepted latterday method of "stewing foods in their own juices, or in a minimum of added moisture, in the traditional type pots and p...

Galmour Sandwiches

Irene Dunne, movie actress, serves for tea water cress sandwiches and shortbread—with a difference. Cress is chopped, mixed with a hint of mayonnaise, made into ribbon sandwiches. In other words, a layer of bread, then cress, then another slice of bread, then cress, until you have about five slices of bread. This is sliced down as you would a layer cake, the "slices" appearing in a striped or ribbon effect.

Better Figures Called Answer To CD Ruling

By Ida Jean Kain

Donald M. Nelson, our war production chief, has dashed in where the average man would fear to tread and is telling women what they are going to wear. Materials have been stripped down to essentials, and whatever is wrong with a woman's figure will meet the eye.

There will be no flattering little extra jackets to conceal that spare tire at the midriff, no disguising pleats and drapery, no frills, no furbelows. Slacks will be snug, skirts will be skimpier and legs will be longer and probably in cotton stockings.

How to Trim Down

I predict that the new fashions will promote better figures. Here is a trio of exercises to trim you down:

To take a tuck in your waistline: Stretch right arm overhead, let left hand hang down at side. Bend acutely to left, sliding left hand down leg as far as possible. Straighten up, stretch left arm overhead, and slide right hand down leg as you bend to that side. Six times will be enough for a starter. Later on do 12 counts and gradually work up to 25. Take your exercise slow and easy.

To take the heft off your hips: Lie face downward on floor, head pillowed on folded arms, legs straight down. Raise alternate legs backward from hips—do not bend knees. Raise leg slowly and as high in back as possible. Continue for ten counts. Gradually increase to 50.

For shapely legs: Kick off shoes and walk, up on toes, down on heels, for five minutes a day. Stretch arms overhead as you walk and pull slim through the middle. This gives you lovely legs and a streamlined midsection.

Watch Your Diet

Stop worrying about the sugar shortage and prune your calories to normalize your weight. Your daily menus should measure up to this nutrition yardstick: One-half grapefruit or fruit juice, plus a second fruit; one egg; one serving of lean meat, fish or fowl—trim off fat; four slices of 100 per cent whole-grain or enriched bread; three pats of butter, each one-fourth inch thick; one-half cup cooked greens, a serving of yellow vegetable and a green salad; two glasses of skim milk or buttermilk, or one glass of milk plus an ounce of yellow cheese. Foods should be baked, broiled or boiled—never fried. This list forms a protective diet of about 1200 calories and will improve your health as it takes off excess pounds.

Relax and Win the War

A NEW society to win the war—the Relaxers, Inc.—has been started by Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, noted reformer.

Mrs. DeGoofey

The object of the society, Mrs. DeGoofey told her press conference yesterday was to promote cocktail parties, large teas, mob receptions and other social events that would make Americans "forget the strain they were living under."

The president of the Do Something About It League also announced she was withdrawing from 27 other defense and war organizations with which she was affiliated.

"None of them was being run as it should have been," she declared. "They were not headed by the right types of women. The leaders were all too bossy and there were little cliques that tried to run everything. Nobody would listen to me. So I decided to start my own war organization."

The reformer declared her new group, The Relaxers, Inc., would seek at once to organize cocktail parties for everyone.

"We are not having nearly enough cocktail parties and teas," she said. "People's nerves will crack if something isn't done."

"But Mrs. DeGoofey," protested a society columnist," the smart people are cocktailing constantly. And you simply can't get near a bar."

Corner on Cocktailing By Socialites

"That's just the trouble," was the retort. "The privileged interests are doing all the cocktailing."

"But don't you think those people need to let down in their hectic rush to do war work," protested a representative of Veneer Magazine. "Otherwise they will go mad."

"I don't see why a privileged group of socialites, volunteer war workers, Government and Army and Navy bigwigs should do all the letting down," replied Mrs. DeGoofey. "These people keep saying, 'Oh, we can't keep up this mad pace without relaxing.' Then if that's true, all the rest of us need to relax."

"If this country needs parties to keep its war effort going, then I'm going to see that we get parties," declared the reformer, pounding the table. "Bigger and better parties to win the war is my motto!"

"Don't you think the $1450-a-year Government workers need cocktail parties to keep up their morale the same as the $10,000-a-year man?" Mrs. DeGoofey asked. 'And look at the housewives trying to carry on without new refrigerators, vacuum cleaners or even tin cans! Surely they need a little let-up from the strain. And what of the men and women working in airplane factories and ship yards—and not even wearing pretty uniforms? I tell you all these people should have cocktail parties—or at least large teas or buffet suppers organized for them at once. Otherwise, we're likely to have a revolution."

Large Parties To Aid Morale

Mrs. DeGoofey said she would start raising funds at once to finance a daily 5-to-7 tea and cocktail party at Griffith Stadium for Government workers suffering from the strain of thinking about the war. She said she also planned to organize mammoth regional bridge luncheons to keep up the morale of suburban and apartment housewives.

Iam also promoting a series of birthday parties for all persons mentally aged less than 14," she said, "and I am asking all women's clubs to plan elaborate spring fetes, pageants, Maypole dances, etc., so that we may forget the headlines. Furthermore, I am negotiating with several circus troops to come here to keep the minds of men relaxed when the ball team is out of town.

"The biggest part of my plan, however, is to arrange cocktail parties for all the men who are doing the fighting. They are the ones who really need to relax. They are the ones whose nerves are most likely to snap.

"Therefore I am making a Nation-wide appeal for help in organizing a giant cocktail party for General Wainright and the men left at Corregidor. I am asking all women who are experts in making hors d'oeuvres to get in touch with me. I also think it would be nice if we had some chocolate brownies. Later I shall hold other cocktail parties for men on other fighting fronts. I am convinced that this is all we need in order to get our men properly relaxed so they may win the war."

Two Envoys, Accomplished Fencers, Among Sponsors for Fencing Festival

CIRCLED IN RED on the forthcoming calendar of at least two foreign diplomats in Washington is the Fencing Festival, which will take place at Gaston Hall, Georgetown University on April 21. Long a champion, as well as a faithful practitioner of that graceful and elegant sport is the Ambassador of Ecuador, Capt. Calon Eloy Alfaro, who finished off his training and "form" at the United States Military Academy. A more recent addition to the Capital's foreign corps, but an equally enthusiastic fencer is the Minister of India, Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai who learned swordplay at Cambridge.

Ambassador Alfaro

Both will be among the most interested members of the audience when crack fencing teams from half a dozen colleges cross swords on April 21. Senorita Erma Cistillo Najera, pretty daughter of the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera, will be on hand to present the trophies to the winning teams; and her father, also expected to be present, will be able to pass judgment on whether the teams, fencing in French fashion, might have done better if they had resorted to fighting it out with machetes—Mexican style.

Long a president of the Washington Fencing Club, Ambassador Alfaro prefers to fence with a saber—a weapon with a dual sharp edge and a blunt point that does not require the protection of a soft button. Minister Bajpai also favors the saber as does handsome young Clarence H. Simmons, who hails from Guatemala, heads Georgetown's fencing club, and is in charge of the Fencing Festival.

Honorary patrons for the event include the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Knox; the Governor of Virginia and Mrs. Darden; the Governor or Maryland and Mrs. O'Conor, and Gov. Harold Stassen of Minnesota. A fencing expert, who frankly admits he deeply regrets his favorite sport is not followed more widely, Simmons yesterday mentioned in passing the qualities required of a past master at the game. "It takes a quick eye, a steady nerve . . . and most of all, years of experience," he said.

THERE SEEMS to be a slight misunderstanding as to just which Count and Countess de Chambrun paid a recent visit to Washington and then slipped away on Monday for Palm Beach, where they will remain until May . . . Coming for a quiet Capital sojourn, the couple were entertained at a number of small parties, including a dinner given by the Minister of Finland and Mme. Procope, and they stopped in for a cup of tea with Mrs. Nicholas Longworth shortly before they left on Monday afternoon.

They are the Count and Countess Jean Pierre de Chambrun. He is the son of the 75-year-old Marquis Pierre de Chambrun and the former Margaret Rives Nichols, of Cincinnati, daughter of Mrs. Bellamy Storer, and a cousin as well as a sister-in-law of the former Miss Clara Longworth (Countess Adelbert de Chambrun) and the late Nicholas Longworth. Count Jean Pierre is not to be confused with his cousin, Count Rene, who is married to the former Marie Jose Laval, daughter of Pierre Laval, the recently reinstated French Vice Premier.

Count Jean Pierre's wife is the former Giselle Hugo-Graty, and she and her husband have with them at Palm Beach now their two youngest sons, Jean and Pierre. Charles, aged 12, is at school in Canada.

"IT'S GRAND to be too busy to think just now," Catherine Cate Coblentz, widely known poet and author of several books for children, said yesterday. With one of her books, "The Falcon of Eric the Red" now on the presses (scheduled for summer publication), she's now working on "The Beggar's Penny," a story of Holland, coming out next year.

Mrs. Coblentz

Incidentally, an illustration for her story, "Daniel Boone's Cat," which appeared in the American Girl magazine some time ago, has just been adjudged the best black and white drawing printed in any magazine during 1941. The artist is Paul Rabut, and it seems two of his drawings were accepted from over 4000 entries. Both chanced to be illustrations for stories written by Mrs. Coblentz, and both were among the 300 competing for the Art Director's Club Medal, which will be awarded to Mr. Rabut today in a special ceremony at the Metropolitan Art Museum in New York.

AROUND WASHINGTON tap rooms, they're telling the story that allegedly came out of a White House conference. Seems a forthright Administration supporter spoke out in meeting to the effect that it was high time there was some "new blood" in the Government. "Mr. President," he is said to have said, "the American people are sick and tired of seeing the same old names in the headlines, the same faces on front pages" . . . The President listened attentively, so the story goes, and then dreamily looked out the window, apparently seeking inspiration. "I've got it," he said at last, face alight. "Harry Hopkins!"

Mrs. Gulick Gives Party For Visitors

"It's a Moon Gate," explained Mrs. Mason Gulick to the guests at her "after 5:30" party yesterday who were unfamiliar with Oriental lore and fascinated by the circular door that opened from her little house on Nineteenth Street into the miniature garden.

But most of the guests who dropped in at the informal gathering, at which Commander and Mrs. Richard Farrelly were co-hosts, were more than familiar with the Far East and found themselves in familiar surroundings in the Chinese-decorated house of Marines in the Far East, where Mr. and Mrs. Carberry Ritchie, of Palm Beach, Fla., parents of Mrs. Farrelly, who are en route to a stay in New York.

Assisting at the pleasant party was Miss Isabel Devereux, Mrs. Gulick's niece, who saw that everyone found what they wanted in the refreshment line and steered guests to the coolness of the tiny garden. Reminiscing about their experiences together in China where Mrs. Gulick's husband, the late Col. Gulick, was Commandant of Marines in the Far East, were the hostess and Mrs. Mahlon Perkins. Mr. Perkins, who has recently returned from China, was also in the group.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. John H. Towers arrived separately, where Admiral Towers was receiving compliments on the efficiency of his aide, Commander William P. (Tommy) Thompson, who produced the admiral's favorite drink for him the minute he stepped in the door. Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck and Mrs. David Sellers chatted together in a comfortable nook, waiting for their respective husbands to arrive. But busy desks made their vigils unrewarded.

Others there were Mrs. Cary Langhorne, Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Meem, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Louis Little, Mrs. John R. Williams, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Mrs. Lionel Atwill and many others.

Miss Dorothy Rice To Be Bride Sunday

In a quiet ceremony at the Chevy Chase home of her parents Sunday afternoon, Miss Dorothy Eloise Rice, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Rice, will become the bride of William Jay Schultz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schultz, also of Chevy Chase.

The vows will read by the Rev. J. H. Dunham at 4 o'clock and a reception, also at the home, will follow for the wedding guests.

Gala Concert Climaxes 'Pan-American Day' Events

Hundreds of Washingtonians Flock To Pan American Union for Fete

By Patricia Grady

Showing just a shade of "blackout jitters," a glittering audience drawn from the traditional "three circles of Washington"—diplomatic, residential and official—hurried to the Pan American Union last night and were in their seats by 9 o'clock, though the concert that was the grande finale of Pan-American Day was not scheduled to start until 9:30.

They were taking no chances on being caught in the surprise blackout scheduled between 9 and 11, and the Hall of the Americas, in all its flag-bedecked elegance, took on the aspects of an informal reception before the starting hour. On hand for the concert, which signalized the eleventh celebration of the day that is set aside to symbolize "the voluntary union of the Americas in one continental community," were most of the diplomats from the south of the border countries. Earlier in the day, the Latin-American diplomats and Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles were received at the White House at noon by the President.

The director of the Pan American Union, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, met his guests at the entrance, as is his custom, before directing them to the second-floor hall, where the United States Marine Band, under the direction of Capt. William Santelmann, waited to play the music of Latin America. The noted Brazilian soprano, Elsie Houston, was the featured artist of the evening and her specialities—the folk songs of the Latin-American countries—were received enthusiastically. Sharing honors with the soprano, were Francisco Mignone, one of her countrymen, who is a well-known composer and conductor, and Bernardo Segall, a Brazilian pianist.

Among the early arrivals were the dean of the Diplomatic Corps, Dr. Manuel de Freyre y Santander, the Peruvian Ambassador; the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil, the Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Martins, the latter of whom came back from New York for the concert; the Minister of Honduras and Senora de Caceres, who had a large party with them, the Ambassador of Venezuela and Senora de Escalante, and the Minister of El Salvador and Senora de Castro.

Others there were the Minister of Costa Rica and Senora de Fernandez, who had their daughter, Leda, with them, Senorita Cristina Michels daughter of the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Michels; the Minister of New Zealand and Mrs. Walter Nash, the Minister of Latvia and Mme. Bilmanis, the Minister of Iceland and Mrs. Thor Thors, the Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Oscar Chapman, who had with them Mrs. Benjamin F. Stapleton, wife of the Mayor of Denver, Colo., and her son, Ensign Benjamin F. Stapleton, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Duggan, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Mrs. Ricardo Alfaro, Mrs. Irene Caldwell and literally scores of others.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Mme. Diamantopoulos, wife of the Greek Minister, and Mme. Depasta, wife of the Minister-Counselor of the Greek Legation, will return to the Capital the end of the week from New York where they are staying at the Ambassador Hotel.

The Iranian Minister, Mohammed Schayesteh, is expected to arrive in the Capital tomorrow after a sojourn at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York.

Mme. Karel Cervenka, wife of the Counselor of the Czecho-Slovakian Legation, has cards out for a 5-to-8 o'clock cocktail party on Friday, in her California Street apartment.

Mrs. Breckinridge Long, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, is spending a few days at the Ambassador Hotel in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence A. Hart, jr., have joined Mr. Hart's mother at the Ambassador Hotel. Mrs. Hart, jr., is the former Miss Sally Green whose marriage took place in Dallas, Tex., last fall.

Mr. and Mrs. George William Harris have cards out for an "after 5" party on Sunday in their Woodland Drive home. Guests of honor will be the daughter of the household, Miss Aileen Harris, and Miss Achsah Dorsey, who have just returned from a month's tour of the southwestern States. The vacationers returned to the Capital Friday.

Among the Washingtonians at the St. Regis Hotel in New York are Capt. and Mrs. A. B. Hagner and Mr. and Mrs. A. Harding Paul.

Miss Margaret Beadleston has joined her mother, Mrs. C. Perry Beadleston, at the Weylin in New York.

Lieut. V. F. Dooley To Wed Miss Burke In Summer Rites

Of interest in Washington is the announcement of the betrothal of Miss Katharine Frances Burke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Joseph Burke, of New York, to Lieut. Vincent Fenton Dooley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Paul Dooley, of New Haven, Conn. A late summer wedding is planned.

Lieut. Dooley, who is a graduate of Catholic University in Washington and from the Law School of Cornell University, received his commission as second lieutenant in 1940. He is now stationed at Camp Croft, Spartanburg, S. C.

He is a grandson on his maternal side of the late Judge William C. Robinson, co-founder and first acting dean of the Law School of Yale University.

Notables to Attend Final Concert

Constitution Hall will draw one of its typically cosmopolitan audiences for the last time this season when the Philadelphia Orchestra plays its final Washington concert tonight at 8:45.

Among those in the boxes circling the hall will be the British Minister, Sir Ronald Campbell; the Polish Ambassador and Mme. Ciechanowska; the Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Martins; the Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggmann, the Cuban Ambassador and Senora de Concheso and the Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Baroness van Boetzelaer.

Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, wife of the United States Minister to New Zealand, has added her name to the list of box-holders for the evening as has Mrs. Cyrus McCormick. While Mrs. Roosevelt will be unable to attend, the official White House family will be represented by the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau and the Attorney General and Mrs. Biddle.

Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, wife of the Presidential secretary, will share her usual box with Mrs. Stanley Woodward, newly-elected vice chairman of the Washington committee for the orchestra.

John Erskine Aids Campaign For Symphony

By Martha McLean

Said John Erskine yesterday, "You've got to have a symphony orchestra in Washington. You've got to have it as a barometer of the culture of Congress."

With that as the exception, the reasons given—and numerous they were—for symphony in Washington next year followed down the line on a "war and music" theme when the annual sustaining fund campaign of the National Symphony Orchestra was launched at a luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel.

"Everyone wants liberty and justice in this world—for themselves," was one of the observances made by the author, who spoke as he writes, which means, pulling no punches. But despite a human record which can't be looked on with much pride, he finds some solace looking at the faces of people listening to music.

You can see something different in faces then, even a little soul, said he. Of course, the look doesn't last—not after they've left the concert hall or at best after they've gone a block or so down the street.

Luncheon Divided Into Three Parts

Roundly speaking, about 400 volunteer workers, including distinguished representatives from musical and social fields, and from the services, and business and professions of Washington, gathered yesterday to start work toward raising $114,000 for the symphony next year.

The luncheon, like Gaul, was divided into three parts. Part one began when E. R. Finkenstaedt announced in stentorian tones, "Everyone please begin eating." With a reversal of this decree, "Everyone now stop eating and be very quiet," part two, a broadcast message from Walter Damrosch, dean of American conductors, got under way.

Then when the eating was over, the third part of the program, speeches were in order with Lieut. C. Leslie Glenn, rector of St. John's Parish, following Mr. Erskine. Toastmaster was Robert J. Whiteford, Washington attorney.

Celebrities At Head Table

Frank Walker, the Postmaster General, who is heading a campaign committee from the Government angle, took a bow with his coworkers, and a double round of applause went to the Navy committee, headed by Mrs. Emory Scott Land and Mrs. Alfred Johnson—when they came within a hair's breadth of being left out of the committee introductions.

Honored guests, whose names are always on the list when it comes to making music "go" in Washington, included Mrs. Gilbert Rowcliff, Mrs. Peter Belin, Mrs. Truxton Beale and Mrs. Edwin Watson. Faces also seen at the speakers' table included Corcoran Thom, A. F. E. Horn, Dr. Hans Kindler, Mrs. Leslie Glenn, Miss Elsie Houston, Walter Bruce Howe, Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, Mrs. Milton King, Miss Alice Clapp, Mrs. Matthew John Whittall, Milton King, J. P. Hays and others.

Noted Irish Poet Arriving Today

Padraic Colum, well known Irish poet and playwright, will arrive in Washington today and will be the guest of Miss Lesley Frost for several days at Frost School on Kalorama Road.

Here as a delegate for a "Congress of Esthetics," Mr. Colum will lecture the evening of his arrival. He has rewritten a number of myths for children, Greek, Roman, Scandinavian as well as the Irish, and was prominently associated with the Abbey Theater movement.

Music-in-Dark Featured at Fete Given by Col. and Mrs. Terry

"Music in the dark" was a feature of the concert given last night by Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Spencer B. Terry at their home on Thirty-fifth Street.

Until the air raid sirens wailed, lights gleamed brightly in the windows as almost a hundred guests from Washington's "four circles"—diplomatic, official, residential and service—gathered for an evening's relaxation such as music can give in times of stress.

Windows at the Terry home remained unshaded. Instead, during the half-hour test black-out, the lights were turned off entirely and the guests listened in the dark as extemporaneous piano music was played the while.

Though the outside world and its war interposed itself after all, Mrs. Terry, who herself is a musician, had planned the gathering for the purpose of letting her guests "get away from the war" just for a few short hours. Her friend, Mary Ledgerwood, of New York, and a noted contralto, was the featured artist of the evening and had chosen among her numbers such soul-soothing compositions as Schubert's "Ave Marie" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Miss Ledgerwood, who sings regularly in several churches in the New York area and has been widely featured in concerts in this country and Canada, chose a simple black gown which set off her auburn hair. Creamy gardenias lent their note of contrast.

Since she arrived Monday the singer has been widely feted, first, on the day of her arrival, at a luncheon given by Mrs. Henry Albers at the Shoreham. Tuesday, at a similar fete Ralph Kinnaird, a cousin, was in the role of host at the Mayflower, and today Mrs. Lois Weller will entertain for her at the Washington Club.

Mrs. Terry had chosen the national colors for her floral decorations last night. Doing their bit as hostesses along with their mother were the daughters of the house, the Misses Hope Silsbee, Constance and Hortense Terry. On the male side, Spencer, jr., joined his father in acting as host.

Invited to the musicale from the Diplomatic Corps were the Minister of Honduras and Senora de Caceres; the Minister of Thailand and Mme. Seni Pramoj, and the Second Secretary of the Chinese Embassy and Mrs. Yu; the Commercial Secretary at the Netherlands Legation and Mme. Hallo.

On leave from Senatorial sessions until tomorrow were a number of Senators and their wives included on the guest list, among them Senator and Mrs. Charles McNary, Senator and Mrs. Guy B. Gillette, Senator and Mrs. Charles Taft and Senator and Mrs. John Danaher. Representative and Mrs. John Vorys were also among those invited.

Also among the music lovers invited were Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, Mrs. Carl Droop, John Heath, Mrs. Charles Fairfax, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Paul Callaway, Col. and Mrs. Harry Hambleton, Col. Charles Reed, Mrs. Charles Williamson, Mrs. Henry Albers, the Rev. and Mrs. Paul Yinger, Mr. and Mrs. Lois Weller, Mrs. Martha Slater-Miller and Mrs. Henrietta Hamberger.

Ensign Bunting And Bride Return to Town

After a typical wartime honeymoon—barely a weekend long—Ensign and Mrs. Davis Eli Bunting are back in Washington, where they will make their home. Mrs. Bunting was Miss Margaret Ann Soper, daughter of Mrs. James A. Soper and the late Mr. Soper, until her marriage April 11 in Bethlehem Chapel of Washington Cathedral.

Ensign Bunting, a graduate of the Naval Academy, is on duty at the Naval Research Laboratory. He is the son of R. D. Bunting, of Corfu, N. Y.

The Rev. Theodore Wedel officiated for the ceremony at 3:30 in the afternoon. As a bride, Mrs. Bunting wore ivory satin cut with a long waistline and V neck. Her maid of honor was Miss Betty Jane Christmas, who was gowned in light blue taffeta fashioned on princess lines and off-the-shoulder bodice. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of spring flowers.

The bridesmaids, Miss Gertrude Wedel and Carolyn Hubbell, were attired in green and yellow taffeta, respectively, styled like the maid of honor's gown. They also carried old-fashioned bouquets.

Thomas Stevens was best man and the ushers were Ensign Henry Field, Ensign Chester Lee, Ensign David Green and Ensign John Crawford. A reception was held at the bride's home after the ceremony, and when the couple left on the wedding trip, Mrs. Bunting wore a yellow-gold plaid suit with apple-green hat and bag.

She attended National Cathedral School for Girls and Marjorie Webster Junior College.

Women Must Become Jack Of All Trades, Says Editor

By Genevieve Reynolds

IN THE near future, not only the man of the house but the woman as well will be a jack of all trades. Specifically, she must learn to repair the radio, iron, lamp, garden furniture, washing machine or automobile. This is the prediction of Miss Jean Guthrie, associate editor of Better Homes and Gardens.

Miss Bernice Burns

"The development of handicrafts in the household is a wartime necessity," she says, "but, it will serve the double purpose of knitting the family circle into a closer group and keeping needed equipment in working order."

Father and son working together to build a book shelf, a new swing for the back yard, will be better companions. Since, father, however, may be snapped up for wartime work, its up to the mother to be able to carry on, according to Miss Guthrie.

Simplified amusements—parlor stunts, outdoor games that long went out of fashion such as marching around the mulberry bush, postoffice, hide and seek will return to popularity, Miss Guthrie predicts.

Also, the busy housewife will want to know something about gardening, everything about nutrition, and plenty about how to repair electrical appliances.

"In fact," says Miss Guthrie, "when war came, the magazines revamped their entire makeup, information and editorials to meet the changed conditions. We knew that the busy mother wanted simple and easy to follow information on nutrition, how to repair household equipment, and how to market. She wanted the scientific knowledge translated into charts that could be followed quickly and easily."

Just what the magazines are doing to meet wartime conditions will be explained by Miss Guthrie at the meeting of District of Columbia Home Economics Women in Business tonight 6:30 o'clock at the Admiral Club, 1604 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest. Appearing on the panel discussion with her are: Miss Elizabeth Woody, director of foods, McCall's Magazine; Miss Eleanor Howe, coeditor, "What's New in Home Economics"; Miss Helen P. Hostetter, editor, Journal of Home Economics.

Miss Bernice Burns, chairman of the H. E. W. I. B.'s, will preside over the dinner and symposium.

USO Centers Popular With Soldiers

ALTHOUGH beer isn't served—only soft drinks—the United Service Organizations' recreational centers are popular with the soldiers. This bit of information was given by Mrs. Maurice T. Moore, vice chairman of the $32,000,000 USO Fund and chairman of the National Women's Committee, when she appeared as guest speaker at the Woman's National Press Club luncheon, yesterday at the Willard Hotel.

Miss Marion E. Martin

In discussing the forms of entertainment provided for the service, she pointed out that the USO let the soldiers choose what they wanted to do when they entered the centers. For example, when a soldier wants to be alone, the hostess doesn't drag him into a game of pingpong, bridge or a conversational powwow.

"The motherly type—the understanding older woman—is especially popular with the young soldiers," said the chic speaker, who wore a basic black dress adorned with a pearl necklace of six strands graduating in size. "It is to her that he tells his sorrows and joys. But when it comes to dancing—well, they still choose the pretty, charming young ones."

Because the soldiers want to get away from regimentation, the USO centers steer clear of that type of entertainment, explained Mrs. Moore. Therefore, we try to keep it the home variety as much as possible.

Negro branches of the USO have their own entertainers, girls who journey to dances on buses, their own bands and shows.

Reading is one of the things that the soldiers enjoy most. Mrs. Moore was a little surprised to find that classical music is a favorite with many in the camps.

Mrs. Esther Van Wagoner Tufty, president of the club, presided and introduced the speaker. In addition to the speaker, guests at the head table included: Mme. Chu, wife of Maj. Gen. Chu, Military Attache of the Chinese Embassy; Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, wife of the Federal Security Administration; Mrs. John J. McCloy, wife of the Assistant Secretary of War; Miss Marion Martin, chairman, woman's activities, Republican National Committee, and Mrs. Ralph Martin, of Florida.

Mrs. Moore, former chairman, women's division, Greater New York Committee for United China Relief, no doubt gave Mrs. McNutt, vice chairman of the local United China Relief drive, a few pointers from past experiences.

Dolls to Feature Tour of Houses

Dolls of long ago, dressed in the real fabrics and authentic fashions of their day, will be one of the features of the tour of Old Georgetown houses scheduled for Friday and Saturday afternoons, under the sponsorship of St. John's Episcopal Church in Georgetown.

The dolls will be the finest from the large collection of Miss Helen H. Thompson, of this city, a collection that has won honors in many exhibitions. Dolls dating from 1700 to the present day, including some from this country, England, France, Germany and Austria are included in the collection.

The dolls will be on display in the rectory of St. John's Church and on both days of the tour and Miss Thompson will be there to show her treasures, many of which have unique histories. One belonged to a child of Thomas Jefferson's family, another was from the family of Jefferson Davis.

Mrs. William B. Kerkam, jr., is chairman of the tour committee.

Hidden Hunger is a form of malnutrition that saps energy and health. Help fight it with vitamin-and-mineral-rich foods—including Sealtest Homogenized Vitamin "D" MILK

Here is a fortified milk especially valuable for this fight against Hidden Hunger. In addition to its natural store of milk vitamins and minerals (see table below), Sealtest Homogenized Vitamin "D" Milk contains 400 extra units of Vitamin "D" in every quart.

Homogenizing insures an equal share of these vital food elements in each glassful—and gives the milk a richer, creamier flavor. That's because there is "cream in every drop."

Remember! Not lack of food, but improper diet is the cause of Hidden Hunger. Safeguard your family with vitamin-rich, mineral-rich foods . . . and give them this finer Sealtest Homogenized Vitamin "D" Milk. (A pint a day for adults; a quart for children.)

5 More Ships Sunk by Subs, Navy Reveals

small merchantman, both United States ships, by Axis submarines off the Atlantic coast last week.

Sixty-eight survivors were landed here. They related tales of individual heroism by their shipmates and said that after each attack, Navy planes appeared within a short time and dropped flares in efforts to locate the Axis undersea raiders.

The Navy said the small merchantman was torpedoed in the early morning hours of April 9, and that only one of the crew of 40 was missing.

The tanker was torpedoed and shelled the night of April 10. Of the crew of 48, the Navy said 12 were dead and seven missing. Although withholding the location of the sinking, the Navy permitted disclosure that it occurred within sight of hundreds of spectators on shore and many were able to see the flashes of shellfire.

"Our soldiers and sailors can't fight without supplies and we mean to see that they get them," declared Chief Engineer Vasco R. Geer, of the tanker. The 57-year-old maritime veteran said he planned a brief visit to his home at Port Arthur, Tex., and then would go to sea again on the first ship available.

Geer said the submarine "circled around the stern of the ship and started to shell us—I only wish we had had a chance to use the gun against them."

The tanker had a deck gun and a Navy gun crew but survivors said the blast from the torpedoes and the flames that followed made it impossible to use them. The men did not see the sub but saw the flashes from its guns and said it remained about 300 yards away.

Ship's Crew Saved

New Orleans, April 14 (AP).—Six survivors of a Norwegian ship, torpedoed and sunk by an enemy submarine in the Atlantic early in March apparently without loss of life, arrived here today aboard an unnamed vessel from a foreign port.

Eighth Naval District public relations headquarters which made public the rescues did not identify the attacked ship.

Seven of the crew of 41 were rescued and the chief mate said he believed the others were saved as they all got aboard life rafts but so far they had not reported.

Lincoln Killer May Have Held Grudge

The suggestion that John Wilkes Booth assassinated Abraham Lincoln out of a personal grudge was advanced here last night on the seventy-seventh anniversary of the shooting of the Civil War President.

Speaking at a program in the Lincoln Museum sponsored by the Abraham Lincoln group of Washington, David Rankin Barbee, historian and newspaperman, cited the execution by Federal forces of three of Booth's friends as acts which rankled in the assassin's heart.

Barbee also said that Booth and the President's son, Robert Todd Lincoln, paid court to the same young lady in Washington and that the former was heard to swear vengeance against the President.

The speaker pictured Booth as a cultured, charming young man, and one of the foremost actors of the American stage. He asserted, also, that Booth was confirmed as an Episcopalian, and was not a Roman Catholic, as is widely believed.

The screening of pictures from that period in American history completed the program over which Representative George A. Donderro, of Michigan, chairman of the group, presided.

Reds Smashing Through Line Near Kharkov

By the Associated Press

London, April 14.—Russian armies of the Ukraine have torn a gaping hole in the German line 25 miles north of Kharkov and are plunging forward in what may be an enveloping maneuver against the great steel-producing center, Stockholm advices reported tonight.

The break-through was reported achieved by Marshal Timoshenko's forces below Belgorod, strategic rail junction 45 miles northwest of Kharkov.

The Germans themselves said that Russian assaults were continuing in the south, chiefly in the Donets Basin, and that a tank-led force of some 90,000 Red troops had launched a new and violent attack on the Central Front west of Moscow.

A Berlin broadcast heard by Exchange Telegraph said this attack—by six Soviet divisions, including one of toughened Siberians—had disrupted Nazi lines at some points but that the drive had been blunted and part of the attacking force wiped out.

In the Kalinin sector of the Northwestern Front the Moscow radio said Red forces had killed 1158 Germans and liberated four provincial villages.

The midnight communique of the Soviet Information Bureau said only that the Russians "conducted offensive operations against the Germans on several sectors of the front" and occupied a number of inhabited localities.

It reported further that 17 German planes were destroyed Monday for the loss of six Russian planes.

A supplement listed 2600 Germans killed—2200 of them in two days of fighting on the Leningrad front and the others in a night clash on the central front.

Newport News Hospital Expansion Approved

Richmond, Va., April 14 (AP).—The regional office of the Federal Works Agency has approved the award of a contract by the Newport News City Council to C. D. & R. W. Mitchell, of Martinsville, for $206,737, to construct a three-story addition to Whittaker Memorial Hospital at Newport News, C. L. Vickers, FWA regional engineer, announced today.

A Federal grant of $164,930 has been authorized for the project, which will be completed and equipped at an estimated cost of $229,069.

Mountbatten May Head Major Offensive on Europe

The news that Lord Louis Mountbatten, cousin of King George VI, has been made chief of Britain's tough commandos was well received in Washington yesterday.

Those who met Lord Louis when he was here last October, just before he took over command of the British aircraft carrier Illustrious at Norfolk, discovered that for all of his blue blood he was a pretty tough-looking fellow himself.

In the pre-war days, news stories concerning Mountbatten had featured the glamorous aspects of his life: He was a grandson of Queen Victoria; he married Edwina Temple, who added 24 million dollars to his own vast fortune; he played polo; he traveled around with his fast-stepping cousin, the Prince of Wales, who was to become King Edward VIII and then Duke of Windsor. All of this gave a picture of a fellow who dwelt in clover and revelled in it.

Tall, Powerfully Built

When Mountbatten visited the National Press Club last fall with the Duke of Kent, newspapermen saw a man who fitted that picture not all.

They saw a tall man, powerfully built, with keen eyes and handsome features bronzed by two years of warfare in the North Sea and the Mediterranean. The traditional shyness of the Englisman was missing. He talked with ease, and some of the things he had to say about the secrecy around the Illustrious at Norfolk were exceedingly refreshing.

Mountbatten was born 42 years ago this June in Windsor Castle. When he was 13 he became a cadet in the Royal Navy. In the World War, he served under Admiral Beatty on the H. M. S. Lion and the H. M. S. Queen Elizabeth. Later he served in a submarine flotilla.

He was a captain and in command of the destroyer Kelly when the current war started. The Kelly was damaged by mines in the North Sea, and he transferred to another ship. Later on, he was second in command of a British force that bombarded Cherbourg.

May Head Big Offensive

On November 29, 1940, he was aboard the Javelin when that vessel was twice hit by German torpedoes. His most exciting experiences, however, were still to come. Returned to command of the reconditioned Kelly, he led an attack on Benghazi and then took part in the battle of Crete. In that uneven battle, the Kelly went down for good, but Capt. Mountbatten and eight other officers and 120 men were saved.

After that Mountbatten was sent over here to take command of the Illustrious. It now appears that even while he was in this country, he was named a commodore first class.

The news from London now discloses that he has been named "chief of combined operations with the acting rank of vice admiral and the honorary ranks of lieutenant general and air marshal."

This means, according to some London observers, that Mountbatten is to be far more than chief of the commandos. It means, they say, that he will be the man who will head a major offensive operation against the European continent.

Hershey Sees All 1-A's Drafted

Chicago, April 14 (U.P.).—Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, national director of selective service, predicted today that all 1-A draft registrants would be inducted into the Army by late summer and that the Nation would start calling on 1-B men and the 3-A's whose dependents do not rely entirely on them for support.

Hershey addressed 400 representatives of the Nation's major colleges and universities at a meeting of the American Association of College Registrars.

The national draft director said bluntly that it was the duty of the selective service to place an individual in the Nation's war effort according to fitness and ability "regardless of his education."

He asked the help of registrars to determine among college students "who should go where," and warned them to examine carefully reasons for deferment.

Hershey said that local draft boards were determining the manner in which registrants claiming dependents were contributing to their support and that the registrant would be subject to immediate call if his support was not "essential."

New High in Ship Production

LIBERTY SHIPS BEING FITTED OUT AT A BETHLEHEM YARD PREPARATORY TO SEA SERVICE. THE YARD IS PRODUCING A CONTINUOUS STREAM OF VESSELS OF THIS TYPE.

Bethlehem ship production this year will represent the greatest all-round shipbuilding output by any company in the history of the country.

Speed, speed and more speed is the constant objective; and always speed with quality, for a jerry-built ship is virtually useless in the grim tasks of maritime war.

The first Liberty ship which recently discharged supplies at a Red Sea port was built in a yard that was virtually non-existent a year ago. A tanker was delivered in 100 days from laying of keel. A battleship will be delivered 14 months ahead of schedule.

Cargo ships are being built in less than one-half the time required in the first World War. Comparable speeding up has been achieved on other types of ships and the schedule is being constantly stepped-up.

Expanding old yards, building new ones, tripling employment in a year's time, training thousands of new men, putting every effective facility to use, adopting pre-assembly and mass production methods—all these spell tonnage and more tonnage, a steadily-mounting output of ships from Bethlehem yards.

All hands are doing their utmost for Victory, working to achieve the maximum for the U. S. Navy and the U. S. Maritime Commission, so that the "bridge of ships" shall be maintained and steadily enlarged.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Hunter Reported To Have Quit WPA

Howard O. Hunter is reported to have resigned as Commissioner of Works Projects Administration. He's understood to be planning to accept a job with a private concern in Louisiana but his friends believe he'll be back in Federal service eventually. Hunter has been WPA commissioner for about a year. He's a close friend of Harry Hopkins. A howl went up from the conservative element when the President nominated him, but the controversy over WPA and its operations faded out of the spotlight under his administration. Deputy Administrator Francis H. Dryden is a good bet to succeed Hunter. He formerly was State administrator for Maryland.

Phil Maguire, an all-out war expansionist, has been appointed assistant to Donald Nelson, the war czar. His appointment is heartening to the expansionist group and bad news to the fading business-as-usual clique. Maguire has been assisting Douglas MacKeachie, director of WPB's Purchasing Division. Formerly he was assistant administrator of Surplus Marketing under Milo Perkins.

Two former Federal officials are running for Congress in Arkansas They are Brooks Hays, formerly assistant administrator of Farm Security, and William Fullbright, Justice attorney . . . Tom Clark, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, is expected to be appointed chief of the War Fraud Unit to succeed Fowler Hamilton . . . The President continues his surgical operations on the vast authority of Commerce Secretary Jesse Jones. The New Dealers now say that if Jones doesn't resign now he'll be stripped of still more activities. Jones already has lost his housing agencies, his Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation has been abolished along with the Federal Loan Agency, the recently-appointed rubber czar took over some of his work, the President broke up his small loan authority, and yesterday the Board of Economic Warfare was given his authority to buy foreign critical materials.

Another Loss Forecast

One report has Jones about to lose Civil Aeronautics Administration to the War Department. CAA and its operations are becoming closely linked with the War Department. And the link will be even closer as the war progresses. The Army has had to take over some civilian transport planes. It has established space priority on commercial lines, and it is arranging to use commercial flying fields. Incidentally, the former CAA administrator, Col. Donald H. Connolly, is back in active Army service and he could be assigned to operate CAA if it were sent to the War Department for the duration.

Office of Price Administration wants to hire experienced clerk-stenographers. The jobs are Grade 3, paying $1620. Most of the openings are secretarial jobs or else they'll lead to secretarial work. Apply Room 1335, Temporary D, Sixth and Independence Avenue Southwest . . . Jack Killea has resigned as WPA personnel director to become assistant director in charge of OPA's field personnel . . . Nebraska State Society will welcome new Federal workers from the Cornhusker State tonight at the Shoreham.

Public Health Service is also having its troubles with the new efficiency rating system. Officials there propose to rate employes without explanation. If an appeal is made, the rating and reviewing officers would then be called on to explain in detail how the rating was arrived at. Many supervisors say they are required to spend at least 30 minutes to rate an employe under the new system . . . Robert H. Ridgeway has been appointed chief of Bureau of Mines Coal Economic Section. He succeeds F. M. Shore, who was promoted to a better job within the bureau . . . Service Operations Division of OEM has formed a recreation association. Officers are John P. Walsh, chairman; Agnes Purse, treasurer, and Aasta Haugen, secretary. The association will hold a dance at the Shoreham Friday night.

Bolstering Our Courage

Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, was called to the House restaurant telephone yesterday. From thousands of miles across continent and ocean, Randolph heard the voice of Silas Starry, of Shepherdstown, W. Va., a civilian navy employe stationed in Honolulu. "We are all smiling out here," said Starry. "We want you to know that morale here is 100 per cent."

Tag Line Slows Up Cupid

An altar-bound couple from Fredericksburg, Va., figured Cupid's business was booming in Alexandria yesterday when, in search of a marriage license, they were misdirected to the State auto tag agency. With the deadline for State tags falling tonight at midnight, they spent an hour in line before they were informed they were applying for the wrong type of license.

Drive Begun By Church Federation

Religious and civil leaders last night urged churches to rally to the cause of cooperative Christianity in the Nation's Capital, as the Federation of Churches annual financial drive began. The goal is $34,288.

White and Negro layman and clergymen from 167 churches and related agencies of the federation attended the dinner at Hamline Methodist Church, Sixteenth and Allison Streets Northwest, where rapid-fire three-minute talks told how the federation is meeting wartime Washington needs, and the necessity of financial backing such a program.

The speakers included the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington; the Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church and a federation vice president; the Rev. Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church and a federation vice president; Coleman Jennings, president of the Community Chest; Wilbur J. LaRoe, chairman of the federation's civic affairs committee; Mrs. Elmer Morgan, president of the Washington Council of Church Women; Edward H. DeGroot, jr., chairman of the Central Union Mission's board of directors; the Rev. Walter G. Borchers, jr., federation administrative assistant; Walter Britt, chairman of the federation's finance committee; the Rev. Robert W. Brooks, pastor of Lincoln Congregational Church, and Dr. Worth M. Tippy, acting federation executive secretary.

"I see nothing ahead in the next 20 years unless the church has presented a united front," declared Bishop Freeman, warning that "the church that wants to live a lonely life cannot survive."

The prelate pleaded for a "great revival of religion that would shake the Nation's Capital," and said that the time has come for a modernizing of preaching methods and for "reexamining ourselves" and our personal religion.

Dr. Peter Marshall said the campaign would "call the bluff" of the churches, showing if they really believed enough in the love-thy-neighbor philosophy and other ideals to help put them into practice financially.

Child Welfare Work Stressed By Archbishop

The wartime value of child welfare enterprises was stressed last night by the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, addressing the annual meeting of the Christ Child Society at the Washington Club.

Archbishop Curley said the war "should not allow us to lose sight of domestic problems, which have been increased by war tension," and declared that proper care of children today would insure a morally, physically and spiritually strong postwar generation.

He said there was one experience that would always stick with him—that of living years ago in a community where a 18-year-old boy was hanged, his career the result of a bad sociological background.

The annual society report revealed, among other things, that 317 girls and 544 boys attended the Christ Child Settlement House at 808 Massachusetts Avenue Northeast in 1941.

A total of 11,924 days of care were given convalescent children at Christ Child Farm near Rockville, Md., where 117 children were cared for during the year.

Citizens Association News

Logan-Thomas Group Opposes Abolition of Accident Unit

The Logan-Thomas Circle Citizens Association last night went on record opposing abolition of the Accident Investigation Unit of the Metropolitan Police Department at its annual dinner held at the home of Mrs. F. M. Thompson, president, 1120 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest.

The association adopted a resolution approving the Thursday night shopping hours, as sponsored by the Washington Board of Trade and urged continuance of the system whereby public school teachers give instruction to crippled children at their homes.

Proposed expansion of the District's program for teaching handicapped children was indorsed last night by the Stanton Park Citizens Association, meeting briefly before the air raid test at Peabody School, Fifth and C Streets Northeast.

The association also voted to request school officials to allow utilization of the Stuart Junior High School playground for afternoon baseball games of older boys and reserve the smaller playground at Peabody School for younger children.

D. C. Tax Office Open Late Today for Income Tax Payers

The tax assessor's office will remain open tonight until 9 o'clock to receive the thousands of persons expected for last-minute filing of District income taxes, due today.

Mail returns will be counted on time if they are postmarked not later than midnight, but persons who want Tax Department assistance in filling out their tax returns must apply at the District Building between 8:18 a. m. and 9 p. m.

Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent estimated last night that at least 1000 persons a day have crowded into the first floor corridor of the District Building, where 12 to 15 clerks have been stationed as taxpayers' aides.

Dent said there could be no estimate of the number of returns filed to date by mail. All of the clerks who have been handling mail returns have been assigned to duty in the corridor, and the mail sacks stored away in the vaults until the rush is over.

A record collection is expected this year, Dent said, predicting the greatest tax revenue of all time for the District. More than 115,000 persons who were domiciled in the District on December 1, 1941, are eligible to pay the District levy this year.

Asked if such wealth collected this year might prevent a sales tax next year, Dent said, "I certainly hope so."

Darden Not to Seek Deferment for Any Aide

Richmond, Va., April 14 (AP).—There will not be "a single, solitary request for deferment from military service insofar as the office of Gov. Darden is concerned.

He said today that if the armed forces needed anyone in the Government, the Governor included, the State would be able to get along without their services for the duration of the war.

Hankin to Ask $20,000 More For His Office

District Public Utilities Commission Chairman Hankin today will appear before a House Appropriations Subcommittee in behalf of an approximate $20,000 increase for his office in the District's budget of $58,500,000 for the 1943 fiscal year.

Of $88,518 requested, as compared with $69,920 for the current year, $17,860 would go for the addition of eight employes, including engineers and accountants, to the P. U. C. staff. Another $735 is marked for in-grade promotions, Hankin said last night.

Hearings under the chairmanship of Representative Mahon (Democrat), of Texas, will continue at 10 a. m. today.

G. W. Pearson, District tax collector, and Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler, yesterday recommended creation of a new collection unit to investigate and obtain returns from persons committed to St. Elizabeths Hospital, thus saving the District government an estimated $50,000 annually.

Pearson explained to the subcommittee that the proposed collection unit would be composed of four employes—an attorney, two investigators and a stenographer—at an annual cost of $7280. The unit would function in cooperation with the Board of Public Welfare and the Mental Health Commission.

It is believed the new unit would aid in reducing the number of persons admitted to the mental institution and at the same time increase the numbers available for taxation, Pearson said. He explained that many persons now at the hospital at a cost of $2.80 per day to the local government might be transferred to private homes if their families found they had to pay income taxes.

Poundmaster Frank B. Marks told the subcommittee yesterday that the number of lost and stray dogs in the District has increased in proportion to population gains. His work has increased about 25 per cent, he said, in requesting $16,500 for more employes and for building repairs.

Others testifying at the executive session yesterday were Edward A. Dent, assessor; Jo V. Morgan, of the District Board of Tax Appeals; A. R. Pilkerton, auditor; Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, and Dr. A. Magruder Macdonald, coroner.

20-Cent Taxi Plan Stirs New Protest

Average Profit On Trip Revealed As Slightly More Than Two Cents

Argument over the proposal to limit to 20 cents the charges on a taxi ride of a mile or less climaxed a tumultous hearing before the Public Utilities Commission yesterday on the new zoning system offered by the commission.

The hearing, which was continued until 2 o'clock this afternoon, was principally devoted to an analysis of the investigation of the taxi industry begun by the PUC last November.

Although the meeting was characterized by heckling and outbursts by individual cab owners, there was little concerted opposition to the PUC's general plan for a new four-zone and 2 sub-zone taxi map of the city. The detail of the two-thirds rate for a trip under a mile, however, was repeatedly questioned.

The findings of the PUC on the average earnings of a cab driver in the District is 53 9.10 cents per hour, based on an overall time basis.

Average Profit Small

Under the present boundary conditions, PUC Chief Accountant V. A. McElfresh announced, the total cost to the driver of an average trip is 35.06 and the total revenue 37.38 cents, leaving the driver a profit of only 2.52 cents.

These figures, McElfresh explained, took into consideration the "dead" mileage and time, which consumes about 48 per cent of the the adjustment for this dead time, the average cost for a trip is 46.50 cents: in other words the driver loses a dime on every trip.

Announcement of these figures caused Joseph Herbert, representing the Southeast Business Association to ask how a taxi driver could stay in business. A driver shouted back, "that proves what we have been saying for a long time, that a taxi driver lives off his tips."

Toward the end of the seven-hour hearing there were charges made that the Public Utilities Commission already had decided to adopt the plan for the new zoning system, and that no testimony that was offered could change the Commissioners' minds.

Only Tentative Plan

John H. Royer, jr., president of the District of Columbia Cab Owners Association, testified that although he and other heads of cab companies had consulted with the PUC while the plan was being drawn up, there was never any suggestion that it was anything other than a tentative plan to be submitted for public consideration.

There were demands that PUC Chairman Gregory Hankin make a definite statement on the subject, but Commissioner James A. Flanagan stated that the commission as a whole had announced its intentions when it began to introduce its testimony.

Music of Latin Neighbors Is Thrilling

By Ray C. B. Brown

In honor of Pan-American Day, the Pan-American Union presents on Tuesday night a concert of music of the Americas by the United States, Marine, Band, Orchestra, under the direction of Capt. William F. Santelmann. Assisting artists: Elsie Houston, Brazilian soprano (Vincent de Sola, accompanist); Francisco Mignone, Brazilian composer-pianist; Bernardo Segall, Brazilian pianist.

Filling the Hall of the Americans in the Pan-American Union last evening, invited auditors enjoyed a concert of Latin-American music presented in celebration of Pan - American Day by the U. S. Marine Band Orchestra and assisting artists. Brazil was accorded a generous share of the program through the presence as participants of Elsie Houston, Francisco Mignone and Bernardo Segall, and also through compositions by Mignone, Heitor Villa-Lobos and Hekel Tavares. The other countries represented were Argentina, Bolivia, Cuba, Ecuador, Mexico, Peru and Uruguay.

BROWN

Capt. William F. Santelmann and his brilliantly uniformed Marine musicians began the concert with "Chango" and "Iniciacion" from Pedro Sanjuan's "Liturgia Negra," a vivid and deliberately barbaric transcription of primitive ritual with touches of voodoo excitement in themes and rhythms. This was followed by a descriptive tone-poem of Uruguayan atmosphere, "Llanuras," by Luis Cluzeau Mortet.

Elsie Houston, whose remarkable soprano voice lends itself so admirably to exotic evocations, made her first appearance in a group of folksongs arranged by expert composers: "Paso Nanigo" from Cuba, "Tu passate por este jardin" from Brabil, "Kurikinga" from Ecuador, "De Blanca Tierra" from Boliva, "Muchacha Bonita" from Peru, "Las Margaritas" fro mArgentina and "Dansa de Coboclo" from Brazil. She also offered later Villa-Lobos' "Cancao do Carreiro" and was accompanied by the composer in Mignone's "Assombracao," "Desafio" and "Quadras."

Bernardo Segall, now resident in Washington, gave a brilliant performance of Mignone's "Fantasia Brasileira" No. 1, a miniature piano concerto in whic hal lthe devices of Lisztian technique are applied to thematic material of great interest.

The final item was the remarkable "Sinfonia India" by Carlos Chavez, a work which voices the very spirit of Mexico. This is not program music in the descriptive sense but a veritable expression of regional feeling. Chavez has quoted Indian melodies directly and fused them into an integral whole which has an inevitably powerful impact upon the emotions.

Milk Plan Hit By Farmers And Dairies

Both Sides Charge That Hendrickson's Proposal Would Bring Bootlegging

Organized farmers and Washington dairies alike lambasted a Federal official's proposal yesterday that fluid milk and cream be placed in the same producer price class.

In bills of exception filed with the Agriculture Department, virtually all of the dissenters predicted the plan would encourage "bootlegging" of cream and reduce consumption of that product.

Recommendation that the all-inclusive price class be set up in this Federally-regulated marketing area was made ten days ago by Roy F. Hendrickson, Agricultural Marketing Administrtor. It would, he claimed, result in farmers' revenue being increased without necessitating an increase in the retail price of milk.

Boost Feared

Yesterday, however, Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy argued that if Hendrickson's plan is adopted "the handler will have no alternative," but to boost milk a cent a quart and cream 6 cents a half-pint.

The proposal under attack provides that distributors shall pay farmers $3.57 a hundredweight (48 quarts) for milk utilized for sale as fluid cream, as well as that sold as milk. At present, milk brings $3.57, but class II milk (cream) is pegged at $2.10, under the Federal marketing order for the Washington area. With premiums added, averaging 32 cents, the producer prices are $3.89 and $2.42, respectively.

Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase, the Capital's largest dairy, objected that the class unification scheme would hurt the consumer, rather than help him, and foster bootlegging of uninspected cream into this city.

Other Arguments Advanced

Lucerne Cream & Butter Co. also stressed the bootlegging menace as one that hurts producers "and gives unscrupulous dealers unfair advantage over fair dealers who try to sell cream produced locally."

Capital Milk Producers Association protested that authorities could not prevent a deluge of cream from distant points uninspected by the District Health Department, if such a circumstance were created by a great increase in the local producer price.

Similar arguments were advanced by Embassy-Fairfax Dairy and by the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association. The latter said the Hendrickson plan would not help the farmer, "because of its artificial and uneconomic base." It charged that the proposal is counter to Agriculture Department policy, would cut cream consumption and give some dairies an edge over their competitors."

"CHINA BOY, NO JAP," reads the ingratiating sign worn by Joe Wong as he slides out in the Lotus' new "Hawaiian Capers." Then he launches into Irish songs so that all hands will be sure he's a good New York Celestial . . . Another top war angle is contributed by Bunny Hare's singing of "In the Army" with added lyrics about the Navy, marines and Air Corps, all written by Drummer Jimmy Bright, of Bill Strickland's band . . . The Hawaiian part of the revue arrives when the Island Beauties caper in waving hoops and skirts of silver fringe.

George Auld's orchestra, crack swingsters all, will sound off in the Victory Room tomorrow night, and remain over April 25, when they'll be succeeded by Will Bradley's band.

THE STARLIGHT ROOF will definitely open this summer, says Manager Alfred B. Merrick of the Roger Smith Hotel. If blackouts come, the roof can be darkened in seconds and customers will enjoy real "starlight dancing." Opening date will probably be the Friday before Decoration Day . . . Don Carper's Four in Cafe Caprice will be succeeded by the Debonaires next Monday.

ESTELLE,
of Estelle and LeRoy, dancing spellbinders now at the Shoreham

Michael Barker, Mayfair's bass-playing maestro, and his brother, Art Barker, who also ran up a popularity record at Mayfair, started out together musically with a six-man band.

LINES ON GIRLS. Eve Knight, of the King Cole Room, received fan mail from as far away as San Francisco after her last Blue Network program . . . Carol James, Crossroads canary, studies music in the afternoons . . . Singer Marianne, of the Hi Hat, is sporting a new Ginger Rogers hairdo. And very becoming it is . . . Jerry, the brunette bombshell at Paul Young's, has the bronziest tan in town. And the cutest pigtails . . . Graphologist Lucille Lincoln, of Restaurant "400," says the tiniest writing she ever saw was penned by a giant policeman. "Looked like ant tracks," she says . . . Lounge Riviera's organist, Ida Clark, is looking Aprilistic in a bolero of tiny white lace ruffles worn over a pale blue formal . . . That one-day airplane trip taken to her Pennsylvania home by Accordionist Beverly Stull, of Burt's Trans-Lux, was her spring vacation—all of it . . . Violinist Evelyn Scott, of Lee's Stables, was one of Washington's favorite child entertainers when she was a very little girl . . . The Balalaika's dancer, Yoda, appears as an exotic Russian bride in her "Boyar Dance" with Yourloff. She's all done up in white satin with a long veil held by a barbarically jeweled tiara.

GLEN ECHO ECHOES. Maestro Paul Kain says that the most popular tune with soldiers and sailors is "String of Pearls" (This is the tune that Band Leader Milton Davis of the Rainbow Room pronounced a sure hit when the first copy arrived from the publisher) . . . Bob Seidell of the Kain band is getting married soon—for the third time . . . The Crystal Pool will be opened for swimming in May.

The Mayflower lounge press department vows that if all the flash bulbs used in the spot recently were dropped at once, the explosion would be heard in Tokyo. Seems that every news cameraman in the country heads straight for the Mayflower when he has an assignment to do a layout on "Life in Wartime Washington."

ROAMIN' IN THE GLOAMIN'. Van Taylor, singing emcee of Restaurant "823," is an auxiliary fireman. But he can't put out his big black cigar. . . . Accordionist Felix Zimmer, of the Casino Royal, looks like Boris Karloff—but benignant. . . . There's a reason why the Troika's Karavaeff is dancing to "Yes, My Darling Daughter" these evenings. His only daughter was recently married in Florida. . . . Accordionist Joe Spata, with the El Patio's Streamliners, has a "dead pan" expression that makes Buster Keaton seem like a Pollyanna. . . . Maestro Juan Velasquez, of the Copocabana, thinks the public should know that the terms samba, rumba, tango and beguine all refer to a type of rhythm accompaniment which can be applied to any tune. . . . Orchestra Leader Eddie Oliver of the Cosmos Room is a grad of Indiana University, was so smart musically that he had a chance to go with either Ben Bernie or Fred Waring when he left school. . . . Karlo, novachordist-organist in the Neptune Room, has lived through a trouper's dream—he's played in New York solidly for the last 12 years.

Keep your eye on Jack Maggio's band at the Nightingale. Musical experts say this unit, of the youngest average age hereabouts, is a real comer-upper.

RIVER BEND IS BENDING—with the crowds who enjoy the springtime beauty of a short drive down the Mount Vernon Boulevard to this handsome rustic spot. George Stein's band really enjoys playing all requests, especially from the boys from nearby Fort Belvoir.

Otto J. DeMoll, 63, who operated a musical instrument business at Twelfth and G Streets Northwest for more than 25 years at the time of his retirement five years ago, died of a heart ailment yesterday at his home, 5253 Nebraska Avenue Northwest.

DeMOLL

Besides his business interests, Mr. DeMoll was active in the Harmony Lodge, No. 17, Masons, and was an honorary member of the Temple Noyes Lodge, No. 38.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mamie Hill DeMoll, and three daughters, Mrs. Frederick R. Bailey, Mrs. James A. Campbell 3d, and Mrs. David L. Dickerson, all of Washington.

Students to Get Chest Examination

More than 300 public night school students will be given free chest examinations at Roosevelt High School tonight in the first of seven such examination sessions sponsored by the District Health Department and the District of Columbia Tuberculosis Association.

Harald H. Lund, executive secretary of the Tuberculosis Association, described the project as "important not only because it is a means of getting at possible sources of infection in the city, but also because it enables early diagnosis, the key to successful cure of the disease."

Other examinations offered to the 7500 public night school students in the District are scheduled as follows: Garnet Patterson High School, Thursday; Cardoza High School, Friday; Central High School, April 20 and 21; McKinley High School, April 22, and Armstrong High School, April 23. Examination hours are from 6 p. m. to 10 p. m.

George B. Torrey, Noted Painter, Dies

Honolulu, April 14 (AP).—George Burroughs Torrey, 79, internationally known portrait painter, died today after a fortnight's illness.

Torrey maintained studios at Waikiki Beach here and at Bridgeport, Conn. He painted portraits of all the Presidents from Grover Cleveland to Herbert Hoover, and of royalty.

Rep. Woodruff Asks Curbs On Inflation

Congressional demands for all-out control of inflation spread yesterday to the Republican side of the House aisle as the President told reporters he was working right along on an overall plan.

Representative Woodruff, of Michigan, a raking Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee, charged in the House that the Administration "up to this hour has evaded the issue of controlling all the costs of production, while at the same time trying to fix a good many prices."

Woodruff called price and living cost rises "a form of vicious, uncontrolled, hidden sales taxes which is being permitted to go on day after day."

"One of the Crying Needs"

"One of the crying needs of the Nation at this time is a courageous attitude on the part of the Administration to meet the growing inflation frankly and honestly in order to protect the low-income people of this Nation from this vicious form of hidden and indirect taxation."

The President, who for the last week has been giving intensive study to overall controls, told reporters he had not finally decided on a method or a time for the move. The program was expected to include control of wages and profits as well as prices.

The President said yesterday he knew nothing of reports that the plan in part would call on the War Labor Board to freeze wages at existing levels in contractual disputes submitted to the agency.

Asked if additional taxes might be part of the program, Mr. Roosevelt said additional levies would be required beyond the present tax law but that it had not been determined whether the Treasury's existing seven-billion-dollar recommendations would be increased.

There were earlier intimations that the Treasury itself is opposed to sending a new tax program to Congress while existing recommendations are pending. Ranking spokesmen for both House and Senate taxing committees having voiced emphatic opposition to augmenting the program at this time.

Possibility that a National war labor policy may be incorporated in the forthcoming inflation control plan was seen in the President's intimation yesterday that the question of a war labor policy was tied up with inflation. He suggested it would be a good guess that Secretary of the Navy Knox was on the right track when he told the House Naval Committee yesterday he would not be surprised if a war labor policy was laid down by executive order.

Mr. Roosevelt objected to reporters to use of the word inflation, which he described as meaningless, until a better descriptive term can be found.

Union to Purchase Radios Worth $5000 for U. S. O.

The United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, C. I. O., have voted to buy $5000 worth of radios for United Service Organizations clubhouses, the U.S.O. announced yesterday.

The gift was described by U.S.O. officials as a significant indication that working men of America are not forgetting the off-duty needs of America's fighting men.

U.S.O. agencies to share in the gift are the Young Men's Christian Associations National Catholic Community Service, Salvation Army, Young Women's Christian Associations and Jewish Welfare Board.

At present, it was announced, there are 428 U.S.O. clubs in operation of which 404 are in continental United States and 24 in transocean bases. Additional clubs are planned in connection with the U.S.O.'s forthcoming $32,000,000 War Fund campaign.

Neighbors See The Roosevelts Move to Square

By the Associated Press

New York, April 14.—New people are moving into a Washington Square apartment today, but old residents are not speculating "what will the new neighbors be like?"

They know. The new neighbors are the Franklin D. Roosevelts.

Mrs. Roosevelt was up early this morning, supervising the moving of furniture from the former Roosevelt home at 47 East Sixty-fifth Street to the new apartment at 29 Washington Square West, in Greenwich Village.

Among the first things carried out by the moving men were some bookcases, books, several small tables, a baby's chair.

Sixty-fifth Streeters aren't curious, evidently. No sightseers were around to peer at Roosevelt possessions, but down on Washington Square quite a little crowd gathered to watch the furniture being carried in at the new address.

The new apartment cannot possibly hold all the furniture from the much large Sixty-fifth Street house, so part of Mrs. Roosevelt's moving chore today was to decide what should be sold or otherwise disposed of.

The new apartment—consisting of living room, dining room, kitchen, three bedrooms, maid's room, three baths—is gracious enough, with a good-sized fireplace in its spacious living room. Its atmosphere is more modern than that of the old town house. The new apartment is simply decorated, in accordance with Mrs. Roosevelt's wishes. The basic wall color is ivory.

One touch, long familiar to East Sixty-fifth Street, will be added to the Washington Square West vicinity. That will be the presence of Patrolman Hugh Downey, who has guarded the President's Sixty-fifth Street residence for seven years. Downey knows the family well and the grandchildren call him by his first name.

The Sixty-fifth Street house is one of two owned by the Roosevelts in New York. Both are to be sold.

U. S. Removes All Restrictions On Imports of Refined Sugar

The United States removed all legal restrictions upon the importation and domestic marketing of sugar yesterday but officials said the action was not expected to increase supplies.

An order by President Roosevelt suspended quotas set up under the Sugar Control Act of 1937. This had been recommended by the Agriculture Department because quotas were not deemed necessary under present war conditions.

The quotas were designed to control surpluses and to stabilize prices by dividing the American market among areas which normally supply it. Now that the war has cut off supplies from the Philippine Islands and reduced shipments from Hawaii, and the Caribbean supplies must be shared with Great Britain and Russia, surpluses in the American producing area no longer exist.

Agriculture Department authorities said the only practical effect would be to permit Puerto Rico, Cuba and other off-shore areas to send much larger quantities of sugar to this country in the refined rather than in the raw form. Quotas permitted only a small portion of imports to be of refined. These officials said refineries in this country would consequently be forced to restrict their operations to the extent that the Caribbean producing areas increased theirs.

The Agriculture Department had previously removed all restrictions upon the production of sugar cane and sugar beets in this country. The President's order did not affect phases of the sugar act authorizing benefit payments to domestic producers.

Mrs. Ethel Fuller Succumbs at 52, Rites Tomorrow

Mrs. Ethel Genevieve Fuller, manager of the Chateau Thierry Apartments, 1920 S Street Northwest, and widow of Fred J. Fuller, who managed many well-known country clubs here and in the East, died of complications arising out of a blood clot yesterday in her suite at the Chateau Thierry. She was 52 years old.

A native of Prince Edward Island, Canada, Mrs. Fuller came to this country about 35 years ago. Mr. Fuller, who managed the Kenwood Golf and Country Club on River Road, Kenwood, Md., died in 1936.

She leaves two daughters, the Misses Ethel and Eleanor Fuller, both of Washington. Funeral services will be tomorrow at 10 a. m. in the Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin Street Northwest, with burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Church Youth Groups Form Federation

With coordination of church youth work among service men and defense workers as one of its aims, a Federation of Christian Youth of Washington has been organized, it was learned yesterday.

It also aims to give Protestant youth a united voice in civic and religious issues; promote interfaith and racial understanding and Christian unity; aid hospital and other institutional volunteer work, and conduct interdenominational broadcasts.

Represented in the Federation of Youth at present are the District Christian Endeavor Union; Methodist Youth Fellowship, Columbia Federation of Baptist Young People's Unions, Luther and Walther Leagues, Washington Presbyterian Youth League, Episcopal Young People's Fellowship, the Congregational Pilgrim Fellowship and the Baptist (Negro) Training Union.

Temporary officers are John Gordon Mein, president of the Columbia Federation of Baptist Young People's Unions, chairman; Virginia Horstman, secretary of the Methodist Youth Fellowship, East Washington District, secretary, and Pauline Shoemaker, former president of the District Endeavor Union and World Endeavor Society official, chairman of the planning committee.

There have been several previous united Protestant youth groups in the Nation's Capital, but they failed to make much headway mainly because they duplicated—rather than coordinated— young people's activities.

That is the opinion of Grover L. Hartman, director of the Federation of Churches' defense commission and active Methodist youth leader. He explained that the Federation of Churches hopes someday to have a religious education department, with the Federation of Christian Youth functioning under it.

The Youth Federation, while still in its early stages, already has sponsored Sunday afternoon devotional broadcasts and has helped conduct programs in Army camps near Washington.

There are hopes of sponsoring several city-wide Protestant youth rallies, giving defense workers and other young people a chance to become acquainted with young people of their own and other denominations.

One of the leaders in the Federation of Youth is Miss Janet Wertz, president of the Washington Presbyterian League, and hostess on the Pennsylvania-Central Airlines.

Court Acquits Man Accused Of 'Gas-Thefts'

John B. Robinson, 24-year-old Negro, was acquitted by a District Court yesterday of charges that he had invaded a Northeast apartment last January and opened all gas jets on the stove in an effort to kill the occupants.

A jury and ten women and two men returned the not guilty verdict after deliberating an hour and a quarter.

Accused of being the mysterious "gas burglar" who broke into several homes in the section last winter, Robinson was tried on charges of housebreaking and attempting to kill Carlton S. Williams, his wife and 7-months-old daughter.

He was arrested after topcoat and key ring, discovered outside the Williams apartment at 1227 Eighteenth Place Northeast, were traced to him. Robinson admitted that the coat and keys were his, but asserted that they had been stolen from him.

He testified that he came home drunk from a party in the early morning hours of January 23—just before the alleged offense—and had passed out in the hallway of his home, at 811 Eighteenth Street Northeast. He said that he did not awake until the next morning, and then found his coat, hat, keys and money gone.

Both prosecution and defense witnesses confirmed that he had been brought home from the party an hour or so before the Williams' rooms were entered, and that he was intoxicated at that time.

He was defended by Attorneys Harry T. Whelan and Albert F. Graham.

Voorhis Absolves Grattan of Nazi Connections

Copyright by Chicago Sun

Representative Jerry Voorhis (Democrat), of California, yesterday absolved C. Hartley Grattan, resigned adviser to the Board of Economic Warfare, of any Nazi or Communist connections, but chided him for having written a foreword to the controversial German white paper published in 1940.

Voorhis, a member of the Dies Investigating Committee, whose charges led Grattan to quit his $5600 a year job as consultant on Australian affairs, said he had no doubt of Grattan's loyalty after carefully studying his writings over a number of years.

The Congressman said any implications in his criticism of the white paper forword that Grattan was pro-Nazi were carried in certain newspaper comments and not in his own words.

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS ACIDS

Help 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes Flush Out Poisonous Waste

If you have an excess of acids in your blood, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may be overworked. These tiny filters and tubes are working day and night to help Nature rid your system of excess acids and poisonous waste.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Kidneys may need help the same as bowels; so ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

James Turner, 17, of 1021 Twenty-sixth Street Northwest, died yesterday in Georgetown Hospital of injuries suffered in an automobile accident last Saturday near Fredericksburg, Va.

Turner was removed to a Fredericksburg hospital and returned here after treatment. Last Sunday, he complained of pains of his spine and was removed to Georgetown Hospital. He died of fractured vertebra.

Meanwhile, two motorists were exonerated of blame by a coroner's jury yesterday after inquests into the traffic death of James Quick, 59, 810 Sixth Street Southwest, and Mrs. Louisa Field, 70, of 1154 Nineteenth Street Northwest.

In both cases the jury decided the deaths were accidental and the verdicts released the drivers without prosecution.

William E. Keene, 43, of 1822 Thirty-fifth Street Northwest, was freed in the Quick death when it was testified the latter walked into the path of Keene's car at Fourth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest last Thursday.

The second inquest acquitted Bernard M. Shartzer, 23, of Hillside, Md., who was operating a truck which struck Mrs. Field at Nineteenth and M Streets Northwest Monday. She died at Emergency Hospital the same day, as did Quick.

In Alexandria, 2-year-old Earl Elliott, jr., was critically injured and his companion, Patricia Watts, 3½, sustained minor injuries when they were struck by an Alexandria Dairy Co. truck at 10:30 a. m. in a court of the John Roberts Homes, Alexandria's low-cost housing development on North West Street.

The Elliott child was riding in a small wagon being pulled by Patricia when the truck backed into the court and struck them. The boy was knocked from the vehicle and one of the truck's rear wheels passed over his body. He was taken to Alexandria Hospital, where it was stated he had sustained internal injuries, head lacerations and injuries to both legs.

An 18-year-old youth was recovering at Garfield Hospital last night after he crashed into a hospital wall earlier in the day.

Identified as William O. McGinn, 18, of the first block of H Street Northwest, he suffered internal injuries and a broken nose when the automobile crashed into a retaining wall at Eleventh and Clifton Streets Northwest.

Before striking the wall, Policemen J. G. Conroy and G. A. Earle said, the car skidded 78 feet and then "bounced" 23 additional feet after striking the wall.

The policemen said they began pursuing the car at Florida Avenue after the driver failed to heed their order to stop. The car was identified as belonging to Calvin Harverts, of 1501 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

Three-year-old Shirley A. Twyman, of 1425 Corcoran Street Northwest, suffered a possible skull fracture late yesterday when she was struck by an automobile near her home. The child was taken to Children's Hospital, where her condition was described as undetermined.

Month to Move Given Tenants In Yard Area

Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher at District Court yesterday gave property owners and tenants until May 15 to vacate a five-block tract of land in Southeast Washington, required by the Government for an expansion of the Navy Yard.

The jurist's order came as a result of a condemnation suit filed by the Department of Justice lands division earlier in the month, which stated that the area was needed for an addition to the gun factory.

The responsibility for housing approximately 150 familes who will be ousted from their homes by the ruling has been assumed by the Alley Dwelling Authority, it was stated yesterday by John Ihlder, executive officer of the agency.

Faced with the problem of finding suitable accommodations for the evacuees—with the exception of business establishments, those forced to move are all Negro families in low-income brackets—Ihlder said that the authority would seek to house them first in trailer camps and then in demountable homes.

A comparable situation has been handled in Arlington County, Va., where a number of Negro families were ousted from land needed by the Government for approaches to the new War Department Building.

These have been housed in trailer camps—trailers made available by the Navy Department—pending the construction of demountable homes. Rents there run to $3 a week for the use of a trailer, and $1 for an extra trailer if the family is too large for one.

Eicher provided that a spur of railroad tracks crossing the area may still be used, until the railroad has had a chance to relocate them or abandon them. The tracks are owned by the Philadelphia, Baltimore & Washington line and leased by the Pennsylvania.

Pin Ball Game Now Strictly For Amateurs

Beginning today, playing the pinball machines will be strictly an amateur sport.

Acting under orders from the United States attorney's office and the Superintendent of Police, the city's policemen are empowered to seize all pinball machines dispensing free games or prizes of any kind after midnight last night.

The order banning all the devices which offered the player any reward except a display of multicolored lights and jangling bells was handed down a month ago. A 30-day period of grace was allowed, however, to give operators a chance to take the machines out or substitute nonpaying ones.

Their banishment must be sanctioned by a court decision, establishing them as gambling devices. Precedent for such ruling, however, has already been set in New York City, where pinball is now outlawed.

The decision to ban them here came after a lengthy investigation, launched by complaints from parents and teachers who asserted that school children were feeding lunch money into the electrical maws.

Barred, unless the courts should declare otherwise, are all machines which pay off in free games, money, merchandise or prizes, or which give instructions on how to utilize them for gambling purposes.

Those designed only to give the satisfaction of a high score and amusement will remain legal.

It was estimated by U. S. Attorney Edward M. Curran that there are approximately 2000 pinball machines in the city—many of them in so-called "penny arcades"—but it was understood that a great many of them will be rebuilt for no payments rather than be withdrawn.

Alice Marble Quits Fitness Post in OCD

Alice Marble, former national tennis champion, yesterday announced her resignation as a $1-a-year assistant director of the Office of Physical Fitness—formerly a division of the Office of Civilian Defense and now languishing without funds in the Office of Defense Health and Welfare Service.

She said her resignation, handed to Director John B. Kelly in Philadelphia, will become effective May 1. Duties of the office have become so numerous she no longer can look after them and earn her own living, she said.

"Since I cannot continue to work for my living and do justice to responsibilities placed on me by the civilian defense position, the only course left open is to resign," the former tennis queen said, "and offer all my spare time to the defense effort in any form in which the Government feels I may be of help."

Word from the Budget Bureau on how much ODHWS is to receive for operation of the physical fitness division is expected today by the office of Administrator Paul V. McNutt. If it fails to come, its employes will have a late payday.

At the office yesterday it was said Miss Marble's position would not be filled—as use of $1-a-year people and advisers is not contemplated in the new setup of the division. Announcement of what ODHWS plans for the personnel and the portions of physical fitness program which will be retained will not be made by Administrator McNutt until after the Budget Bureau acts on his requests for funds to run it, his office declared yesterday.

2 Foot Bridges To Speed Traffic

Government workers will soon be using two spans over Constitution Avenue to facilitate traffic and getting home more quickly and safely.

Public Buildings Commissioner W. E. Reynolds yesterday announced construction of the bridges, one of which will be opposite the Navy Department Building and the other on Constitution Avenue 300 feet east of Seventeenth Street.

The bridges will be 10 feet wide, protected by high walls. Approaches will be by stairways and platforms with hand-rails to permit two-way traffic.

Yanks, 7; Nats, 0; Reason: Ruffing

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The opening game by the clock:

1 p. m.—The game will be played on account of weather conditions.

1:10—Five thousand fans have already moved into the bleacher seats, undismayed by the early report that the President won't attend, and willing to take their opening game with or without the Nation's First Fan.

POVICH

1:30—President Roosevelt won't be here, and approximately 800 Secret Service men won't get to see the game. The French cabinet shake-up is occupying the President this afternoon. Laval's appointment as foreign minister was a kick in the teeth to Mr. Roosevelt's ideas of attending the game. Rain couldn't have been worse news.

1:45—A not-too-imaginary interview with Buck Newsom: "The President isn't coming today because he heard I wasn't going to pitch."

2:00—Mr. Griffith's smooth, green lawn is a triumph of landscaping, but if you think that's the reason 31,000 people are on their way here you're not a clear thinker.

2:10—The Yankees are taking hitting practice, and Joe DiMaggio pokes one into the leftfield seats just for old times sakes. He sort of admired the swat himself.

2:15—Phil Rizzuto, the ingrown Yankee shortstop, steps to the plate with all of his 5 feet 5 inches and evokes the crack that, "There's a guy who has been rationed."

2:20—Some guy named Henry Wallace is entering the park with an automobile escort that is messing up the pretty grass along the first base line. He got in on a pass and is probably evading the amusement tax.

2:40—President Will Harridge of the American League, and President Clark Griffith of the Nats condescendingly shake hands with Mr. Wallace, who, it seems, is only a Vice President.

2:45—The opening-game ceremonies are way ahead of scheduled production under Wallace. At this moment, he's getting ready to make the traditional 3 o'clock opening pitch.

2:46—Mr. Wallace is getting serious about this thing. He's taking off his top coat, and it's going to be no lob, apparently.

2:46—It wasn't any lob. Wallace just set a record for opening-pitches with a strong-arm heave halfway to second base. Buddy Hassett, of the Yanks, makes a fancy catch of the ball on behalf of the mantlepiece in the Hassett household.

2:48—Now see what they've done. There's a 14-minute wait, with everybody wondering what to do until 3 o'clock, which is game time. Roosevelt always timed things a whole lot better.

3:00—Sid Hudson's first pitch of the game is a strike, and the 31,000 Washington fans would like to see Mr. Wallace, the Labor Board or anybody else try to outlaw that one.

3:14—Joe DiMaggio swings for the third time against a Hudson pitch and doesn't feel anything. Umpire Bill Summers tells him he's been struck out.

3:25—Red Ruffing pulls a dirty trick on a fellow pitcher by swinging on a 3-and-1 ball and banging it to center for a single that drives in the Yanks' second and third runs of the second inning. You can't trust that big Ruffing any farther than you can throw him.

3:28—Bruce Campbell leads off the second inning with a single to right, and at this point Bucky Harris would walk a mile for another Campbell.

3:46—Sid Hudson makes a pitch to first instead of home, and is Joe Gordon surprised? But not too surprised to make a run for it before he is trapped.

4:12—Joe DiMaggio now owns a one-game hitting streak. He just singled to left. He's now on second base because George Case fumbled the hit as we were typing.

4:15—The Nats are at bat in the sixth inning, and the sad fact at this point is that it has been one hour by the clock since they made their last hit off Ruffing.

4:25—Vice President Wallace is strictly neutral-against the Yankees. He's standing up in the home half of the seventh like the 31,000 other Washington fans.

4:27—And right now we have what amounts to a batting rally by the Nats, who have been held to one hit by Ruffing for six innings. Stan Spence, leading off in the seventh, has actually worked Ruffing for a 3-and-1 count.

4:28—The rally fizzled when Spence flied to centerfield.

4:29—Arch McDonald requests the fans not to leave the park until the Vice President has left, but the fans are weighing that request against their disgust with the Nats' hitting. Some of them leave.

4:40—The Yankees now have a 7-0 lead, and some more fans leave the park. And at this point, Red Ruffing owns two hits and is personally outhitting the Nats, 2-1.

4:46—Bob Repass singles to left in the eighth for the Nats' second hit of the game, but Repass makes no hit a moment later when he is doubled up on Gomez's fly to left.

5:08—Game ends, 7-0, and the impression is that the Yankees haven't changed much.

'Now Pitching for White House—Vice President Wallace!'

31,000 Watch Veteran Give Only 3 Hits

Roosevelt Missed But Wallace Sets New Distance Mark; Sid Hudson Is Loser

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Thirty-seven-year-old Red Ruffing, in the spirit of the times, did a rationing job on the Nats yesterday. He limited Washington to three hits, to the dismay of 31,000 Griffith Stadium fans. It was a gala opening game only for the Yankees who licked the Nats, 7-0, behind Ruffing's pitching.

After Vice President Wallace set a new record for ceremonial pitches with an opening-game heave that sailed half way to second base from the Presidential box, the Yankees took charge. They wrenched three runs out of Sid Hudson in the second inning, mauled him for ten hits before the game was over and generally inflicted their superiority on the Nats.

With each passing inning, the gay pregame mood of the 31,000 evaporated as the Nats demonstrated their helplessness against the pitching of Ruffing. The big Yankee pitcher dominated the proceedings. For seven innings he held the Nats to one lonesome hit, and going into the eighth, Ruffing himself was actually outhitting the Washington club with the two hits he had personally collected off Hudson.

F. D. R. Is Missed

There was little to distinguish the wartime inaugural of baseball in the Capital from peacetime openings in recent years, except the absence of President Roosevelt, who was detained at the White House, probably by the French cabinet upheaval. Griffith Stadium officials brought out the same immaculate bunting, the Army Band, as usual, marched, and the Nats as has been their habit since 1937, were to lose the opening game. A "Buy Defense Bonds" pennant that fluttered beneath Old Glory from the center field pole was the only wartime note.

Young Hudson, getting the coveted first-game pitching assignment despite the fact that three seasons ago he was a class D leaguer, built the 31,000 up to something of a let-down by his masterful beginning against the Yankees. He was getting his fast ball over the plate, mixing it with a curve, and he struck out three of the first four Yankees to face him. And then, in the second inning, he lost his control and the ball game.

Ruffing, veteran of many an opener for the Yanks, was Manager Joe McCarthy's pitching choice despite being overshadowed by younger pitching talent in the spring training season. He justified the assignment completely. The big right-hander bamboozled the Nats with a fast ball and curve thrown with the same pitching motion and walked only one batter. The Nats didn't get their second hit off him until the eighth inning.

Three Lonely Singles

A single by Bruce Campbell in the second, a single by Rookie Bob Repass in the eighth and another by George Case in the ninth—that was the sum total of the Washington attack against Ruffing. He walked one batter—Estalella in the eighth—and only then did the Nats get a man as far as second base.

It was Ruffing, too, who slugged the Yanks into a 3-to-0 lead in the second inning, when he found two pals in scoring position and scored them both with a solid single to center to maintain his reputation as the league's best hitting pitcher.

Hudson was fast. He struck out a half dozen Yankees during the afternoon in contrast to Ruffing's five strikeouts, but his second-inning wildness put him in trouble. Three of the Yankees' runs were directly

Color Lacking as President Is Forced to Miss Opener

2000 Fans Get Break When Roosevelt's Body Guard Gives Up Seats; Service Men Dot Crowd

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The pressure of President Roosevelt's duties which kept him from the Washington-New York opener yesterday enabled Clark Griffith to announce a crowd of 31,000, or about 2000 more paid admissions than would have been on hand if the President had attended.

The 2000 single seats were scattered throughout the ball park, reserved seats, grandstand, bleachers and pavilion, and were put on sale before noon when the White House announced the President would not be in his usual seat to toss out the first ball. The seats had been reserved for Secret Service men, policemen in civilian clothes, auxiliary policemen and special guards which would have formed the biggest protective unit for the President since his visits to Griffith Stadium.

The runway which comes under the grandstand and empties near the Presidential box was boarded up. As usual, all persons within 500 seats of where the President usually sits were well-known to the management. Secret Service men spent most of Monday at the stadium giving it the last once-over and apparently the President did not decide until the last minute not to attend for the police were still halfway expecting him until the morning phone call.

The police detail was smaller than usual by game time as 80 auxiliary police from No. 13 precinct filled in for regulars.

The near-sellout throng (there were several hundred unsold bleacher seats) was the first big crowd at the stadium since the memorable day of December 7 when the Japs invaded Pearl Harbor. There was ample evidence of a nation at war. Several thousand service men, officers and enlisted men, were in the crowd, with the white hats of the Navy as standouts. The usual multitude of opening day colors in the stands were missing early in the game as most of them were bundled beneath topcoats. The sun brought out the colors later in the afternoon.

Buddy Myer, who was released by the Nats during the winter, was a dressing room visitor before the game. Buddy is here from Mississippi to attempt to get a priority on building material for a development in his home State. Buddy may have been the answer to the second base question if he had been in uniform.

39,267 Watch Indians Beat Tigers, 5 to 2

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 14.—The Cleveland Indians presented 24-year-old Lou Boudreau, youngest manager ever to start a major league baseball season, with a 5 to 2 victory over the Detroit Tigers today before 39,267 spectators at the American League opener here.

Boudreau contributed a double and a single to the 12-hit attack off Alton Benton and Roy Henshaw that included home runs by Ken Keltner and Rookie Leslie Fleming. The Tribe clinched the game in the seventh with a two-run outburst that broke a 2-all tie.

Jim Bagby limited the Tigers to six hits, retiring 16 successive batters in one stretch before Detroit got a mild rally started in the ninth that Relief Pitcher Joe Heving quickly squelched after yielding an infield single.

Relief Pitcher Henry Wallace Throws a Mean Baseball

Vice President Displays Powerful Arm as Sub For Absent President; Hassett Catches Heave

By Jack Munhall

"Get back," warned Henry Wallace, the vegetable-eating, boomerang-throwing relief pitcher from Iowa of the Western League.

And the Vice President wasn't overestimating his aim either. For as soon as his distinguished escort made elbow room, Franklin Roosevelt's right-handed understudy delivered a history-making opening game pitch.

Far out over the scrambling crowd of Nats and Yankees went the ball that officially opened the 1942 baseball season for Washington and wherever baseball is played in America. Over the heads of the hopping athletes it went, straight into the hands of Buddy Hassett, a Yankee utility infielder, who hung back with uncanny prescience of Wallace's power.

Then as the photographers ground away and Vice President Wallace bowed to his admiring public—many of them veterans who called it the longest first pitch on record here—it was play ball on a perfect baseball day and before as many perspiring fans as could jam their way into Papa Griffith's stadium.

The retiring Vice President had arrived minutes before to a nice round of applause. With him were Senator Alben W. Barkley, majority leader; Senator Charles A. McNary, minority leader; Senator Tom Connally of Texas, chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee and Representative Joe Martin of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republic National Committee.

One one of his infrequent public appearances in relief of his chief, Wallace creditably filled the bill. No easy job was it to be called at the

Yankees' Sturm Loses Finger In Odd Accident

By the Associated Press

Jefferson Barracks, Mo., April 14. Johnny Sturm, former New York Yankee first baseman, underwent amputation of two joints of his right index finger today at the Jefferson Barracks infirmary after a tractor accident on the post baseball field.

Sturm was driving a tractor when a loose wire became entangled in a tractor wheel. He leaned over to dislodge the wire and his finger was mangled between the wheel and the wire.

Browns Win Opener, 3-0, From Chisox

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 14.—Bob Muncrief sent the St. Louis Browns off to a fast start in the 1942 American League season today by setting the White Sox down with only three singles and beating them, 3-0. A crowd of 9879 saw the contest and colorful military ceremonies which preceded it in Comiskey Park.

Muncrief faced only 28 Sox batters as his teammates twice pulled double plays after a Chicagoan had singled. The other Sox hitter did not get past first base. Muncrief allowed no walks and fanned four.

The Browns made only five hits off Sox Hurler Johnny Rigney, but bunched them a pair at a time in the fourth and ninth innings for their runs.

In the fourth, George McQuinn singled, went to third on Roy Cullenbine's double and scored while Luke Appling, Sox shortstop, was throwing out Chet Laabs.

Williams Hits Homer As Bosox Win, 8 to 3

Collects Three Hits and Bats in Five Runs To Pace Boston's Attack Against Macks

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 14.—Lanky Ted Williams picked up today where he left off last season against the Philadelphia Athletics by banging out three hits—including a three-run first-inning homer—to drive in five tallies and spark the Boston Red Sox to an 8-3 triumph in the opening day engagement before near 11,000.

Williams collected six hits in eight trips to the plate in the final day of the 1941 season against the Athletics. He opened today with his homer; cracked out a run-producing single in the second and scored Dick Newsome with the game's final tally on a seventh-inning bingle. On two other appearances at bat he walked and lined out to Dick Siebert.

Dick Newsome went the distance for the Sox and, although touched somewhat freely, was effective in the tough spots. The Sox catching problem was accentuated when Johnny Peacock suffered a deep spike wound in the palm of his right hand in attempting to tag out Mike Kreevich in a play at the plate in the fifth. Bill Conroy finished the game.

Buck Newsom To Face Yanks In Today's Game

Buck Newsom will take his swagger, his fast ball and his change of pace to the mound for the Nats today against the Yankees in the second game of the current series. It will be Newsom's first appearance in a Washington uniform since being traded to the Red Sox in 1937.

Yankee Manager Joe McCarthy has announced that Spud Chandler, right-hander, will pitch for New York.

With the exception of the pitchers, both the Yanks and Nats will be represented by the same line-ups that figured in the Yankees' 7-0 triumph of the opening game. Game time is 3:15 p. m.

Portland Purchases Indians' Larry Barton

Cleveland, April 14 (AP).—First Baseman Larry Barton was sold by the Cleveland Indians today to Portland, Oreg., of the Pacific Coast League.

Barton was bought during the winter from Wilkes-Barre and it was planned to return him there until Portland showed interest in him, the Cleveland club announced.

Maple Leafs Win, 9-3; Now One Game Behind Red Wings

By International News Service

Toronto, Ontario, April 14.—The Toronto Maple Leafs tonight pulled up to within one game of Detroit in the final series of the Stanley Cup hockey playoffs by vanquishing the Red Wings, 9 to 3.

As a result of the Toronto victory, the series now stands three games to two in favor of the Detroiters. The Red Wings had won the first three games of the four out of seven series, while Toronto took the fourth and fifth games.

Coolidge, Roosevelt Christen '42 Interhigh Baseball Today

Colts Boast Margin in Practice

Public High Nines Mostly Untested Due to Weather; Shankman to Hurl

After a training period cut so short by bad weather that even the coaches are in the dark about prospects, the 1942 public high school baseball season gets under way today with Roosevelt meeting a brand-new contender, Calvin Coolidge, on the latter's diamond. Starting time will be 4 p. m.

Going into its first interhigh baseball action since joining the local school system three years ago, Coolidge has enjoyed only two practice games. It won both, one over Gonzaga and the other over St. Albans.

Roosevelt, on the other hand, has the same record as most of the other six teams in the league—no losses or triumphs, also no games. It moves into the series a distinct dark horse along with Western, Tech and Central which have had no action except the "practice" games with which it is customary to duck the interhigh 12-game limit and Eastern, Anacostia and Wilson, each of which have marked up one victory in as many starts.

The Rough Riders may be expected to start either Leigh Joy or Walter Lansdale on the mound today, though which will make little difference. Their main hope will be their hitting, since Billy Garner, the Rider pitching star, is scholastically ineligible. The amount of hitting is highly problematic, too.

Big Bernie Shankman, a right-hander, will probably start for the Colts in their first series effort. His has been the most consistent work as the Fifth and Sheridan nine nosed out both its earlier opponents.

Navy's Duffy Is Matched On Card Here

A special six-round supporting match in which Chief Petty Officer Bill Duffy, of the Naval Air Station, Anacostia, will fight Dave Bruce, of Orange, N. J., yesterday was closed out by Promoter Joe Turner for next Tuesday night's boxing show at Riverside Stadium.

Bruce is a stablemate of Joe O'Gatty, Newark ironworker who fights Washington's own Jimmy De Chard in the eight-round headliner.

Promoter Turner stated that Bruce has fought such topnotchers as Norman Rubio, Maxie Berger and Milo Theoderescu and is considered a protege of Tony Galento.

Duffy in his last match at Turner's Arena was held to a six-round draw by Manual Rosser.

Hoya Golfers Easily Beat C. U. Team, 6-0

Georgetown golf team captain, Buddy Sharkey, won every hole but one from Catholic U.'s Bill O'Hearn to pace the Hoyas to a 6-0 victory over the Cards yesterday over the Bannockburn course.

Sharkey turned in an individual 70, even par, and was even at the end of the match on the tenth green. In the same foursome Tom Halligan, of the Hoyas, beat Phil Regan, 8 and 7, and with Sharkey won the best ball, 9 and 8. Halligan was only two over with a 72.

Jack Donahue played the back nine in 33 strokes, two under par, and best C. U.'s Pat Zilkas, 5 and 4. Bill Rohrey of the winners posted a 6 and 5 margin over Bol Heltzel and Donahue and Rohrey won the best ball, 6 and 5. Rohrey had a 74, Donahue a 73.

Zilkas was low scorer for Catholic with a 78. Georgetown meets George Washington Friday at Kenwood.

—With CONSIDINE

New York, April 14.—Here are some of the baseball records the boys began shooting at today:

If the Browns, so-called mystery team of the American League, manage to win the pennant it will be their first bit of bunting. They are the only club in the A. L. that has never won its championship, just as the Tigers are the only team which has never finished last . . .Nobody will break the late Lou Gehrig's mark of 2,130 consecutive games, or Gus Suhr's National League mark of 822—which was broken by the death of his mother . . . nor will the record of Eddie Collins and Rhoderick Wallace be touched. Each played 25 years in the majors, Collins from 1906 to '03, Wallace from 1894 to '18 . . . Nor Ty Cobb's record of 11,429 times at bat, his record of hitting better than .300 for 23 consecutive years, his lifetime mark of .363, or his 4,191 hits.

But if somebody breaks the base-stealing record, it won't be Cobb's. Ty's famous 96 stolen bases, in 1915, is topped in Walter Elias' invaluable "Little Red Book" of baseball records by the 156 stolen by Harry Stovey, of Philadelphia, in 130 games, back in 1888, and by the 115 stolen by Billy Hamilton, also of Philadelphia, in 133 games in 1891.

The most hits a man ever made in one game was nine. Johnny Burnett, of the Indians, did it in an 18-inning game in 1932. He was up 11 times . . . Hack Wilson, a singing bartender the last time we saw him, still holds the record for runs batted in during a single season—190. Did it for Joe McCarthy's Cubs in 1930.

You don't quite think of them together, but Babe Ruth and Hans Wagner share, at seven, the mark for the greatest number of years leading their leagues in extra-base hits . . . Ted Williams was the thirtieth big leaguer ever to hit .400 or better. Cobb, Rogers Hornsby and Jess Burkett are the only ones ever to do it three times.

Everybody knows Babe Ruth leads everybody in baseball history in home runs, with 714, but did you know that the greatest 3-bagger hitter of them all was Sam Crawford? Wahoo Sam hit 312 triples during his years with the Reds and Tigers. That was 15 more than Cobb hit . . . Wes Ferrell, who is expected to try a comeback this season, holds the record for the most home runs hit by a pitcher in one season—9 . . . Tom Leach, of the Pirates, led the National League in home runs, in 1902, with six.

Mel Ott will break a record the instant he gets a base on balls. He has been passed 1,335 times, which is a National League mark, but it's far behind Ruth's big legue record. Exactly 2,056 times during George's career, the pitcher decided that discretion was the better part of valor . . . The pitching may be a little wild this season, with youngsters coming in, but it isn't likely that Hughie Jennings' record of being hit 49 times in one season, will be topped.

Ernie Lombardi gets slower by the year, so maybe he'll break his great negative record of rolling into 30 double plays, or tamper with Goose Goslin's classic mark of rolling into four straight . . . Unless science learns how to bust a zero, as well as an atom, there won't be any change in the record for the fewest number of chances by a first baseman—for the record is zero. Six times in the history of baseball a full game has been played without one man being thrown out at first base.

You hear a lot about the great Pop Anson, and what a whiz he was around first base, but his mark of 58 errors in a single season (played only 108 games, too) has never been approached . . . Forty-four men have pitched and won double-headers . . . Lefty Grove last year became the twelfth pitcher to win 300 games, the others being Grover Cleveland Alexander, John Clarkson (who won 328 in 11 years from 1884 to 1894), Walter Johnson, Tim Keefe, Christy Mathewson, Tony Mullane, Charley Nichols, Eddie Plank, Hoss Radbourne, Mickey Welch and Cy Young.

Everybody laughs at the clownish Phils, but the Phils of the 1894 vintage still hold the team batting record, .343 . . . Washington holds the stick nadir mark, with a team average of .207 in 1888 . . . The last unassisted triple play was made by Johnny Neun, now Kansas City manager, in 1927.

Larner, of D.C., Blasts Bullitt In A.A.U. Meet

Boston, April 14 (AP).—The hard-earned but decisive lead that John Bullitt, Harvard junior and nephew of the former United States Ambassador to Russia and France, built up tonight during two furious rounds, was blasted by Thomas Larner, rugged Washington 135-pounder, during the last 30 seconds of their National A. A. U. quarter-finals boxing bout at the Boston Garden.

While registering the first clean-cut knockout in the two nights' old tourney, Larner, an aggressive southpaw battler, digested a terrific right-handed beating that the Crimsonite directed against his head and body. Larner refused to take a backward step while enduring that punishment and kept his two fists flailing at his opponent's head.

After landing an especially heavy body blow late in the third round, Bullitt stepped back, apparently to survey the damage.

As he did, Larner leaped at him and beat him to the canvas for a nine count with a long series of left and right hooks to the head. The Harvard battler came up groggy and Larner had little difficulty dropping him again for the full count, thereby qualifying for Friday's semi-finals action.

The other 135-pounders to survive the quarter-finals were Charles O'Kelley, St. Louis Negro; Robert McQuillan, of Lackawanna, N. Y., and Leonard Patton, of Hammond, Ind.

The other collegian in the starting field of 85, Windy Morris, of Arkansas Tech, met with better fortune, for he gained a semifinal bracket in the 147-pound division by coming from behind to outpoint Nick Latsios, another aggressive Washington battler, with a busy body attack in a free-swinging setto.

In the 126-pound class Pete Celinski, the last Washington, D. C., survivor in the quarter-finals, bowed out before a steady attack by Sam Derrigo, of Cleveland.

Charley Manione, 160-pounder from Washington, was the victim of a technical knockout in a later bout, Fort Leavenworth's Private Merrill Campbell taking the nod.

Gilman Beats Landon, 5-0

Baltimore, April 14.—Allowing only two hits in a 17-inning game, Gorman hurled Gilman Country School's varsity baseball team to a 5-0 triumph today over Landon School of Washington.

Meanwhile, his mates supported him with seven hits to tally twice in the first frame and three times in the fifth.

Cady went the route for the visitors. Gorman struck out eight while Cady fanned only one. Gorman walked four and Cady one less.

Shortstop Brawner and Right-fielder Sanderson were the only Washingtonians to connect safely.

Fishing with JACK BELL

This morning at 5:30 o'clock, Maryland's trout fishing season opened. Many anglers were out at the crack of dawn. Many spent the night in their sleeping bags somewhere near their favorite fishing spot for that chance to be first. There is something about "opening day" that gets in the blood. When the first robins of spring put in their appearance a strange restlessness develops in the fisherman.

JACK BELL

This can only be soothed by trout fishing on "opening day" wading hip deep in icy cold waters, just to cast a fly or bait.

Many a man may be late for work or a date, but, if he is a trout fisherman he will put up with the chilly out-of-doors, by sleeping with nothing more than mother earth for a mattress and the sky for a blanket, quite often filled with a blanket of wet clouds, just to be sure to be on time for "opening day." There is nothing like fishing for recreation whether it's for the defense worker or the soldier on leave.

The favorite stream, crowded no doubt, will be Fishing Creek, as in the past. Crowded more so this year because of "no fishing" above the reservoir. Fishing Creek is one of the State's most popular trout streams, because it is near Washington and Baltimore, and bait fishing is allowed, also it is opened two hours earlier than such other popular fly-fishing streams as Big Hunting and Beaver Creeks.

Meeting Threatened

The prospects of another gathering of the Brotherhood of the Jungle Cocks was handed quite a jolt early last week. The National Park Service turned over to the Army the Catoctin Recreational Area on Big Hunting Creek for the month of April and May.

However, since this happened, Joe Brooks, of Baltimore, the brotherhood's able executive secretary, stayed away from attending the seventh annual North American Wildlife Conference, held in Toronto, Canada, to do what he could to straighten out what then was a mess.

Now Joe tells us that Aaron and Lillie Straus, of Baltimore, hearing of the plight of the brotherhood, came to their rescue. Both Aaron and Lillie, well known for their philanthropic work, at one time heard the Creed of the Jungle Cock. It impressed them so that they wanted to do something for the boys, so they have turned over their Camp Airy for the campfire. Camp Airy is just outside of Thurmont, Md., 2 miles on the road to Blue Ridge Summit.

The camp is practically on Big Owens Creek and Joe tells us ". . . take it from me, the camp's better than that on Catoctin." The gathering of the Jungle Cocks will be held on the same dates, price remains the same, and program as well. The Cabins at Camp Airy hold 16 and every one is provided with hot and cold running water. The Strauses say they are even going to fill the big swimming pool for those that can take—possibly that may be as far as some will get to fish. Everything will be furnished, except blankets.

Camp Airy is no further away from Fishing Creek than Catoctin. However, Beaver Creek is, by 2 miles, and it is about 3 to Big Hunting. Owens Creek will be heavily stocked for the occasion, and Joe Brooks says "it is an ill wind that does not blow some good." So let's hear from those who care to be there, May 1 2 and 3.

While the fresh-water boys are getting along with their sport, here is some good news for the salt-water fishermen. The channel bass are at Oregon Inlet, N. C.! The first catch of the season was made on April 3. Since Sunday, April 5, J. Parker Bursh and Harry J. Loarman, of Philadelphia, Pa., caught four averaging 37 pounds. Also G. R. Johnson and N. C. Jackson, of Greensboro, N. C., boated 11, averaging 40 pounds, their smallest channel bass weighed 35 pounds.

L. S. Parkerson, of Nagshead, N. C., tells us that the weather has been fine, with southwest winds, and all the early birds are now making a killing at the inlet.

Butcher Holds Reds, Pirates Score, 4 to 2

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, April 14.—The Pittsburgh Pirates opened the 1942 baseball season on their own terms today as big Max Butcher kept Cincinnati's Reds well under control for a 4-2 victory before 24,104 fans who expected an improved home team.

The Reds lost the game by the margin of runs that should have been scored, and left ten men on bases. Bucky Walters was the victim.

The Pirates started with a pair of runs in the first. After Pete Coscarart had rolled out, Johnny Barrett was safe on Joost's fumble and Bob Elliott got a ground-rule double. Barrett scored on Vince Di Maggio's fly and Elbie Fletcher sent Elliott in with a single to center.

Eddie Joost and Goodman singled in the Reds' half, but neither Gee Walker nor Frank McCormick could help them along.

The Pirates wrapped the game up in the fourth on Fletcher's neat bunt down the third-base line, Stewart's single, Rookie Bert Haas' fuble on Frankie Gustine's tap and another single by Al Lopez for two runs.

Hubbell Beaten By Dodgers Despite Screwy Play; Mize Gets 3-Run Homer

By the Associated Press

New York, April 14.—The Brooklyn Dodgers opened defense of their National League pennant today with a 7-to-5 victory over their old enemies, the New York Giants, and at the same time treated 42,653 customers to as weird a collection of diamond antics as opening day has seen in many a year.

The "Beloved Bums" from the banks of the Gowanus won out simply by overpowering old King Carl Hubbell in the early frames, and then saying, "try and catch us." The old king had nothing to start with, and the Brooklyns tagged him for six of their runs, including a homer by Pewee Reese, in the first four frames.

After spotting the Dodgers this handicap, the Giants did their best to catch up for brand-new Manager Mel Ott with a five-run blast sparked by Johnny Mize's three-run homer in the seventh frame, but Johnny Allen brought his fast ball in to save the victory for Curt Davis.

Antics Featured

But more than this were the wartime touches to the season opener, notable all through the game, and the things the Brooklyns did on the field in pulling out the victory.

For instance, they committed five errors, bobbles that sometimes looked like bush-league stuff. Then they turned right around and pulled three dazzling double plays.

Off the playing field, you knew as soon as you walked into the big ball yard that there was a war going on—even before Mayor LaGuardia tossed out the first ball. Appeals to buy defense bonds were heard on all sides; 2100 soldiers, sailors and marines were sprinkled through the stands. And, after both clubs had formed a giant "V" at the foot of the center field flagpole for flag-raising ceremonies, the public address system advised everyone in the house of what to do in case of an air raid—"follow the green arrows to places of safety."

The first inning was strictly a nightmare for Hubbell. After Reese's double and walks to Vaughan and Pete Reiser, Ducky Medwick looped a two-bagger into right for two runs; another came in on an infield out, and Mickey Owen sent the fourth scampering home with a single. After Reese's four-base belt with one on in the fourth, the only other Dodger tally came in the fifth on Walker's single and a couple of infield outs.

Hub's Dreams Bad

Davis had the Giants muzzled till two were out in the seventh. Then came Mize's tremendous smash against the facade of the upper right-field stands in the midst of three other singles, a couple of walks and an error.

Reiser Finally Hears From Draft

New York, April 14 (AP).—Pete Reiser, Brooklyn's 1941 National League batting champion, said he hadn't received official notification until today that he had been reclassified 1-A in Selective Service by his Brooklyn draft board.

Reiser said that notification had been sent out by mail by the draft board several weeks ago while he was in Cuba and Florida and that it had caught up with him only this morning.

Reiser added that he knew nothing of any appeal from the reclassification although his draft board has said that an appeal has been taken by the ball player's parents.

Illinois U. Nine Bows to Bradley

Champaign, Ill., April 14 (AP).—Behind Dick Haack's four-hit pitching, Bradley's baseball team blanked Illinois today, 4-0, for its second victory over a Big Ten team.

Haack, freshman right-hander, struck out nine batters and yielded only two walks. Only three Illini reached third base.

Braves Edge Phils, 2 to 1; Javery Stars

By International News Service

Philadelphia, April 14.—Aided by the brilliant pitching of Alva Javery, the Boston Braves today opened the 1942 season with a 2-to-1 decision over the Philadelphia Phils.

A crowd of 10,150, including 1818 service men, witnessed the tightly played contest. Javery held the Phils to eight hits, while his teammates garnered ten from Veteran Si Johnson, the losing pitcher, and Melton.

Philadelphia got a run in the first on Murtaugh's single, and Rookie Northey's double. Three Boston singles tied the count in the third, Cooney scoring. In the seventh, the deadlock was broken when Cooney doubled and came home on Fernandez's single.

The Gallup Poll:

Two Out of Three Want Pro Sports Continued in Wartime

Gallup Poll Finds 66% on Favor; Young People Lead in Demanding Retention

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., April 14.—As America's most popular sport is under way in baseball parks all over the country, the public is strongly united in its desire to keep professional sports going for the duration of the war.

Suggestions that professional sports be discontinued have met with the opposition of President Roosevelt. To determine how the people themselves feel about it, the American Institute of Public Opinion took the issue to the country in a poll as follows:

"Do you think that professional sports should be continued during the war, or should they be stopped until after the war?"

The vote is:

Continued	66%
Stopped	24
Undecided	10

While the question dealt with all professional sports, more than 20 million fans who crowd the baseball parks each year have been concerned primarily with the status of their favorite sport as the season's opening approached and draft-depleted teams moved from spring training toward their opening games.

Institute studies in previous years have shown that baseball is the game which the Nation's sport followers prefer above all others to watch. Football runs second, basketball third.

Despite the drastic curtailments which war has brought in American life, the President himself has looked upon the country's number one professional sport as important enough to warrant a letter to Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis recently saying: "I honestly feel that it would be best for the country to keep baseball going."

The youth of the land is strongest in its approval of continuing professional sports. Seventy-eight per cent of voters between 21 and 29 years would continue sports, while only 56 per cent of those above 50 years of age are in favor.

Oddly enough, while baseball is viewed generally as a poor man's sport, the poor people are less anxious to continue with professional sports than the above-average income groups. Seventy-six per cent of those in the upper income bracket want sports continued, as compared to 62 per cent in the lower income groups.

The question of professional sports during war has likewise agitated a number of other democratic countries at war, notably Canada and Australia.

It is interesting to note that Americans are much more enthusiastic about continuing sports in wartime than are the people of either Canada or Australia.

An institute affiliate, the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion, recently found that 50 per cent of the Canadian population wants professional sports to continue, while 40 per cent do not and the rest are undecided.

A similar survey conducted in Australia by Australian public opinion polls found sentiment more evenly divided—45 per cent in favor, 46 per cent opposed and 9 per cent undecided.

Oregon Coach Heads Flight Grid Staff

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., April 14.—Appointment of George (Tex) Oliver, Oregon University football coach, to head the gridiron staff at the Navy's pre-flight school for aviation cadets at Oakland, Calif., was announced today.

Lieut. Commander Thom Hamilton's office reported Oliver, commissioned a lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve last Saturday, would report at the U. S. Naval Academy Monday for 30 days indoctrination training before going on active duty.

Hamilton, director of the Navy's physical training program for aviation cadets, has charge of the appointments of athletic staffs at four regional pre-flight schools.

Cubs Spoil Opener for Cards, 5 to 4

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, April 14.—Lacing Mort Cooper for three singles and a double for three runs in the sixth inning, Jimmy Wilson's Chicago Cubs nosed out the pennant-minded St. Louis Cardinals, 5 to 4, in the season opener before a crowd of 13,821 cash customers and 1000 soldiers here today.

It was a rather costly first game victory, however, as two players were retired with injuries and Manager Wilson was banished from the field by Umpire Al Barlick in the fourth inning following an argument over a base line collision between Enos Slaughter and Lou Stringer.

Ken O'Dea's homer with one man on base put the Cards ahead momentarily in the fourth.

First C.U. Nine in 6 Years Faces D. C. College Today

American, Georgetown Also List Games on Collegiate Baseball Card

The first Catholic University baseball team in six years makes its 1942 debut this afternoon at Brookland Field, meeting Washington College at 2:30 o'clock. Meantime over an American University "Pop" Cassell's winless Eagles face Loyola College of Baltimore at 3 p. m., in search of their first victory in four games. Georgetown's nine will invade West Point today.

Coach James Y. (Shorty) Hughes, former local umpire, announced C. U. starting batting order as follows: Jose Santralla, shortstop; Bob Bourdrey, second base; Dominick Valanza, third base; Al Norris, centerfield; Hank Garrity, catcher; Tim Murnane, first base; Ralph O'Brien, rightfield; John Merchak, leftfield, and Larry Eidsness, pitcher. Hughes said that while Eidsness would start, it was likely that Bernie Cody and John Baltrunkonis also would take a turn on the mound.

Washington College, 4-3 conqueror of American University Monday, probably will start Lefty Bob Grove, jr., on the slab. Grove, jr., opened the A. U. game, but received bad support which cost him two unearned runs in three innings and retired in the fourth for a pinch hitter. His mates shoved over three runs in the seventh to win the decision.

American University's starting pitching assignment is likely to bring out Charley Kligman, freshman prospect from Central High School here, in his collegiate bow.

Georgetown, easy 10-3 victor over American University in its debut Saturday, sees in today's engagement with perennially tough Army a clew to its 1942 success.

Tomorrow George Washington plays host to West Virginia, while Maryland entertains Michigan at College Park in its initial home game of the campaign. The Terps will welcome familiar surroundings after two Southern road trips that produced six straight defeats.

Montgomery Co. Waltonians Meet

The Bethesda-Chevy Chase Chapter of the Izaak Walton League will hold its monthly meeting tonight at 8 o'clock at the National Capital Field Trials Clubhouse, on Burdette Road off Bradley Road, about three miles past Bethesda.

Today is the opening day of Maryland's trout season, and the heaviest trout taken in Maryland waters will receive a prize if brought to tonight's meeting. There also are prizes for the heaviest rainbow, brook and brown trout, as well as for heavy catfish and suckers.

Constant Fan, 106 Finally Misses Opener

Cynthiana, Ky., April 14 (AP).—Charles Rieckel, who at 106 claims to be the Nation's oldest baseball fan, said he would miss the opening-day game today in Cincinnati for the first time in 35 or 40 years.

He gave no reason. His health was said to be "about as usual." Rieckel hasn't lost interest in the national pastime and has been following closely the preseason activities of the major league clubs, particularly his favorites, the Cincinnati Reds.

Pharien, Apprentice Campbell Up, Wins 'Graw Feature

Grey Wing, Favorite, Runs Fourth

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., April 14.—With Jockey Al Shelhamer riding the favorite, Grey Wing, like Joe Blow, jr., in the novice class of the Chevy Chase Horse Show, P. M. Burch's Pharien won the Parkton Purse here this afternoon. Grey Wing finished fourth in a field of five going 11-16 miles. Pharien forged to the wire a length and a half in advance of a photo finish for second money in which the camera voted for the Bomar Stable's Cal's Pet. W. C. Stroke's Blue Steel was third.

The winner paid a $9.60 mutuel and was the first of two straight successes for Burch, the Washington (D. C.) trainer. Pharien, carrying 101 pounds and ridden by Apprentice Eddie Campbell, was clocked in 1:47 2-5.

Those in the crowd of 10,000 who dumped in the money on Grey Wing saw the son of Halcyon take command from Blue Steel approaching the half pole. The colt opened a gap and appeared to be a beaten off horse when Pharien and Blue Steel came to the outside of him. Then Grey Wing went wide at the turn. In the final straightway, Shelhamer went to the whip and Grey Wing closed fastest of all.

The fans came back in the sixth race, a test of a mile and 70 yards, and installed Henry H. Hecht's Firebroom as the choice. Firebroom, ridden by Jockey Mannie Berg, finished second and was beaten a half length by the Howe Stable's Cassis. Third money in this field of five went to Riposte. Cassis paid $11.90.

Dingmans Nosed Out

In one of the closest finishes of the day, the Christiana Stables' Red's Rival nosed out H. G. Bedwell's Dingmans. In Red's Rival's saddle was Apprentice Jockey G. Cusimano, a 19-year-old Washington boy whose brother, Frank, once was a rider. Cusimano was making his debut as a jockey and he put up a good finish on the $14.50 shot. Third money was taken by Legal Light in a field of ten going a mile and a sixteenth.

Jockey Al Schmidl, however, was the riding hero of the program. He piloted both ends of a $175.80 daily double. In the second race he won with the Foxcatcher Farms' Fairy Manah, a $21.60 horse and a Kentucky Derby candidate. In the previous event he had driven Mrs. August Swenke's Total Victory through on the inside to win at a $17.80 price. In addition, Schmidl was aboard the aforementioned Cassis.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TOTAL VICTORY, $17.80, $7.30, $4.20; SILVER RUN, $7.20, $4.80; ZACABRAND, $2.90.

TOTAL VICTORY in close quarters early while forwardly placed, came to inside for racing room and responded gamely to drive to dispose of SILVER SUN. The latter was first off, withstood bid of ZACABRAND and continued gamely, but could not resist winner. ZACABRAND was off alertly and had no excuses. LEO'S BRANDY was pinched back on rail leaving gate and went evenly thereafter.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1200. For 2-year-old maidens. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 3:02. Off at 3:02½. Winner, Foxcatcher farm's ch. c. (3) by Man o' War—Star Fairy. Trained by R. E. Handlen. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13⅗.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAIRY MANAH, $21.60, $8.40, $4.70; TROON, $3.80, $2.70; HALF CROWN, $3.00.

FAIRY MANAH, taken to outside for racing room approaching stretch, responded to strong handling to take command in stretch and drew out with ease at end. TROON was poorly handled, broke alertly was taken back and closed boldly on own courage. HALF CROWN was taken up in first furlong, moved up and weakened in closing test. TRIPOD was off slowly and closed a gap.

Daily Double—Total Victory and Fairy Manah paid $175.80

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1000. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:32. Off at 3:32½. Winner, J. Pedrosa's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAIR HERO, $9.90, $4.20 $2.90; WHITE TIME, $3.20, $2.50; REMOLEE (entry), $3.20.

FAIR HERO, within striking distance from start, responded gamely when placed to drive and wore down WHITE TIME to win going away. WHITE TIME, first away, opened long lead and Wagner appeared to ride overconfidently in final sixteenth. REMOLEE raced forwardly on inside and faltered in closing 50 yards. STAR CHARTER was off sluggishly and closed boldly on outside.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:01½. Off at 4:02. Winner, H. G. Bedwell's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLINGENDAAL, $6.30, $3.60, $2.80; EXARCH, $2.80, $2.40; SIR LANCELOT, $4.30.

CLINGENDAAL was shuffled back early, came to outside while improving position and withstood long drive to be up in concluding stride. EXARCH was in first flight from start, took command when asked but could not resist winner. SIR LANCELOT was shut off on rail early, came widest of all entering stretch and closed boldly. BRIGHT CAMP had a rough trip.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1500. For 3-year-olds; allowances. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:30½. Off at 4:31½. Winner, P. M. Burch's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PHARIEN, $9.60, $5.30, $3.60; CAL'S PET, $8.80, $4.50; BLUE STEEL, $3.20.

PHARIEN, within striking distance from start, came to outside to take command entering stretch and held away thereafter. CAL'S PET was sluggish early, came between horses while making move and closed with good energy. BLUE STEEL was steadied while setting and forcing pace and came willingly at close. GREY WING took command approaching half pole, was taken up nearing stretch, went wide into final bend and closed fastest of all.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1500. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:00½. Off at 5:01. Winner, Howe Stable's br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CASSIS, $11.90, $3.30, $2.40; FIREBROOM, $2.50, $2.20; RIPOSTE, $2.50.

CASSIS, sent to front under hustling tactics going to first turn, opened good lead and weakened in final sixteenth. FIREBROOM came to outside to improve position, moved up menacingly in midstretch but was put to by whip too late to be effective. RIPOSTE was closest to pace early and weakened gradually in closing stages. PRINCE GOVANS and EL TOREADOR were outrun.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:28½. Off at 5:29. Winner, Christiana Stable's br. c. (4) by John P. Grier—Adine. Trained by J. A. Healey. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:47⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED'S RIVAL, $14.50, $7.10, $5.60; DINGMANS, $3.70, $2.70; LEGAL LIGHT, $5.80.

RED'S RIVAL drew out in opening furlong, was rated while setting pace and held on with good courage in closing test. DINGMANS was steadied early, came out for racing room and hung after getting to leader. LEGAL LIGHT was rated closest to pace to stretch, responded to drive and then weakened. SOMALI raced on inside throughout and lacked racing room in stretch.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:58. Off at 5:59. Winner, C. R. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISRULE, $5.10 $3.20, $2.50; GINOBI, $3.60, $2.90; ROUGH GOING, $3.30.

MISRULE was steadied early, was eased out for racing room, responded when put to pressure and opened long lead to win easily. GINOBI was rated while setting pace and held on gamely when displaced but was no matchforwinner. ROUGH GOING lacked early speed and came willingly at close. SAY JUDGE closed with bold rush from sluggish beginning.

Selections at Havre de Grace

Dear Al:

This column finally did something constructive. Remember me writing about somebody printing a "highshot Reilly Card" and selling selections after the death of Jack Reilly last winter? Well, the fellow who was doing it folded the day after we printed our piece on him. Has Jockey George Woolf got the rough-riding concession around here? Mora was fined 100 bucks for claiming a foul against Woolf last Saturday and the money rider came right back last Monday and bumped horses all over the stretch with Colchis. Bright Willie, one of the horses to suffer interference, was cut so badly about the legs that he may not start in Saturday's $15,000 added Chesapeake. Big race or not a big race, a foul is a foul in my book. This happened inside the sixteenth pole. I saw it because I was looking. Trainer Ed Christmas had Challedon on the track yesterday morning and the Brann star turned in a breezing 5-furlong workout in 1:05 2-5. Challedon is beginning to look and run like his old self and may be the one to beat in the $10,000 Philadelphia Handicap. Supplementary entries for the Preakness close at noon today. Requested is one of those who will get in the big test through his owner paying $1500. Dick Trent, who is an apprentice jockey at the rare old age, as jockeys go, of 28 years. Trent, a fellow from Texas, decided when he was 23 that he wanted to be a jockey. He spent more than four years exercising and rubbing horses before he got his first mount in New Orleans last winter. Since coming to Maryland, Trent has ridden four horses and has won with two of them. Despite his age, Trent is considered a fine jockey prospect. I think I'll take off 150 pounds and see if I can't get some mounts. Wouldn't that be something—Bill Bennings riding Walter Haight? Russell Oakes did a good job with the publicity from Tropical Park. Now for some winners. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—The Shouse and Bryson entry of VEE and BILL'S ANNE appears well placed in the day's opener and I'm going to string along with this pair. WITCH'S CIRCLE has speed and belongs close. ADROIT may take care of the others.

Second race—VILLAGE BELLE was a winner at Bowie and will be hard to beat if taken off the reserve list. The Arthur and McCleary entry of REAL BOY and HIBLAZE should be in the thick of contention. BUFFLEHEAD (named for Art Brown) may be prominent.

Third race—Miss I. Q. may take it all in this field at good odds. She is reported fit and I see no reason for mistakes. CLIP CLOP and BARBARA CHILDS for the place and show positions.

Fourth race—PETES BET had plenty of speed at Bowie and appears ready to turn in a victory over these. BOLA MOWLEE ran two good races at the other town and is dangerous. LIT UP to take care of the show end.

Fifth race—WISE NIECE has a lot of speed and I'm forced to string along despite the top weight of 118 pounds. EQUIPET'S last Bowie race was a good one. BLUSTERING is cheaper than some of these but may take the top and be hard to catch.

Sixth race—WOODVALE LASS seems to have found the right spot in this distance affair. Needs only the right handling. SARAN was a winner at Bowie but may be overweighted. POP'S SISTER for the minor money.

Seventh race—MASON DIXON ran a good race recently in better company. May get the main money. LEE'S JIMMIE and TANGANYIKA are dangerous contenders.

Eighth race—BUSY MAN can better that last considerably and I expect a winning effort in this field. GOLDEN MOWLEE'S last was good. LEONARDTOWN is due to awaken.

Best bet—WOODVALE LASS.

Power Output In Capital Sets High for March

Recording a new high for the month, kilowatt hour sales of the Potomac Electric Power Co. soared to 90,866,392 in March. This was a gain of 13.6 per cent over the 79,826,879 k.w.h. in the same month last year, the company reported yesterday.

Power used for domestic and commercial purposes increased 13.6 per cent during March while railway consumption jumped 15.7 per cent. There was a gain of 4.3 per cent in consumption for streets and highways.

The local power company recently filed an application with the Securities and Exchange Commission for the proposed sale of 30,000 shares of common stock at $100 a share. The additional cash is needed, the company said, to meet war expansion needs and to pay off bank loans.

Real Estate Bonds Gain

The average price of real estate bonds showed a small increase in March, according to the Amott-Baker realty bond price average of 200 issues. The average price per $1000 bond was $311 on March 31 compared with $302 on December 31, 1941, and $281 on December 31, 1940. The gain from February to March was estimated at 0.3 per cent.

Of the four Washington issues in the Amott-Baker average, three showed gains while one dropped. Mayflower Hotel first 5s of 1950 were up 1 at 138; National Press Building adjustment income 4½s of 1950 were up ½ at 43, and Washington Properties general income 7s of 1952 gained 3 at 78½. National Press Building first 3-5s of 1950 dropped 3 at 89.

Kendrick to Speak

"Requirements for Effective Internal Audit and Control" will be discussed by Wayne Kendrick, C. P. A., at the monthly meeting today of the Washington chapter of the National Association of Cost Accountants in the Hamilton Hotel.

Mr. Kendrick is president of the District of Columbia Board of Accountancy and past president of the District of Columbia Institute of Accountants.

Sells $706,535 in Bonds

Reports received by Y. E. Booker, chairman of the investment bankers and brokers unit of the District of Columbia Defense Savings Committee, show that the unit has sold war savings bonds to a total of $706,535 from January 15 to March 31.

Members of the unit are making a special effort to promote the purchase of bonds by large numbers of their customers and are advocating the inclusion of the popular Series E bonds in all portfolios.

Three Directors Of Air-Way Quit; Vote Challenged

Toledo, Ohio, April 14 (AP).—Three directors of the Air-Way Electric Appliance Corporation have resigned, contending the stockholders' meeting of March 24 was irregular, President Joseph H. Nuffer announced today.

The resigning directors, all stockholders, were George Coury and J. M. Doroshaw, both of Chicago, and M. J. Zivian, of Detroit.

Doroshaw claimed in his letter of resignation that the notice of the meeting to stockholders failed to apprise them fairly of their full power to vote on their presently held stock in connection with the company's recent capital readjustment.

Coury said he was unable to agree with the action taken at the meeting, regardless of whether it was proper.

Nuffer said Doroshaw had been "expressly requested" to attend stockholders' and directors' meetings on March 24 and had agreed to attend both.

He added that all stockholders had been notified that the new stock would be entitled to voting rights after February 10, 1942, the date the merger became effective, and were again informed by the notice of the March 24 meeting that the merger agreement had become effective.

I. B. M. Head Asks Cut in His Profit Sharing Contract

New York, April 14 (AP).—Directors of International Business Machines Corporation have been requested by Thomas J. Watson, president, to modify his employment contract by reducing his profit-sharing compensation from 5 per cent to 2½ per cent and to exclude therefrom any profit from the manufacture of munitions.

The new contract would be made retroactive to cover 1941 at the request of Watson.

The action of Watson was disclosed in the proxy statement for the annual stockholders meeting on April 28. At that meeting shareholders will be asked to approve the new agreement as well as vote on a proposal to increase by 500,000 shares the present capitalization, raising the total authorized to 1,500,000 shares.

Watson's compensation in 1941 consisted of $100,000 flat salary plus accruals of $362,519 on the basis of 2½ per cent of earnings as provided in the new employment contract.

Trouble-Shooting Engineers Crack 'Bugs,' Double War Production in Some Factories

A quiet, unpublicized job of increasing war goods production by application of scientific principles to plant methods is being accomplished today by the Nation's industrial engineers.

A big steel foundry making vital parts for tanks, for instance, wasn't satisfied with its production.

A crew of engineers, known as scientific production management men, and skilled at tracking down production "bugs," was called in and found several defects in planning.

They discovered that frequently when work on an order was about to start, the patterns were not ready.

Foundrymen were cutting their own mould rods, a detail which slowed up their work.

There were delays in the supplying of moulding sand.

Crane service was slow.

The trouble-shooting engineers went into huddle and replanned the company's operations.

An arrangement was made under which cranemen would receive a bonus for good work.

Result:

Production of the foundry was stepped up to 1,000 tons a month from 300 tons before the replanning.

The man-hours required per ton of costings was reduced 50 per cent.

Bedaux and other trouble-shooting engineering firms daily are performing modern miracles in increasing factory efficiency.

The scientific approach to solution of a company's industrial operating problems is no new and recent idea.

It dates back to Frederick W. Taylor, a scientist, engineer, experimenter and inventor who is recognized by the industrial engineering profession today as the "father of scientific management."

Taylor, a Philadelphian, after a brilliant career in science, died in 1915 at the age of 59.

It was the dynamic Taylor's thesis that "application of the scientific method of inquiry" was the best way to approach any problem.

He applied it to the steel industry, and out came the Taylor-White process for making high speed steel—the very process basic in high speed steel operations today.

He developed the best steam hammer the world of his time had ever seen.

But all his work was not industrial.

The "application of the scientific method of inquiry," he contended, could be used in solving any problem, no matter what it's nature.

Taylor liked tennis. So he applied the method to the court game. Result:

He perfected a new type of tennis racquet.

Arming himself and E. W. Clark, of Philadelphia with the new racquets, the two men went out and trounced all competition in doubles matches around the Quaker City.

At another stage in his life, he noticed that golf putting greens weren't what they should be.

So he "applied the scientific principle" to a study of greens and perfected a new, long-lasting, more economical, level-topped golf green that contributed to the rise in popularity of the game in this country.

Scientific management engineers—helping to win the war today with the practical application of the old Taylor theory—recently were summoned to a mid-Western brass factory making small parts for planes and tanks.

Studies were made, suggestions were put forward, and output of automatic screw machines was raised from 72 per cent of rated capacity to around 93 per cent.

The improvement was brought about by adding a number of service men whose job it was to have brass rods of the proper size ready at the machines when needed, to put the rods in the machines, take away finished parts and weigh them, and do other auxiliary tasks.

In addition, it was found that by properly planning tooling and setting-up jobs, the set-up men would be enabled to work ahead, thus eliminating a former frequent cause of delay.

Hoarding of Cash Called Sabotage

New York, April 14 (AP).—The East New York Savings Bank told renters of its safe deposit boxes today to withdraw any cash kept in them because "hoarding money in times of war amounts to sabotage against the Government."

Former Municipal Court Justice Edward A. Richards, bank president, said in a letter to depositors:

"Hoarded dollars are idle dollars, slacker dollars. Dollars withdrawn from circulation hinder and delay the building of planes, ships, tanks and vital armaments which our soldiers need to defeat the enemy.

Wheat and Rye Drop Sharply In Heavy Sales

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 14.—Wheat and rye futures suffered the sharpest break in many weeks today, the bread cereal slumping 2½ cents a bushel at times to the lowest prices in more than four months.

Uneasiness over the French political situation which some sources interpreted as favorable to the Nazis, the Japanese threat against India, and uncertainty regarding taxation and inflation control measures in Washington, coupled with weakness of securities, corn and hogs, combined to unleash a flood of liquidation and stop-loss selling.

May wheat contracts at times slumped to $1.20⅜, or a loss of nearly 14 cents from the seasonal top price established late in January.

Final prices for wheat were 2 to 2⅛ cents lower than Monday's close; May, $1.20¾-⅝; July, $1.23-$1.22⅞. Corn lost 1⅛ to 1½ cents; May, 85¾-⅞; July, 88⅝-½; oats dropped ⅞ to 1⅛; rye, 1⅜ to 1¼; soybeans closed unchanged to ¾ cents down and lard unchanged at the ceiling limits.

Milling demand was virtually absent. There were reports that the Office of Price Administration was studying the possibility of establishing ceiling levels for flour as a part of the Administration's anti-inflation program.

Pennsy's Gross Increases 28% During Month

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 14.—Martin W. Clement, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, reported today the company's estimated gross operating revenue for March totaled $80,667,000, an increase of 23.8 per cent over the same period of 1941.

Freight revenues jumped 25.9 per cent to $46,067,000 and passenger revenue 51 per cent to $10,530,000.

Clement disclosed the sharp increases after the annual stockholders meeting during which F. W. Fell, jr., vice president and comptroller of the railroad, told shareholders "the railroads of the country are alert to their responsibility in the moving of men and materials so essential to our national defense."

Four directors were denominated to serve four-year terms. They are Pierre S. du Pont, Wilmington, Del.; D. R. McLennan, Chicago, Ill.; Frank D'Olier, Newark, N. J., and Robert R. McCracken, Philadelphia. The annual election will be held April 28.

Sperry Corp. Head Raps 'Gadget' Story

By the Associated Press

Wilmington, Del., April 14.—Nine directors of the Sperry Corporation, makers of the famous bomb sight, were reelected today at the first public meeting of stockholders.

The corporation dissolved a five-man voting trust March 23 and applied to the New York Stock Exchange to list common stock. Thomas A. Morgan president of the firm, explained that henceforth the operation of the corporation would be the responsibility of all the stockholders.

Reelected to the board for one year each were Morgan, George N. Arnsby, J. Cheever Cowdin, Thomas B. Doe, Charles T. Fisher, Frank T. Hines, Lindsey Hopkins, E. A. Pierce and John Sanderson.

John J. Gilbert, holder of 210 shares of stock, asked Morgan about published reports in a New York paper (PM) that Sperry employes were "killing time making gadgets."

"We're too busy with constructive things to listen to that kind of junk," Morgan replied. "You won't find that sort of thing in the Sperry Corporation. Those things don't help anybody."

Bethlehem Rejects Minority Proposals

Wilmington, Del., April 14 (AP).—Five directors of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation were reelected today at the annual stockholders meeting.

They are R. E. McMath, vice president, who presided at the meeting in the absence of President Eugene G. Grace; Quincy Bent, Archibald Johnston, J. M. Larkin and Paul Mackall.

Stockholders rejected minority proposals to reduce compensation of executives, change the place of the annual meeting and change the method of selecting public accountants.

The proposal to cut officers' compensation, made by Minority Stockholders John J. Gilbert and L. B. Coshland, would have reduced Grace's bonus to $50,000 annually and that of other executive officers to $25,000.

Martin Director Quits To Join the Air Corps

Baltimore, April 14 (AP).—Eight members of the board of directors were reelected and the resignation of a ninth announced today at the annual meeting of stockholders of the Glenn L. Martin Co., manufacturers of military planes.

Reelected to the board were President Glenn L. Martin, Joseph T. Hartson, Harry F. Vollmer, Howard Bruce, William K. Ebel, John W. Hanes, Myron G. Shook and Thomas H. Jones.

It was announced that John W. Castles, of New York, was resigning. He plans to go into the Army Air Corps.

The annual report of the president for the year 1941 was read and accepted. It showed the Martin Co. and its subsidiaries had net sales of $67,237,888.71 and a net profit of $5,773,148.52, equivalent to earnings of $5.24 a share. This compared with net sales of $30,663,337.10 and a net profit of $5,424,489.50, equivalent to earnings of $4.94 per share in 1940.

North American Ordered to Divorce 56 Utility Firms

Philadelphia, April 14 (AP).—The Securities and Exchange Commission today directed the billion-dollar North American Co. to sever its relationship with 56 companies in its vast utility system.

The drastic SEC order permits North American to retain only one of its eight major subholding companies, the 273-million-dollar Union Electric Co. of Missouri which in turn is limited in its holdings.

Included among the companies with which North American must sever its relationship are the Detroit Edison Co., with assets of 370 million dollars, in which North American holds 19.2 per cent of common shares; and the Pacific Gas and Electric Co. and its subsidiaries with assets of 790 million dollars, in which North American holds 32.89 per cent of common shares.

North American was given a year to comply with the order to reduce its system to a single integrated utility system under the holding company law of 1935.

Stock Market Slides to Nine-Year Low Level On Uneasiness Over Laval's Return to Power

New York, April 14.—Stock market prices today dropped to the lowest average level since April, 1933, under selling brought out by the news of Pierre Laval's return to power in the Vichy government.

Bonds and commodities followed a similar trend.

Unconcealed concern in official quarters over this event made Wall Street uneasy and enough offerings of stock were dislodged to force the prices of most leaders down fractions to around 2 points.

While Stock Exchange prices have been on the down grade for several months, the average had not until today penetrated the lowest range of the last four years.

By contrast with recent sluggish sessions, the market was fairly active, but it still was relatively thin, with total transfers of 556,980 shares, compared with 237,710 Monday.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite dropped .7 of a point, at 33.4. Of an aggregate of 789 issues traded, 600 declined, 58 advanced and 131 were unchanged.

Giving the Laval affair added weight as a sentiment disturber was the suggestion that the Axis resources for a spring offensive would be materially strengthened in the event the new Vichy regime permitted the Nazis to take over the French fleet.

A long list of stocks reached new lows, included were United States Steel, Bethlehem, Republic, Crucible, Youngstown Sheet, Boeing, Douglas, Anaconda, Kennecott, Westinghouse, New York Central, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway and South Puerto Rico Sugar.

Down a point or more were American Can, Chrysler, Sears-Roebuck, Harvester, Eastman, Philip Morris, duPont, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line and American Sugar.

Lower in a heavy curb were Lake Shore Mines, American Cyanamid, American Gas & Electric, Glen Alden Coal and Sherwin-Williams. Dealings here were around 103,000 shares, against 56,000 yesterday.

Color Lacking As Roosevelt Misses Game

in the pregame ceremonies and they were over 17 minutes before game time. In place of the usual "Hail to the Chief." by the Army Band when the President rolls in, the Army musicians played "God Bless America" when Vice President Wallace and party made an entrance by motorcade. They caught the Yankees napping by striking up the national anthem when standing near home plate, and at the flag-raising ceremonies in center field played "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

The big five leading the march to the flagpole were District Commissioners John Russell Young, Guy Mason and Brig. Gen. Charles W. Kutz, with William Harridge, president of the American League and Grimth, Managers Bucky Harris and Joe McCarthy were next in line followed by the teams marching as units. "Swanee River" by the Army Band made a hit with the fans on the march back.

It must have been obvious to the early arrivals that the President was not coming to the game. In place of the usual hundred-odd camera and newsreel men in front of the Presidential box only about 10 were standing around.

Bill Dickey apparently visioned a double play in the second inning, with Charley Keller on first, Joe Gordon at bat and only one out. Bill did not even bother to remove his shin guards when he stepped into the batter's circle. He had to take them off, however, as Gordon drew a walk, saving Dickey a rap.

H. A. Neff, a Manor Country Club golfer, saw the opening game for the thirty-first consecutive year. He hasn't missed since 1911.

Briarley Nine Rallies, Trips N. T. S., 14 to 6

Briarley Military Academy nine took its second straight victory of the season over National Training School yesterday, a 14-6 decision won as the result of late scoring on the losers' lot.

Featuring the late-inning drive was Artie Reed's home run in the eighth inning with a mate on base. In addition, the hard-hitting centerfielder accounted for two doubles and a single in six times at bat.

O'Brien, outfielder and pitcher for N. T. S., also pounded out a homer, a four-run affair which gave the hosts a 4-4 tie in the fourth frame.

Despite the use of four pitchers by their foe, the Cadets amassed 15 hits while their pair of hurlers, Lodge and Cordua, limited N. T. S. to six safeties.

Two Dusek Brothers in Mat Prelims

The supporting card for tomorrow night's wrestling show at Riverside Stadium featuring Lieut. Jack Dempsey as referee of the title bout between Sandor Szabo, the National Wrestling Association champion, and Cowboy Luttrell, the wild man from Texas, was completed yesterday.

Promoter Joe Turner announced that two of the Dusek brothers—Rough Rudy and Emil—were the latest additions to his championship show.

Rudy, who organized the notorious "Riot Squad," will be pitted against Tommy O'Toole, the Arizona Irishman, while Emil will face the Memphis "Strong Man," Milo Steinborn.

The rest of the card shows Joe Cox, the Kansas Krasher, against Pat Fraley, of California, in a semiwindup, and Maurice LaChappelle and Ace Freeman against Henry Kulkovich and Jim Austeri.

Tigers Whip V. P. I., 2 to 0

By the Associated Press

Farmville, Va., April 14.—Hampden-Sydney's baseball team defeated Virginia Tech, 2-0, here today in a pitchers' battle between Bob Mistele of the Tigers and Ed Vassar of Tech.

Mistele scattered the seven Tech hits so effectively that not a man reached third base.

Vassar held the Tigers to seven base blows, but the Bengals capitalized on Baskerville's single and an error by Rubin to score in the third inning. Hampden-Sydney counted again in the fourth on Johnson's single over second, Spryе's sacrifice, and Charlie Blanton's single.

Yanks Shut Out Nats, 7-0, in Opening Game

traceable to the three walks Hudson gave, and three Washington errors, one of them his own, didn't help the tall right-hander.

Throughout the afternoon Hudson got sensational fielding support, however, from Little Jose Gomez, Mexican rookie second baseman in the Washington infield. The busiest athlete on the field, Gomez threw out nine batters on ground balls, three of them difficult chances that drew applause from the 31,000.

Lapse Surprises

Hudson's second-inning collapse was both sudden and surprising. He had fanned the first two hitters to face him in the first inning and he struck out Joe DiMaggio in the second. Then Keller beat out a hit that Gomez barely reached, and the parade of Yankee runs soon began.

Joe Gordon drew a walk from Hudson and the Yankees filled the bases with one out, when Hudson also passed Bill Dickey. The Yankees scored their first run inadvertently when Rookie Ed Levy, attempting to duck an inside pitch, failed to get his bat out of the way. The pitch bounced toward Mickey Vernon and while Hudson took the throw to first, Keller scored from third.

That play moved Gordon and Dickey to third and second, and Ruffing, after getting Hudson in a hole, swatted a 3-and-1 pitch into center field for a single to drive in the second and third runs of the inning.

Hudson attempted valiantly to keep the Nats in the ball game and pitched three innings of shutout ball thereafter. He allowed two hits in the interim, but nullified Gordon's infield single in the fourth by picking the Yankee off first base.

In the sixth, the Yankees scored a tainted run after Gomez retired Henrich on a fancy fielding play. DiMaggio singled to left and got an extra base when Case misplayed the ball. He moved to third on Keller's out, and Gordon scored him with a single to left.

The Yankees, in the ninth, repeated their second-inning feat of scoring three runs on two hits. Levy drew a walk at the outset and with one out Priddy moved him to third with a hit off Estalella's glove. Rizzuto bounced a pitch to Hudson, and with an easy play at the plate confronting him, Hudson gambled on a double play, but his throw to Repass was wild and everybody was safe on the pitcher's error, including Levy, who scored.

Heinrich Doubles

The Yankees got two more runs out of the inning, thanks to a Texas Leaguer double by Tommy Heinrich into left field which scored Priddy and moved Rizzuto to third whence he scored on DiMaggio's infield out.

Washington's own attack was a wash-out. They got only one man on base against Ruffing in the first seven innings. Bruce Campbell picked out a curve ball at the start of the second and swatted it into right field for a single, but he was abandoned on first base when Early took a third strike, Estalella popped up, and Repass went out with his bat on his shoulder.

Bobby Estalella inspired hope that the Nats would avert a shutout when he drew Ruffing's only walk with one out in the eighth. Repass singled cleanly to left and Estalella moved to second, but the applause for Repass was short lived. Overanxious, Repass was doubled off first base when Henrich dashed in to make a catch of Gomez's short fly to right.

Washington's third hit of the game was George Case's single to left in the ninth with one out. The Nats couldn't get him past first base, what with Spence and Vernon popping fouls to Catcher Bill Dickey. The Nats, in fact, achieved only a great deal of nothing for their day's efforts.

Gonzaga Nine Bows to W.-L.; Harlin Homers

A two-run homer by "Red" Harlin, slugging outfielder, in the ninth inning yesterday gave Washington-Lee High diamonders a 9-7 victory over Gonzaga in the Little Generals' first full game of the seasons on their home field. Last week a clash with Episcopal was called after three innings.

With no outs but with Bob Huff on second after doubling, Harlin settled the issue with a rousing drive to left field. It was his second hit in five times at the plate.

For five innings the lead shifted hands several times before the Eagles, seeking their first triumph after an earlier loss, tied the count at 7-7 with a 3-run spree in the sixth.

Billy Carroll went the distance for the losers, giving up 13 hits, walking five but striking out eight. His mates reached Ray Keblaitis and Ray Brittenbaker for 11 safeties.

Only Two Changes In Bowling Standings

Columbus, Ohio, April 14 (AP).—Joe Hunter and Matt Kowalski, of Chicago, provided the sole change among the leaders of the American Bowling Congress tournament today with a 1328 in the doubles, good for tenth place. Hunter had games of 186-216-257 for 656, while Kowalski came in on 214-233-225 for 672.

Wallace's Long Throw Amuses 31,000 Fans

last moment to substitute for F. D. Roosevelt, the capable and colorful right-handed ace from Hyde Park.

But Wallace belied his shyness in waving to the crowd and standing easily before the battery of cameramen as flash bulbs went off with blinding flashes to the incessant cry of "Just one more, Mr. Vice President." And it was that way until the end—a bitter one for Washington fans—when Wallace was whisked away in his long, black car behind a motorcycle escort.

Hassett, the lucky catcher of Wallace's pitch, explained in the dressing room after the game just how he happened to be several yards behind the other players who had crowded together scarcely 30 feet away from the Vice President, who occupied the Presidential box.

"I figured either I'd get it or I wouldn't," said Hassett, to describe his only catch of the day. He didn't play.

"I didn't see any sense in getting caught in the middle of that mob and I could tell the way he was winding up that it was going to be a long one. So there I was."

In the New York dressing room, Hassett shared attention with "Red" Ruffing, the broad-faced, friendly Yankee pitching star who had just unwound "one of the best games of my career."

In opening his nineteenth year in baseball, the 37-year-old right-hander never felt better, he said, and Bill Dickey, long his battery mate, agreed.

"He had all of his stuff," said Dickey, who is not known for his loquaciousness.

Little Celebrating

There was little postgame celebration for the Yankees. Winning games and pennants and even World Series is old stuff for Joe McCarthy's crew. They had struggled to break even during the spring exhibitions game but yesterday, well . . . yesterday it began to count.

Ruffing, who was surprised to be told that he had retired 19 straight Washington batters between Campbell's single in the second and Estalella's walk in the eighth, could not recall how many opening games he had pitched.

"You know," he said, scratching his head, "New York writers were asking me that only yesterday. They can't remember, either. Must be about eight, though."

Coach Ray Flaherty and Assistant Coach Turk Edwards of the Redskins occupied seats near the Vice President's party. Also at the game was Frank Filchock, the Redskins' great running and passing back of last year. Recently commissioned an ensign in the Navy, Filchock expects soon to be ordered to the University of Georgia, at Athens, to help condition naval fliers.

The standing crowd, lined four, five and even seven deep all around the lower grandstands, and also the congested condition of the bleachers kept down concessions sales, Calvin Griffith said. "The boys couldn't get through the crowd to make their sales after 3 o'clock," explained Griffith's adopted son who has just taken over direction of the ball-park concessions. "I won't know just what we sold of everything until tomorrow," he said, "but I do know we sold 6000 bags of peanuts.

Doing first-time duty at a ball game here were 80 auxiliary police, 40 white and 40 Negro. From the Thirteenth precinct, they replaced regular police. In command was Capt. Charles J. P. Weber.

Many fans came late, probably due to the heavy traffic, and even more left early. After the Nats' threatened eighth-inning rally died of Henrich's fine catch and throw for a double play, fans streamed down the runways. That's one time they were ahead of the Vice President.

First Favorite, Night Editor, Wins 'Gansett Purse

By the Associated Press

Pawtucket, R. I., April 14.—The first odds-on favorite of the meeting, Mrs. C. C. Winter's Night Editor won the $1200 Newport purse in an impressive fashion at Narragansett Park today.

Now 8 years old, the stakes winner went 6 furlongs in 1:11 3-5—fastest time of the meeting—while whipping Mrs. J. C. Hines' Gold Teddy by 2½ lengths.

Jockey Dan Brunelle kept Night Editor under restraint while Gold Teddy and Leading Actor came roaring out of the chute side by side. These two battled for the early lead with Leading Actor pulling away as they approached the far turn.

Around the far turn Night Editor kept widening until at the head of the stretch he had a comfortable margin. Bobby Strange found late speed in Gold Teddy, which went on to pass Leading Actor and take second by a neck. The latter was a length in front of Red Moon at the finish.

New Yorker Captures Medal at Pinehurst

Pinehurst, N. C., April 14 (AP).—Powell Crichton, jr., of Bronxville, N. Y., won the qualifying medal in the forty-second North and South amateur golf championship today with a round of 33, 38—71 over the championship course of the Pinehurst Country Club.

Federal Employes Take Bowling Crown

The National Federation of Federal Employes won the championship of the Income Tax Bowling League yesterday by defeating the Revenue Agents team all three games. The victory left the winners five games ahead of the field, assuring the title. Bob Henery with 142-363 and Jimmie Newton with 132-353 led the victors. Others in their line-up were Lefty Fuller, Capt. A. D. Sartwell and Wimpe Orme.

Better Control Of Venereal Disease Urged

While the venereal disease control situation is improving nationally, Washington still has far to go, according to the D. C. Social Hygiene Society.

Holding its bi-monthly meeting yesterday, the society heard one of its board members, Dr. Russell J. Fields, deprecate facilities at Gallinger Municipal Hospital for treatment of syphilis and gonorrhea.

From an educational standpoint the District is lagging, too, the social hygiene group held, adopting a resolution reaffirming its stand that the facts about veneral diseases should be taught in public school hygiene or biology courses.

"Venereal diseases among United States soldiers and sailors in the present war have not shown thus far anything like the alarming increase which appeared among the armed forces at the beginning of previous national emergencies," reported Ray H. Everett, executive secretary.

"Should an increase take place, the responsibility will rest on those noncooperative civilian communities where the men spend their off-duty hours," he continued.

Quoting from a national review currently published in the Journal of Social Hygiene and of which he is coauthor, Everett pointed out that 135 communities have closed prostitution districts and Federal authorities are working with local leaders to rehabilitate vice victims.

Navy Relief Drive Success Is Anticipated

The Washington citizens committee which is attempting to raise $75,000 here for the Navy Relief Society announced last night that it expected to have a "good report" on campaign results available this afternoon.

Solicitation of residents will probably come to an end on Friday, campaign officials said, but gifts from business and industrial groups and Government employes likely will be solicited until May 1.

Meantime, plans went ahead for two benefit shows, one of which will share its proceeds with the Army.

Most colorful of the two events will be the Army-Navy Relief Hollywood Caravan Show, which will appear on the Capitol Theater stage April 30, with more than 100 stars, musicians and other performers participating.

Traveling in a special eight-car train, the Caravan will make Washington its first stop on an itinerary which includes 13 other large cities. President and Mrs. Roosevelt head the list of distinguished invited guests for the show, tickets for which range in price from $1.50 to $20 and may be secured at the Capitol.

The second benefit on tap is the annual spring frolic of Lodge 32, American Federation of Government Employes, civil service committee, which will include a style show and dance in the Shoreham Hotel on Saturday night, May 2. Total receipts from the affair will go to the Navy Relief Society.

Gowns and models for the style show, beginning at 9 p. m., will be furnished by Erlebacher's, Inc. The dance will follow the style show at 11 p. m. and continue until 1 a. m.

"That's not Bataan!"

That's the expression WJSV's Arthur Godfrey hopes to make as popular an expression of disapproval for the things American people shouldn't do in wartime as the Englishman's "That's not cricket!"

Such a thing as going for a long Sunday automobile ride when the gas could be better used in an Army tank; slamming on the brakes and burning up rubber, when it's so precious these days; hoarding sugar, when it's so vitally needed for the making of alcohol for explosives.

The expression came about the day after the War Department announced our tragic defeat at Bataan. Arthur was on the air with his "Victory Begins at Home," explaining how heedless people are hindering the war effort. He summed up several such instances and then started out to say ironically, "That's not cricket, my friends!"

And then it occurred to him that maybe the point would be a lot more forceful to Americans, in view of the news of the day, if he changed the well-known English expression somewhat. "That's not only not cricket, my friends," he continued; "that's not Bataan!"

It seemed like such an effective way to bring home to the careless their lack of effort while weary heroes were giving their last ounce of strength—and their lives—that he's decided to use it from now on whenever he runs into such examples.

And he hopes you will, too.

Contract Bridge

Problems are always fancied by masters, who sometimes are accused of creating problems where none exist. Today we offer two problems concerning bidding.

1. Sitting South as dealer, you hold these cards:

♠ K J 10 7
♡ A Q 10 6
◇ K 10 9
♣ A Q

What is your opening bid?

2. Sitting South, you hold these cards:

♡ K 10 8
◇ K 7 10
♣ A Q 10 8 3

The bidding has gone:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	?

What call do you make?

Answer to Quiz

1. Many players would open this hand with one no trump rather than one spade or one heart. If South mentions either or both of his major suits he may stop the adversary from opening a spade or a heart, although a spade or heart opening lead is desirable. South also risks having his partner play a no-trump contract, which would be unwise, as the hand with the tenaces should be declarer at no trump. Unless North can bid a major, it may be easier to try for nine tricks at no trump than for ten tricks at a major-suit game contract.

2. South's best strategy is to say two no trump rather than bid his clubs. This is another hand which plays better if led up to rather than through.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — BY MILTON CANIFF

HEY, NORMANDIE, M'GAL, WHAT'S THIS TALK ABOUT YOU AND MERRILY MOVING ON?
YOU'RE LIKE A CAGED LION, PAT! YOU'RE NOT USED TO PLAYING GUARDIAN TO A COUPLE OF USELESS FEMALES WHILE THERE'S SCRAPPING GOING ON!
YOU'RE A FUNNY LITTLE GUY, NORMANDIE!... WHY DO YOU THINK ANY MAN FIGHTS—IF IT ISN'T TO PROTECT SOMETHING OR SOMEONE HE LOVES?
...BUT YOU'RE NOT FIGHTING...YOU HAVE TO STAY HERE AND WATCH OVER US—WHILE NIP-NIP IS OUT DOING SOMETHING AGAINST THE JAPS...AT LEAST, I HOPE THAT'S WHAT HE'S UP TO...
YOU'RE A LITTLE BIT OFF THE BEAM, BABY!
THEN WHY DO YOU SIT AND STARE?... I CAN'T HELP THINKING YOU RESENT MERRILY AND ME BEING IN YOUR WAY!
MERRILY, MY SMALL FRIEND, HERE'S SOME ADVICE!..WHEN YOU START GOING WITH BOYS—LEARN TO TELL THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN A GUY WHO'S ITCHING FOR A FIGHT—AND ONE WHO'S TRYING TO REMEMBER WHAT THE BOOK SAID ABOUT BEING A GENTLEMAN AROUND ANOTHER MAN'S WIFE!

HOW LONG HAVE YOU BEEN WORKING HERE, BENNY?
SINCE NOVEMBER! YOU SEE, I CADDIED FOR MR. HALL OVER AT THE EVERGREEN GOLF CLUB ALL LAST SUMMER—HE'S THE BIG SHOT OF THIS FIRM, YOU KNOW—THE PRESIDENT!
HE TOOK A LIKING TO YOU AND GAVE YOU A JOB HERE, EH?
YEAH—BUT WITH THE UNDERSTANDIN' THAT I'LL STILL CADDY FOR HIM WHENEVER HE HAS A BIG MONEY MATCH ON—HE SAYS I BRING HIM LUCK!
NO NAPS! WE'RE GOING TO LICK THOSE JAPS!
WELL, I DON'T IMAGINE HE'LL HAVE MUCH TIME TO PLAY THIS SUMMER!
OH, HE'LL PLAY, MICKEY! MAYBE NOT AS OFTEN AS HE USTA—BUT HE'LL PLAY! HE'S A REAL GOLF NUT—I'LL TELL YOU MORE ABOUT HIM LATER!
THIS IS MR. RIGNEY'S OFFICE, MICKEY!—AND THAT'S HIM AT THE BIG DESK!
OKAY, BENNY! THANKS!

DIXIE DUGAN — The President! — BY J. P. McEVOY and H J. STRIEBEL

HOW WOULD YOU LIKE SOME PANCAKES FOR YOUR BREAKFAST?
FINE! SWELL!
PANCAKES ARE FILLING AND WE CAN SAVE ON EGGS AND BACON. GOOD STUFF!
THESE ARE FINE, BUT WHAT AM I GOING TO POUR ON 'EM? GOT ANYTHING?
MY STARS! MOLASSES, MAPLE SYRUP, HONEY, APPLE BUTTER—AND YOU TALK ABOUT SAVING!

Chin Up — BY FRANK MARTINEK

WHERE ARE YOU SENDING THEM?
TO WASHINGTON, D.C.
DO YOU KNOW A STAMP COLLECTOR THERE?
I CERTAINLY DO! AND SO DO YOU!
YOU COULDN'T MEAN THE PRESIDENT!
SURE! HAVEN'T YOU READ IN THE PAPERS HOW HE LIKES TO COLLECT OLD STAMPS? WELL—I'LL MAKE HIM A PRESENT OF THESE!
CHANCES ARE HE'LL NEVER GET THEM! HE'S GOT TOO MANY BIG THINGS ON HIS MIND AT THE MOMENT!

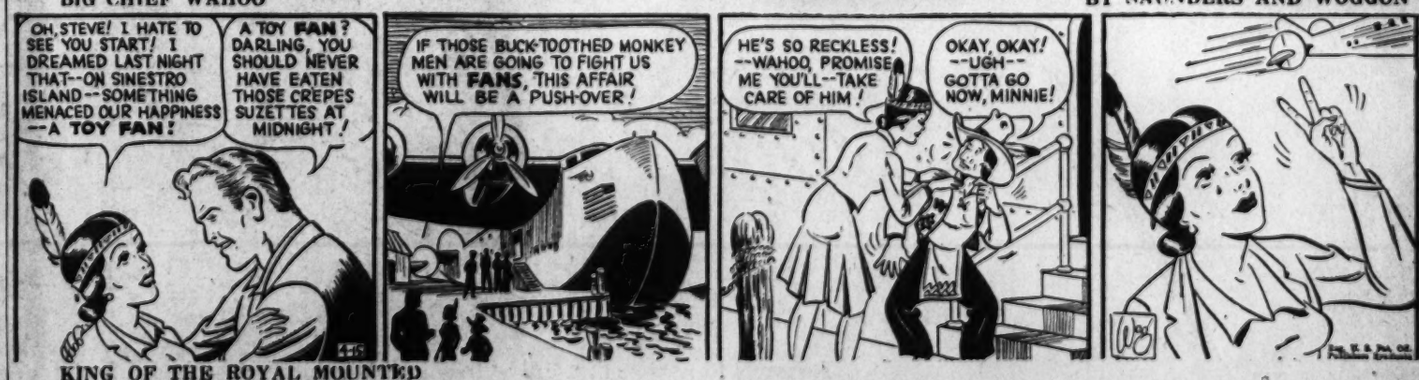
DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON

I'VE INJECTED THE SERUM AND THESE ICE PACKS MUST BE CHANGED EVERY HALF HOUR—UNDERSTAND?
OH, YES, DOCTOR
GETTING THEIR TEMPERATURE UNDER CONTROL—THAT'S THE VITAL PROBLEM
AND THE CHANCE OF THAT? DO—DO YOU THINK—??
YOU SEE, DOCTOR, NURSES COLBY AND GAYE—ER—HAVE A PERSONAL INTEREST IN THESE CASES
HM... I UNDERSTAND, WYKES
WELL, NOW CHEER UP, GIRLS. SURE—THERE'S ALWAYS A CHANCE.

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON



OH, STEVE! I HATE TO SEE YOU START! I DREAMED LAST NIGHT THAT--ON SINESTRO ISLAND--SOMETHING MENACED OUR HAPPINESS--A TOY FAN!
A TOY FAN? DARLING, YOU SHOULD NEVER HAVE EATEN THOSE CREPES SUZETTES AT MIDNIGHT!
IF THOSE BUCK-TOOTHED MONKEY MEN ARE GOING TO FIGHT US WITH FANS, THIS AFFAIR WILL BE A PUSH-OVER!
HE'S SO RECKLESS! --WAHOO, PROMISE ME YOU'LL--TAKE CARE OF HIM!
OKAY, OKAY! --UGH-- GOTTA GO NOW, MINNIE!
